EASTER A CHRISTMAS RIVAL

THE MERCHANTS RECEIVE A REVIVAL OF THE DECEMBER SHOPPING.

Clouds in the Morning Kept the Women Buyers at Home, but When the Sun Shone in the Afternoon They Thronged the Stores.

Petticoat lane and its southern extension on Main street to Twelfth street was busier, more crowded and noiser yesterday afternoon than it has been since the day before Christmas. And when the dealers in things that women wear and eat and carry checked up account books last night they found that the day's trade had broken all records. Easter, 1908, arrived two weeks later than in 1907, and came this year after what people in the East called a financial panic. But in spite of this, the dealers in women's things all declared last night that their stores did more business yesterday than on the corresponding day last year.

What makes this all the more remarkable is that the morning trade was not as good as it might have been because many clouds foretold rain. But as soon as the sun came out at 2 o'clock each street car that stopped at Petticoat lane left a larger load of women passengers. Then began the troubles of the crossing patrolaman and the floorwalker. The "jay" waiters with their arms full of packages lined up in close formation at the curbstones, and inside the stores the gossips who don't respect other persons' haste made the crowding in the aisles more annoying.

A RUSH TO THE FLORISTS.

Most of the shoppers, though, more than made up in hurry all the delay that Merry Widow hats caused. Then, after their purchases were made they visited the soda fountains and the florists' shops.

"There were more flowers and at fairer prices than any time before for eight years," one florist said. "And I can tell you that the demand was just as good as the supply."

The managers of some of the largest department stores—the Jones, Berheimer, Peck, Taylor, Mitchell, Emery, Bird, Thayer and Fowler dry goods companies—all told the same stories of crowded stores, a rush of customers as soon as the sun came out and a total at the end of the day much higher than that of the day before Easter last year.

The answer that J. Logan Jones gave to an inquiry about the day's trade is typical.

AN INCREASE OVER LAST YEAR.

"The man at the Main street door of the store said the crowd was by far the largest this year," Mr. Jones said. "The managers of the various departments reported remarkably heavy sales and a great increase over last year. Last Saturday showed a gain of 70 per cent in our business over the same day of the year before and to-day was a far bigger day for us than last Saturday."

C. C. Peters, superintendent of the Emery, Bird, Thayer Dry Goods company, F. B. Heath, vice president of the George B. Peck company; Gustave Bernheimer and Frederick M. Lee, advertising manager of the John Taylor company, had all said Friday afternoon that the Easter trade this year would reach larger proportions than that of the year before, and all of them found that yesterday's trade "vindicated" them and brought the totals as high or higher than they had expected.

J. M. Robinson of the Robinson Shoe company, said that his store had had the best trade of the year—better than Christmas trade—and at 6 o'clock had sold more goods than at 10 o'clock of the day before Easter last year.

ADOLPHUS BUSCH IN TOWN.

California Praised by the Brewer, Who Has Been Sojourning in Pasadena.

Adolphus Busch, the millionaire brewer of St. Louis, passed through Kansas City last night in his private car Adolphus, on the way to St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Busch and several friends have spent four months at Mr. Busch's winter home in Pasadena, Cal.

Mr. Busch believes the Pacific coast will soon become the most important section of the country.

"California is going to be the greatest state in the union in ten years," he said. "That's the grandest country, it's the prettiest place, why, why—" and he paused because he could find no more words just then to express his opinions.

"Do you know," he added, "California can produce all the wine consumed in this country, it can supply all the hops, all the barley. And it has good roads; that's the thing. California will be the winter resort of the continent in a few years. They know how to build roads out there. And they're learning more about it every day. In a short while there will be a magnificent drive all the way from Los Angeles to San Francisco. Los Angeles has already voted to issue bonds for 2 million dollars to be used to build good roads."

In Mr. Busch's party were Fritz Witman of St. Louis, Julius Bachman of Kansas City, Mrs. Nellie Magnus of Chicago and her daughter, Aimee; Carl Conrad of St. Louis, Otto Koenig of Milwaukee and Mrs. Busch. The Busch car left for St. Louis at 9 o'clock over the Chicago & Alton railroad.

TOO LATE TO HURT HIM THEN.

A Runaway Boy Says He Didn't Begin to Smoke Until He Was 5.

Harry Kersey of Quincy, Ill., who says he is 16 years old, but does not appear to be more than 10, was "picked up" by probation officers as a runaway yesterday. He rolled a cigarette on the way to the detention building, smoked it and when he reached there began at once to roll another. J. K. Ellwood, a probation officer, stopped him.

"You mustn't smoke in here," he said.

"Naw, they never hurt me. You see, I didn't begin smoking till I was 5 years old."

TEMPLE OF HEALTH.

The Most Remarkable Institution of Healing in America.

The Temple of Health, at Twelfth and Washington, is one of the most notable institutions of healing in the world to-day, and Kansas City has good reason to be proud of it. Since its beginning more than 100,000 persons have been treated there for the various ailments and deformities that come to human beings. The place is a veritable treasure house of life histories, the records of those who came wrecked in body and almost hopeless, but who went away again whole and happy. Write for illustrated magazine. The weather forecast from Washington last night confirmed the Kansas City forecast for fair weather to-day and added a prediction of fair weather for to-morrow. For Kansas the prediction is for partly cloudy weather to-day and there is a possibility that some of the clouds may reach Kansas City, but not enough to hide the sun. The weather will continue fair in Oklahoma and Nebraska, but rain is predicted for Texas and Arkansas.

THE COMMISSION FORM WON.

Victory for the Freshmen in a Debate at the Kansas City Law School.

Advocates of the commission form of city government won in the annual debate between the freshmen and junior classes of the Kansas City School of Law last night. The freshmen had the affirmative of the question, "Resolved that the commission form of government is preferable to the present aldermanic system."

In his final argument for the freshmen, William Jachems refuted the plea for the aldermanic system by saying that at nearly every election in the last century one ward, or perchance two, had lost elections for the logical candidates and therey defeated the best aims of representative government.

"When a commission is elected, it is impossible for one ward to select a man whose vote will be against the best interests of not only his own constituents, but those of the city at large," he said. "Just because our forefathers established the present system is not a logical reason why we of a more advanced age should not change to the better form."

The freshmen debaters were William Jachems, G. W. Miller and J. G. Bryant. The juniors were J. R. Ford, E. J. Fleming and M. L. Driscoll.

The victory last night gives the freshmen the championship of the school. They defeated the senior debating team several weeks ago.

LALLY WAS INNOCENT, HE SAYS.

A Detective in the Seneca Case Convinced That He Didn't Kill Jordan.

James Lally, who was burned to death in the Nemaha county jail at Seneca, Kas., yesterday morning was guiltless of the murder of Herbert Jordan, in the opinion of John Haldeman, a Kansas City detective, who worked on the case.

"I went to Seneca and Havensville to investigate the murder of Jordan," Haldeman said last night. "For fifteen days I devoted my entire time to the case. I called on many persons who knew both men, and it is my belief that Lally would have been acquitted. In fact, I believe he could have established a good alibi, and could have proved a good reputation. Many reputable citizens in Havensville, near which town he lived, and in Seneca believed he was innocent. It is a question whether Lally knew Jordan at sight."

Herbert Jordan was shot down in the streets of Seneca the night of February 14. The slayer fled. No motive for the crime has ever been shown, but circumstances appeared to justify Lally's arrest. Lally was found yesterday morning lying in his cell with the clothing burned from his body. His bunk was burning and the supposition is that it was set afire by an oil heater, either by accident or design.

WON'T PAY A LENDER'S CLAIM.

City Auditor Kent Opposes the Practice of Selling Salaries.

D. V. Kent, city auditor, refused yesterday to issue a warrant for $220.79 in favor of the Kansas City Loan and Security company, which had bought a city employee's "time" for that amount. The money to pay the claim was appropriated by the council Friday night.

For eight years Mr. Kent has been opposing the practice of city employees selling their salaries to loan agencies. Through his efforts an ordinance was passed discharging any employee who sold his "time" and giving the auditor power to refuse to honor the transaction. The supreme court passed on the ordinance and held that the city could not prevent the sale of earned salary, but it could prohibit the sale of unearned salary.

"I don't know whether this claim represents any unearned salary," Mr. Kent said. "But whether it does or not it won't be paid while I am in office."

CONVENTION HALL ELECTION.

A Committee Selected to Place Thirteen Stockholders in Nomination.

The annual election of directors of Convention hall will be held at the hall Tuesday, May 5. A committee has been selected to place in nomination thirteen stockholders, who will be voted upon. The members of the nominating committee are: Charles Campbell, chairman; Fred S. Doggett, vice chairman; C. W. Armour, William Barton, D. J. Dean, F. A. Faxon, J. C. Fennell, Hal Gaylord, J. J. Heim, J. Logan Jones, W. E. Kirkpatrick, Eugene Rust, A. F. Seested, E. F. Swinney, A. E. Stilwell.

RATS ATE THE GREENBACKS.

A Trunk Proved a Poor Bank for This Wisconsin Laborer.

WASHBURN, WIS., April 18.—Joe Perro, a laborer, who for years has been depositing his savings in an old trunk instead of trusting the banks, yesterday discovered that his money, consisting of some $600 in bills, had been chewed to pieces by rats, which made a nest of the remnants. Perro was about to use the money in taking a trip to Canada.

F. J. Means "Held Up" for $3.

As F. J. Means, a car inspector, of 1223 Cleveland avenue, Kansas City, Kas., was walking north on Thirteenth street near Georgia avenue about 9 o'clock last night, two white men robbed him of $3. One of the men pointed a revolver at Means while the other took the money. The police were given a description of the men.

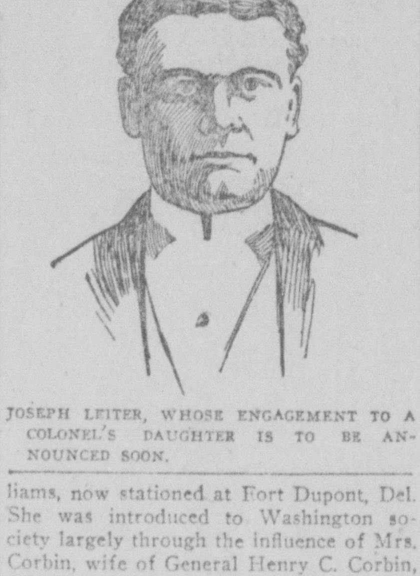
ARMY BRIDE FOR A LEITER

WASHINGTON SOCIETY IS INTERESTED IN A NEW ROMANCE.

The Announcement of the Young Millionaire's Engagement to a Colonel's Daughter Is Expected in a Few Days.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The latest romance of Washington society concerns Joseph Leiter and Miss Juliette Williams, the daughter of an army officer. They are said to be engaged, and the announcement is expected within the coming week.



JOSEPH LEITER, WHOSE ENGAGEMENT TO A COLONEL'S DAUGHTER IS TO BE ANNOUNCED SOON.

Mr. Leiter has spent this winter in Washington. Miss Williams is the daughter of Lieutenant Colonel John B. Williams, now stationed at Fort Dupont, Del. She was introduced to Washington society largely through the influence of Mrs. Corbin, wife of General Henry C. Corbin, who became acquainted with her in Manila. With her mother and younger sisters, Miss Williams has an apartment in a fashionable apartment house.

ABRUZZI CROWDED HIM OUT.

Until the recent visit to Washington of the Duke of the Abruzzi, Mr. Leiter was very attentive to Miss Katherine Elkins. Since then his wooing of Miss Williams leaves nothing to be desired in the way of ardor or persistence. The announcement of their engagement has been expected for several days. Mr. Leiter has had a formidable rival in a naval officer who is very popular, but has no fortune.

That Mrs. Leiter favors her son's suit is evident, although she has not showered upon Miss Williams the attentions she has shown Miss Elkins. Last autumn Mr. Leiter established several hunts and took daily exercise on a nearby Virginia farm to enable him to join the cross country riders of the Orange County hunt, of which Miss Elkins is one of the two girl members. Mrs. Leiter is said to have informed one of her confidants that to win the young West Virginia girl as her daughter-in-law she would settle 3 million dollars on the bride, give the young people the use of her Dupont Circle house, and bequeath to her daughter-in-law the famous ruby tiara and necklace that even in London society are regarded as perticularly choice jewels.

TO BE A SHORT ENGAGEMENT.

According to the gossip of clubs and drawing rooms the engagement will be a short one. The honeymoon will be abroad with presentation at the court of St. James and a taste of the London season under the guidance of the Countess of Suffolk as its most brilliant and alluring features. Mrs. Leiter, in view of her son's prospective marriage, has abandoned her intention of going abroad for the summer.

NO DANGER TO VEGETATION.

The Week's Weather Forecast Promises More Rains for This Section.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The weather bureau to-day issued the following general forecast for the week beginning April 19:

Seasonable temperature will continue from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic coast. There are no present indications of temperature that will injure vegetation. In the Gulf states and lower Mississippi valley the excessive rains of the past week will give way to a period of more settled weather. Heavy rains are likely to occur in the Ohio valley.

For the states of the Missouri, extreme upper Mississippi and Red river and of the north valleys where little or no rain has fallen, a season of showery weather will be inaugurated by the middle of the week.

In the Middle and North Atlantic states the week will open with rain that will be followed by rapidly alternating periods of showers and fair weather generally in middle and northern sections from the Mississippi river to the Atlantic coast.

ANOTHER ILLINOIS "DRY" VOTE.

The Prohibitionists Hope to Gain Five More Counties Tuesday.

CHICAGO, April 18.—For the second time within two weeks the question of abolishing the saloon will be a political issue in Illinois at the city and village elections scheduled for Tuesday. Some forty of the minor municipalities of the state will be affected by the vote, the principal towns being Cairo, Nashville, Effingham, Pinckneyville and Altamont, all in the southern section of the state.

The elections of April 7 increased the number of counties held as anti-saloon territory to thirty-five, and leaders of the Anti-Saloon league hope to add five to this list April 21.

MRS. LANGTRY ACTING AGAIN.

A London Audience Was Pleased by a Broad French Comedy.

LONDON, April 18.—Mrs. Lily Langtry reappeared on the stage to-night at the Haymarket theater in a new play by Sydney Grundy called "A Fearful Joy," which is an adaptation of a very broad French comedy by Arthur Bourchier. The author's daughter, Miss Lily Grundy, and Allen Ainsworth were the principal supporters of Mrs. Langtry, who displayed several rich gowns and acted well. The play pleased the audience immensely.

A SPEECH BROUGHT HIS DEATH.

Heart Disease Killed a Joplin Man as He Finished Defending Another.

JOPLIN, MO., April 18.—E. H. Borton, a stock broker, 50 years old, died suddenly to-night at a Commercial club meeting called for the purpose of discussing the welfare of the public schools. Borton's death resulted from heart trouble, immediately following an earnest address in defense of Superintendent Wert.

SAGAN IS, SAGAN IS NOT.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Gaston G. Netter, Prince Helie de Sagan's closest friend in America, denied positively to-night that the prince and Mme. Gould were already married when they came to this country, as reported by the Cri De Paris and cabled to New York.

"The statement is absurd," said Mr. Netter. "They have not been married and will not be until June or July. As to the report that they were wedded in Germany, that alone is enough to convince anybody who knows French law that there cannot be anything to it.

"Why, if the marriage took place in Germany, Mme. Gould would not be received in France as the Princess De Sagan. The marriage would not be regarded as binding in any sense. Prince Helie will not be a German subject until after the death of his father. The estate of Sagan is in Germany, but until the prince takes possession of it and swears allegiance to the German emperor he will remain a subject of France.

"As such it would be necessary to obtain what amounts to a license in this country three weeks in advance and to have other formalities according to French regulations. The prince knows all that and after having remained a bachelor for fifty years he is the last man in the world to take part in a secret marriage, such as is reported."

OREGON TURNED FULTON DOWN.

Henry M. Cake Won the Republican Nomination for Senator.

PORTLAND, ORE., April 18.—Yesterday's primaries resulted in the nomination for United States senator on the Republican ticket of Henry M. Cake of Portland by more than 3,000 majority over United States Senator Charles W. Fulton, and on the Democratic ticket of Governor George E. Chamberlain, whose nomination was uncontested. Both successful candidates favor Oregon's present law for the nomination of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

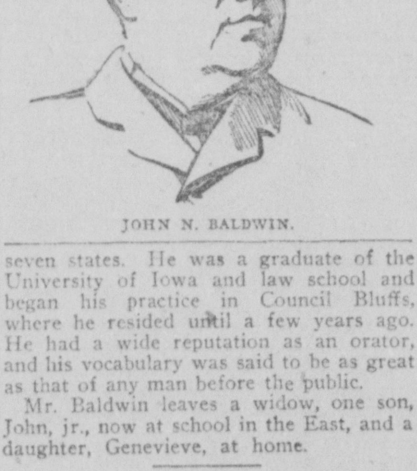
If Governor Chamberlain is as successful in next June's election in overcoming this state's normal Republican majority as he was when he was elected governor two years ago, the members of the next legislature, which probably will be Republican by a large majority, will find themselves obliged to elect a Democrat to the United States Senate if the primary law is observed.

JOHN N. BALDWIN IS DEAD.

A Long Illness Ended With the Union Pacific Attorney's Death.

OMAHA, April 18.—Following an illness which has covered the greater part of two years, John N. Baldwin, general solicitor of the Union Pacific railroad, died at midnight to-night. The immediate cause of death was peritonitis, but he had been a sufferer from Bright's disease, which was the principal cause of his illness. He had been unable to give much of his time to official duties for several months, but had been in bed only ten days.

Mr. Baldwin was one of the most widely known corporation lawyers in the country. He had been in the employ of the Union Pacific legal department for twenty-nine years, rising step by step until two years ago he was made general solicitor for the entire system with jurisdiction in seven states. He was a graduate of the University of Iowa and law school and began his practice in Council Bluffs, where he resided until a few years ago. He had a wide reputation as an orator, and his vocabulary was said to be as great as that of any man before the public.



JOHN N. BALDWIN.

Mr. Baldwin leaves a widow, one son, John, jr., now at school in the East, and a daughter, Genevieve, at home.

John N. Baldwin was appointed general solicitor of the Union Pacific January 10, 1906, to succeed W. R. Kelly who resigned because of ill health. Before becoming general solicitor for the road Mr. Baldwin was general counsel for the Union Pacific in Nebraska. He had many friends in Kansas City.

A $175,000 FIRE IN CHICAGO.

Bed and Furniture Manufacturers Lose by Spontaneous Combustion.

CHICAGO, April 18.—A loss of $175,000 was occasioned by a fire which attacked a four-story brick building at 7 West Erie street this evening. The structure was almost destroyed, the chief loss falling on the occupants, the Simmons Manufacturing company, manufacturers of beds and mattresses, and McAnsh & Dwyer, furniture manufacturers.

The blaze broke out in the quarters of the latter concern and is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion in the varnish room.

A MARYLAND PUBLIC WHIPPING.

Thirty Lashes for a Negro Who Beat His Wife.

DENTON, MD., April 18.—For the first time in the history of Caroline county a man was whipped by the sheriff to-day, pursuant of a court sentence for wife beating. He was Charles Wilson, a negro, and he was given thirty lashes on his bare back with a carriage whip, a regulation cat-o'-nine-tails not being available.

A BANKER-LAWYER GOLF GAME.

The Attorneys Defeated in a Match Yesterday at the Country Club.

Twelve bankers played a match game of golf with an equal number of lawyers at the Country club yesterday. The bankers, headed by J. F. Downing, president of the New England National bank, defeated the lawyers, led by Judge J. E. Goodrich.

A FLYER BY A WOMAN OF 70

LOANS FOR $450,000 ARRANGED ON A STORY OF A RICH COUSIN.

Mrs. Hunt-Henry-Hoover Deceived Bankers and Realty Dealers With Weird Tales of Wealth in California—Bought a House and Furniture.

A woman of 70 years, refined in manner and conversation, has kept bankers and real estate dealers of Kansas City busy the last few weeks. Among her many achievements of high finance she arranged to buy mortgage securities worth $450,000, bought a $5,300 residence and $800 worth of furniture. And she did it all on a story of a rich cousin in Los Angeles. He was on the way here with a valise containing the money to pay for it all. Until yesterday she was in the city waiting for the handbag of riches. Now she's gone and the men from whom she arranged to borrow and buy, the men who gave her motor car rides to inspect property—are wondering.

Mrs. Mary L. Hunt, Mrs. Mary L. Henry and Mrs. J. M. Hoover—these were the names she used. The first banker she called on was J. L. Lombard, president of the Corn Belt bank. She requested to inspect some securities in which she desired to invest. Some good mortgages she wanted. She told Mr. Lombard that her money was in a safe deposit vault in Los Angeles.

SHE TELEGRAPHED FOR THE MONEY.

The visitor was shown some investments, taken in a motor car to see the properties securing them and finally selected loans to the value of about $200,000.

"I have telegraphed to my cousin in Los Angeles to bring the money," she told Mr. Lombard, "and he'll be here in two or three days."

A few days later she returned and told Mr. Lombard that her cousin's wife had been killed in a motor car accident in Denver and that there would be some delay in getting the money. Also she was going East with the body, she said. She then disappeared for two weeks. These negotiations she carried on under the name of Mrs. J. M. Hoover.

During the time she was supposed to be accompanying the body of her cousin's wife East, Mrs. Hoover, under the name of Mary L. Hunt, was negotiating for the purchase of other high class securities from the Pioneer Trust company. She told the same story of the Los Angeles safe deposit box and signed applications for the purchase of ¼ million dollar's worth of real estate mortgages.

MORE HARD LUCK FOR THE COUSIN.

"My cousin is coming with the money," she told W. S. Woods, head of the trust company's real estate department. "He's on his way to New York and I have wired him to bring my money with him."

But disaster again awaited the cousin when he reached Denver. This time his wife ate oysters and died of ptomaine poisoning.

The papers were ready to sign, but Mrs. Hunt had to drop everything and go to the funeral.

About the same time the woman visited officers of the Traders' bank and the New England National with similar stories.

A RELATIVE OF COLT, TOO.

"I have frequently passed through Kansas City," she told the bankers, "and have been greatly impressed with its possibilities. I think moreover, that the Missouri law is much more favorable to investors than anywhere else. If I can get my money in good, gilt edged securities here in Kansas City I would make my home here."

It was this same idea that she gave to the J. B. Welsh Realty company. "I have purchased about half a million dollars' worth of securities through the Pioneer Trust company," she told Mr. Welsh, "and am looking for a good residence property. My daughter married a son of Samuel P. Colt, president of the American Rubber company, and lives in New York. I have a son in California and Kansas City will make a good half way station for me."

Mr. Welsh showed her various properties he had for sale and she finally selected a two-story stone house at 2615 Chestnut street. The price was $5,300. There was a mortgage on the property, and this didn't suit Mrs. Hunt-Hoover-Henry at all.

SHE WANTED A CLEAR TITLE.

"The mortgage has some time to run and the mortgagee wants to hold it," Mr. Welsh told her.

"I don't want it on there," declared Mrs. Henry.

So Mr. Welsh obligingly paid a premium of $30 to have it taken up. He also paid $15 to have the title examined for her.

"My cousin is on his way from Los Angeles with my money," she told him. "I will give you a check on the First National bank of Los Angeles, but I will ask you to hold it for a day or two until he gets here. Then I will pay you in currency. In the meantime I would like the keys to the house so I can measure for the carpets."

THE RICH COUSIN AGAIN.

Mrs. Hunt then visited the Robert S. Keith Furniture company and selected about $800 worth of house furnishings.

"I have just purchased a house from the J. B. Welsh Realty company," she told Irvine W. Biggar, treasurer of the company. "If you will call him up he will guarantee the purchase until my money arrives from Los Angeles. My cousin is bringing it. I have decided to withdraw my investments there and have invested in Kansas City securities through the Pioneer Trust company and other banks."

GAVE THE HOUSE TO THE LANDLORD.

The woman, who was known as Mrs. Hunt to C. S. McCoy and his sisters, with whom she boarded at 1213 Cherry street, then broke some very good news to her landlord.

"You have been very good to me," she said, "and I owe you six weeks' board. I have just purchased a new house and I want you to move into it and occupy it. I shall be away a good deal visiting in New York and Los Angeles and I will ask you to make your home there with your sisters."

The proposition was agreed to and the family moved to 2615 Chestnut street Friday. Before they moved Mrs. Hunt said: "I have bought about $1,000 worth of new furniture from Keith's. You won't need the furniture you have here. Why not sell it?" That was also agreed to and the furniture was sold.

BUT THE FURNITURE DIDN'T COME.

When the McCoys and Mrs. Hunt reached the new home the furniture from Keith's had not arrived. So Mrs. Hunt hurried down to see about it, first borrowing car fare from the McCoys.

"We are sorry," Mr. Biggar told Mrs. Hunt, "but we can't deliver that amount of goods without payment. Mr. Welsh, whom we called up, declines to guarantee it."

"But my cousin is on his way with my money and I really can't do anything until he gets here. He had important business in St. Louis and couldn't stop here, but he left there for Kansas City last night."

When it was pointed out to her that he had had time to arrive she explained that he was coming by the way of Springfield.

The furniture was not sent, however, and Saturday morning Mrs. Henry hurried to the Pioneer Trust company.

WANTED $800 IN A HURRY.

"I must have $800 at once," she told W. S. Woods. "My cousin has not arrived and I am a little short. Will you cash my check on the First National of Los Angeles?"

"I can't do it," said Mr. Woods. "I am sorry, but the best I can do is to put through a draft for you. You should get the money in three days at most."

Mrs. Henry agreed and signed a draft on the Los Angeles bank for $3,000. "I'll probably need that much before my cousin arrives," she explained.

She returned to the house at 2613 Chestnut very cheerful. "Everything all right now," she told the McCoys who were there awaiting the arrival of the furniture. "The goods will be right up. All a mistake that they didn't come yesterday. I have decided that I don't like that mantel in the parlor and have ordered a new one from the Calhoun mantel & Tile Co." Workmen came during the day and put in the new mantel.

A NEW MANTEL FOR THE PARLOR.

"I did the work on Mrs. Hunt's order," J. C. Calhoun said last night. "She told me she had bought the house and everything seemed all right. I made her an allowance for the old mantel and took it away."

The furniture hadn't come by noon yesterday and Mrs. Hunt began to get restless. "I think I'll run down town again," she said. "We can't get along over Sunday without furniture in the house."

So Mrs. Hunt-Henry-Hoover borrowed car fare again and went away. She has not been seen since.

"I don't know what her game was," Mr. McCoy said last night. "She came to us six weeks ago and engaged a room. She told many stories of her wealth, but she neglected to bring a trunk with her. Later she said her trunk was in quarantine. She told us about investing these large sums in Kansas City securities, about owning great tracts of valuable timber land in California, about her son's great mining properties in Mexico and about her daughter being married to a millionaire. Just the same she never paid her board and kept borrowing small sums for car fare.

KNEW A LOT ABOUT REALTY.

"At one time she wanted me to go to California and sell her lands for her, and offered me a big commission. When she got to talking about buying a home she seemed very much in earnest and very businesslike. She apparently knew a great deal about real estate. Her offer to us to take care of her property seemed fair and we accepted. The house was bought three weeks ago, and as she took possession of it on the day she said the papers were to be signed, we could have no suspicion that everything was not right. When her cousin didn't come and the furniture didn't come and she told so many conflicting stories about their not coming we, of course, began to wonder. Since she left at noon we have learned much, and I can only wonder that she had the nerve to carry it all through."

"Among the stories she told us," said George W. Taylor, credit man for the Keith Furniture company, "was that she had been robbed in the Union depot of a purse containing $243, which was all the money she had with her. She also told us of the motor car accident that delayed her cousin's arrival, but there were many variations.

FORGOT THE NAME OF THE BANK.

"I couldn't get out of her the name of the bank that did her business in Los Angeles. She said she had forgotten it. She said she never was much for remembering names. She had a slip of paper on which was written various large sums which she said were the amounts of certificates of deposit she had in the bank, but this was all I ever saw."

Mrs. Hunt stayed at the Densmore hotel for about a week some time in January. She refused to pay her bill there, alleging that a valuable fur muff had been stolen from her room. It was soon after this that she went to the McCoys on Cherry street.

Mrs. Hunt is short, with grayish hair, dresses well and shows in her manner and speech evidences of education and refinement.

BRYAN BUSY IN NEW YORK.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., April 18.—After a long swing across the Empire state to-day on a trip that recalled the campaigns of eight and twelve years ago, William J. Bryan reached here to-night and after a lecture at the Empire theater held a conference with Bird S. Coler, president of the borough of Brooklyn. Mr. Bryan's day was filled with incidents which were regarded by many politicians who gathered here to-night to confer with him as forecasting political events of moment in the coming presidential campaign in New York state.

Mr. Bryan left Rochester, N. Y., early to-day, but before he left he held a conference with Peter Keefe, state committeeman of the Independence league, the nature of which was not disclosed. On the way here Mr. Bryan left the train at Albany, where he was the guest of Comptroller Martin H. Glynn at luncheon, after which he left for this city. He carefully refrained throughout the day from giving expression to any opinions on state or national issues. He also declined to make any comment in regard to the recent Democratic state convention in New York. It was understood, however, that he was made acquainted with the actions taken at the state convention by Mr. Coler who, with other delegates from Kings county, were placed on the permanent roll of the convention instead of the McCarren delegation.

While Mr. Bryan would make no statement concerning the political outlook in New York state, Mr. Coler, after a conference with the presidential Democratic candidate, said:

JOHNSON TALKS OF BRYAN

WHAT THE NEBRASKAN SAYS WILL NOT AFFECT THE GOVERNOR.

The Minnesota Man Was Given a Splendid Ovation by the Swedish-Americans of Lindsborg, Kas.—The Reign of Law.

LINDSBORG, KAS., April 18.—In an interview before his speech here to-day, Governor Johnson of Minnesota said:

"What Mr. Bryan says or does will make no difference and cause no change in my plans. I am not seeking the nomination for President, and I might say that I don't care whether I get it. As I have often reiterated, I will be a candidate in case the people decide that I am the most available candidate and can get the most votes.

"I have been told by some of Mr. Bryan's friends that I would be a stronger candidate than he. I am inclined to doubt that."

GREETED WITH WAVING HANDKERCHIEFS.

They have a pretty custom here in Lindsborg when a visitor of prominence visits a festival gathering. It is the waving of handkerchiefs. It was thus Governor John A. Johnson was welcomed this afternoon by an audience of several thousand as he entered the auditorium. Every person in the assemblage arose to his feet and from the hand of every man, woman and child there fluttered the bit of white.

It is no unusual sight to see handkerchiefs waved here and there in large gatherings, but when they are fluttering by the hundreds and thousands in unison it makes a picture hard to describe. This was being done while Governor Johnson, accompanied by the Rev. Alfred Bergin and President Ernst Pihlblad of Bethany college walked down the aisle to the stage.

THE APPLAUSE LASTED A MINUTE.

As he was introduced to the audience, however, those gathered there became more demonstrative. The applause lasted fully a minute as the speaker stood smiling his appreciation. Just as he was about to begin his address the applause started afresh and continued fully as long, if not longer, than it did at first. It was the reception from an audience not in any sense political, but from one which might be termed semi-religious.

It was for this reason, perhaps, that Governor Johnson appeared a bit disconcerted at first, but it was not many minutes before he regained his complete composure and was talking with a rapid fire velocity that kept his hearers intent from start to finish.

In his short introduction of Governor Johnson, Dr. Bergin referred to the bond of friendship that had existed between Governor Johnson and himself when he (Bergin) lived in Cambridge, Minn.

SPOKE OF DR. SWENSSON.

"I have always desired to visit Lindsborg," said Governor Johnson. "I have for many years heard of Dr. Olson and, furthermore, it has been my desire to visit the place upon which Dr. Swensson has left his mark. In Minnesota we have the same class of institution in the Gustavus Adolphus college. In that institution I have taken a great interest, and I am going to do all I can for the upbuilding of the Swedish-Americans in every state in the Union. I am proud to have been a descendant of those people who have come from that northern peninsula, for there are no people who have done more for good citizenship than these people of which you and I are a part.

"I assume that every person in this spacious building is a Democrat or a Republican and I should guess that about 99½ per cent are not Democrats. But be that as it may, I know that primarily every one of you is an American citizen. I have learned that you who live in this fertile valley have given to the American people the idea that it pays to abide by the constitutional government, first of all by regarding the supremacy of the law. For years it was regarded by many that the respect for the law was not necessary. Now that is changed, for it is understood that the observance of law is necessary.

LAWS OBEYED IN MINNESOTA.

"In my state we have two large cities. The law is observed there now, and it is recognized that law is necessary in order that society may be protected within itself and by itself. The giant does not need the law for his protection. The weak need the law. It is the man who is at the mercy of the commercial giants that needs and demands the protection of the law thrown about him.

"It is a splendid thing that you never have had a murder in this community. It is a grand thing, also, that you have so little use for your criminal courts and your jails. No man ever profited by the violation of the law. No man ever committed a crime against his state that it didn't work to his ill. The world believes that the criminal pays the penalty of his misdeeds, but he doesn't begin to pay the penalty. It's the prisoner's near and dear ones who pay the cost. If I had my way I would purify the hearts of every young man and young woman and lead them to higher citizenship."

Speaking of the legislative, judicial and executive power, Governor Johnson said that, while it was assumed that they all had equal powers, yet he considered that the legislature was the most powerful, for its mandates came direct from the people.

LAW BREAKING IS ANARCHY.

"What shall be said," he said, "of a mayor or a governor who sets aside the law and thereby violates his oath of office? If a public official does this I am one of those who believe that we are beginning to travel the road toward anarchy."

Governor Johnson touched upon the birth of the nation. He graphically described the trials and tribulations of the men of the Revolution in their fight for freedom.

"To-day," he said, "there are those who for the purpose of expediency favor a new federalism in order that the country may take a more prominent place among the nations of the world. I say that if we stick to the traditions of 1776 the world will respect this nation. When we took Hawaii and the Philippines we were told that those people were not fit for self government. That has been the cry for years and years, not because it is true, but because those who are in power want more power. I do not speak of any officer or any particular person, but we have apparently come to a time when the constitution is not good enough.

"The immortal Washington, in referring to the constitution, said that it could be changed from time to time if the people wished it, but I say that so long as it is not changed by the people it should be observed as it stands. Within the last six months a United States marshal laid violent hands upon the attorney general of my state and said that he must come into his court for doing that which the legislature had commanded him to do. And the federal court approved the marshal's action. I say that such a proceeding is not right; it's a reflection of the policy of the centralization of power that takes from you and me our state's rights.

BACK TO THE CONSTITUTION.

"It used to be said that the American people should turn their faces to the West. I believe that the people should turn their faces to the East and demand that those in authority should ascertain what are the constitutional forms of government.

"During the great strike in Minnesota among the miners I went to the place of the trouble between the employer and the employed. It is not my intention to tell you of any part I played in that trouble, but I do want to tell you of a Finn that came to me. He said that he didn't like the laws of our country. I told him that that didn't make any difference as the laws of our country and its government were better, far better than that from which he had come and better than any other government on earth. He said that he knew that, but that so long as the laws were in force he would try and observe them, but that in the meantime he would do all in his power to change them.

"The Finn was right. The constitution and the laws should be observed until the people change them. A governor may say that he doesn't like this or that law, but he should say 'I'll enforce it as it is the people's law.'"

THE CAPITALIZATION OF RAILROADS.

Governor Johnson branched into the great capitalization of the railroads. He explained that there was nothing wrong in this if there was an honest capitalization. He said, however, that the people were paying about 6 per cent on from one, two or three times the actual value of the roads.

"No doubt," he said, "these problems will eventually be worked out but not until the conscience of the people has been thoroughly aroused."

Governor Johnson closed with a splendid peroration in appealing to the people to look for higher ideals. Many times in his address Governor Johnson was interrupted by violent applause. His most telling points seemed to be when he advocated the non-centralization of federal power and the policy of more states' rights. His references to the Swedish Americans and their love for law and the country were also given generous receptions.

After the meeting Governor Johnson visited the Bethany college athletic field where the annual meet took place. To-night he attended the festival where a portion of "The Messiah" was sung. He left for Kansas City at midnight.

TAFT TALKS TO PUBLISHERS.

A Moral Awakening Which He Finds Is Due to the Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Secretary William H. Taft was entertained at dinner at the Waldorf Astoria to-night by the Sphynx club, whose guests also included several men widely known in the publishing world. These guests in turn entertained the 400 members of the club who are either magazine publishers or advertising managers.

The guests' share of the entertainment fell chiefly upon Secretary Taft, who discussed at some length the history of the publication business and the development of the modern magazine. To present day editors the Secretary paid some very pretty compliments when he pointed out that the moral awakening of the people could be traced generally to an honest and outspoken press.

Though unfortunate conditions existed at times, the Secretary said, the progress toward better things was uninterrupted and that the public pulse was quickened with a moral throb.

A BARTENDER USED A HATCHET.

Charles O'Neil and Thomas Brady, laborers, were driven from a saloon at 418 Main street about 11:30 o'clock last night by the bartender, who beat them with a hatchet. They applied at the emergency hospital for treatment and Dr. Ford B. Rogers dressed several cuts on their heads. The bartender locked the saloon and left before the police arrived.

TO ENTERTAIN TULSA MEN.

A Delegation of 200 on the Way to Washington to Be Here Thursday.

A delegation of 200 business men of Tulsa, Ok., on the way to Washington will be in Kansas City next Thursday. While in Kansas City the party will be entertained by the Manufacturers' and Merchants' association and the Elks.

A Letter From Alderman J. F. Eaton.

R. L. Gregory, president-elect of the upper house, received a letter yesterday from Alderman John F. Eaton, who is in San Antonio, Tex. Mr. Eaton says that his health will not permit him to return to Kansas City before May 1. Mr. Eaton went to San Antonio two months ago to improve his health.

The Mucilage Pot—Did you hear of the accident to Mr. Ink? He fell and spilled himself all over the desk blotter.

The Feather Duster—So he said. Didn't like it at first, but after awhile, he said he was quite taken up with it.

THE MINERS' LEADER HERE

The Conferees to Meet To-Morrow and a Speedy Settlement Is Expected—A Two-Year Contract Is Favored by Other Districts.

"Here I am and here I stay until the differences between the miners and coal operators in the Southewestern district are settled—and that won't be long, either."

A man of medium size, dressed in a black suit, wearing a black slouch hat and smoking a briar pipe, made the foregoing remark as he registered at the Coates house last night. The name he wrote on the register was "Tom L. Lewis, president United Mine Workers of America."

Mr. Lewis is the successor of John Mitchell as leader of the United Mine Workers. He was elected in February of this year, after serving the organization nine years as its vice president.

Mr. Lewis came direct from Toledo, where he effected a settlement on the 1907 basis on a two-year contract between miners and operators in what is known as the central competitive district, composed of the western half of Pennsylvania Ohio and Indiana. The mines in the central district will reopen Monday.

TO VOTE ON A TWO-YEAR CONTRACT.

The recent national convention of the United Mine Workers in Indianapolis had a clause in its adopted policy providing that no new contracts shall be made at less than the rates of 1907 and the contract shall be for no longer period than one year. Representative miners of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana by an overwhelming majority would have agreed to a two-year contract, but had no authority to do so on account of the action of the national convention. In order to comply with the action of that convention the proposition of a two-year contract has been submitted to the entire membership of the organization for approval with a recommendation that it be accepted.

"Will there be a settlement along similar lines in this territory?" was asked.

"I am not prepared to say what terms will be agreed upon. I have just arrived and must familiarize myself with the conditions here. I am certain of one thing, however, there will be a settlement. I feel sure it will not be necessary for me to remain longer than a few days."

CONFERENCE ELECTS OFFICERS.

Now that the operators and miners have reduced the joint conference committee to six district members and an equal number of district officers on each side it is expected they will speedily arrive at a settlement of the differences. The presence of Mr. Lewis is certain to have a good effect.

The conference yesterday afternoon adjourned after the election of officers until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. George Colville, a miner, was chosen chairman of the subcommittee and William Newcum, an operator, secretary. The miners chose these members of the subcommittee in addition to the district officers: George Brittan and John Morgan, District No. 21; W. H. McClusky and Martin Banahan, District No. 14; George Frame and James Mooney, District No. 25.

Mr. Lewis will take part in the conference to-morrow.

STRIKES' COST ¼ MILLION.

Miners Would Have Profited by Arbitration, an Operator Says.

In a statement yesterday, James Elliott, president of the Southwestern Coal Operators' association, said that arbitration would have saved money to both miners and operators. The statement says:

"Within the last year, trivial disputes have cost the miners and operators more than a quarter of a million dollars. None of the three most costly walkouts would have taken place had arbitration been arranged for.

"By far the greater losses have fallen on the miners. So useless has been this loss that we feel the miners will consent to arbitration if some plan for an arbitration board equitable to both sides can be hit upon.

"In one strike four Arkansas mines were involved. The miners walked out because the company owning the mine refused to employ a miner who had not worked for the company for six months. Four hundred men making an average of $4.38 a day lost ten days' work or a total of $17,500. The company lost the profit on 14,000 tons of coal, interest on the investment and the wages of other employees kept idle by the strike.

"The miners went back to work after acceding to the position of the company, but a loss of $21,000 was sustained by both sides. Had the miners won, one of them would have received $25.60. A Kansas strike over the refusal of an operator to pay an employee $1.12 cost fifty men drawing an average wage of $4.29 a day ten days' work, or a total of $2,145. The company lost about $400. In this case, arbitration would have sustained the miners.

"A strike which cost the miners six weeks' work, or a total of $77,220, and the operators about $15,000, took place in the Kansas fields over the brand of powder to be used in the mines. The companies acceded to the demands of the miners in order to prevent further loss to the men and themselves. But nearly $100,000 had been lost which arbitration would have saved."

DRUMMERS NOT JOLLY ALWAYS.

A Hotel Clerk Tells of Moments When the Traveling Man Is Peevish.

"The jolly commercial traveler doesn't live up to his reputation," a clerk at a down town hotel remarked yesterday. "He may be good natured and all that when he's with his customers trying to sell something, but around the hotel he's the most excitable, impatient man on the books.

"For instance, he asks for a certain letter from his houise when he arrives. It contains his salary check perhaps. We give him all the letters we have to look over and if he doesn't find the letter he's looking for he concludes that we are holding it out. If he fails to get a telephone message he blames everybody in the house. I've seen him prance around the lobby for an hour fretting over some express package that hasn't arrived and which he swears should have arrived three days before. Nope—not all drummers are jolly all of the time."

FUNERAL OF A RIVER VICTIM.

Services for Mrs. Jennie Fisher, Who Was Drowned in the Missouri.

Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Fisher, who was drowned in the Missouri river two weeks ago when a motor boat capsized near the Hannibal bridge, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Freeman & Marshall's undertaking rooms. Burial will be in Elmwood cemetery. The body of Mrs. Fisher was found yesterday in the river at the foot of Holmes street.

USE HORSE SENSE, HE SAYS.

Many Opportunities in Kansas City for Investing $1,000.

To The Star: Your $1,000 cash man is not the only pebble on the beach that realizes that money, or the lack of it, is always associated with trouble of some kind. No man can make money with money, except he take some chance, and generally speaking large fortunes are made by taking the risk of loss accompanying such investments. Some say invest in a home and get a wife, others say invest in real estate, others say invest in city or county bonds or railroad bonds. The latter surely is the safest, but the increase is surely slow.

Politicians have surely destroyed the profitable feature of railroad investments; the getting a wife is good advice providing the selection is good. But there is more or less chance in every suggestion.

But the young man who has saved from his salary $1,000 or more ought to have horse sense enough to invest in a city like this and invest it profitably.

I could name a hundred different articles that could be manufactured here with profit, but space will not permit. Think it out for yourselves. But never forget that the dollar without judgment is a curse rather than a blessing.

TRIED.

PUT THAT $1,000 IN REALTY.

There's No Better Investment in Kansas City, Writes I. B. M.

To The Star: The chief problem in this discussion is to get the $1,000. Where one is concerned with the investment of $1,000, many are deeply concerned with how to obtain that amount, and to that larger class of people, I will say that there is no better way than to invest in Kansas City realty. Take care of your small earnings. Invest your first $10 in a suburban lot. You can turn to the real estate advertisements in The Star and obtain your choice of additions, and locations in which $5 or even $2.50 will make the monthly payments on the lot. Buy one or more, you'll be surprised to note how quickly your savings will increase to $1,000. Actual experience has demonstrated to me that a portion of salary devoted to this end will bring the best possible results.

Now, what is to be done with the $1,000? Why not continue to invest it where you made it? Of course, you can now proceed on a large scale and you will be rewarded with larger returns. I do not agree with your correspondent, "F. P. B." that all depends on the wife, though, I am pleased to admit that very much depends on her. I know this from actual experience, but the husband must do his share. In this great growing city it is "up to him" to participate in the natural increase incidental to this growth by judicious investment in real estate. Many a lot bought for a few dollars has as a direct result of this growth sold for several thousand dollars. Don't forget that this growth is still in progress. It is exceedingly fortunate for the man with $1,000 to reside in a live city like this where every dollar can be invested with perfect safety and a reasonable assurance of an abundant increase in value. In my opinion another good place to put your money is in first mortgages on realty. But by all means, invest, put your money to work. There is nothing so utterly worthless and cowardly as an idle dollar. I. B. M.

A Widow With $1,000 Asks Advice.

To The Star: The man with $1,000 has lots of chances which he can afford to take, but how is it with a woman? Here am I, a widow, living in my own home, with just $1,000 out on interest. It is not enough to keep me and I am afraid to invest for fear I will lose it. Now, if you can help the man with $1,000, please be generous enough to give some advice to a woman who is too proud to turn her home into a rooming house and who has never worked. What is she to do?

A READER OF THE STAR.

Here's $1,000 Advice in a Nutshell.

To The Star: To the young man of $1,000—Take the advice of a young lady. Buy a lot in Grandview for $200 and build a 4-room cottage for $600. Furnish house with $100 and keep the other $100 for reserve. Get a wife or rent the house. Keep out of debt and you will always be successful.

KANSAS.

IN MEMORY OF MAJOR ROLLINS.

A Dinner Last Night by the Alumni of Missouri University.

Alumni of the Missouri university observed Founders' day last night with a dinner at the University club. It commemorated the birth anniversary of Major James S. Rollins, who in 1838 introduced the first bill in the Missouri legislature in behalf of the university. N. T. Gentry, assistant attorney general, who made the principal speech, exhibited the original draft of the bill written by Major Rollins with a quill pen. Mr. Gentry gave an interesting history of the life of Major Rollins, especially his long and active work for the school at Columbia.

At the request of J. V. C. Karnes, president of the local association of alumni, T. T. Crittenden, jr., mayor-elect, acted as toastmaster. The list of speakers included John T. Bottom of Denver; Hiram Philips of St. Louis; J. B. Kimbrell, Prof. E. D. Phillips, and Cliff Langsdale all of Kansas City. About seventy-five were present at the dinner.

COAST ATHLETES WILL COMPETE

Leland Stanford Will Send a Team to Chicago Conference Meet June 6.

CHICAGO, April 18.—The managing committee of the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic association received a telegram from the athletic authorities of Leland Stanford, Jr., university to-day, stating that ten or twelve athletes will be sent here to represent the Pacific coast school in the annual track and field games of the association June 6. The news was especially gratifying to the association managers, who will now endeavor to persuade the University of Pennsylvania and Cornell university to accept the invitations to compete sent to them several days ago. The one-mile relay race is to be made a special feature of this year's contests, and it is thought that the Eastern schools may decide to send their fast quartets here for the event.

Champion Bark Peeler.

From the Duluth Evening Herald.

CRYSTAL FALLS, MICH.—With the hauling of loads of logs of unprecedently large proportions, and the sawing of prodigious amounts of timber in a given length of time, Upper Michigan has laid claim to a number of new records achieved in the lumbering industry in the past few months. Now still another championship is pre-empted. The man turning out 302 posts in one day, Thomas Garney of Sagola, Dickinson county, is believed to be the premier bark peeler of the Lake Superior country.

WAS A GOOD TAFT WEEK

THE SECRETARY NOW HAS 231 INSTRUCTED DELEGATES.

All the Other Candidates Combined Cannot Muster That Many, and They Appear to Have Reached Their Limit.

Instructed for Hughes	40
Instructed for Knox	64
Instructed for LaFollette	25
Instructed for Fairbanks	30

Total elected	546
Total in convention	980
Necessary to choice	491

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Outside the state of Ohio Secretary Taft has 201 delegates instructed for him and not contested. To date not one of the candidates opposed to him has an instructed delegate outside his home state.

The favorite son states had numerous conventions last week, and as a result the favorite sons got enough delegates to give the combination more instructed delegates than had at that time been received by Mr. Taft. But just as soon as the favorite son states had held their conventions the slump in votes for favorite son candidates indicated a complete rout. This week fifty-six delegates were elected to the Republican national convention. Twenty-eight were instructed for Mr. Taft, twelve were committed to him by prefernce resolutions, leaving sixteen to be divided among all the candidates.

MORE THAN ALL THE OTHERS.

More delegates are now instructed for Mr. Taft than for all other candidates.

For the first time in the campaign accurate tables must carry a column of "preference resolutions." Massachusetts has introduced the innovation. Massachusetts could not instruct for Mr. Taft without lacerating the face of Murray Crane, who had said a long time ago that no instructions would be given in his state. Accordingly the Massachusetts districts are adopting resolutions declaring that Mr. Taft is the choice of the people of the state for President. To all intents and purposes these resolutions are instructions, but the Taft opposition has shown such a disposition to fight out the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee that it is just as well to be entirely accurate.

Secretary Taft's press bureau to-night claimed 278 delegates instructed and pledged. These figures are thirty-five in excess of the actual number of delegates instructed and pledged as shown in the table compiled in the office of The Star. The difference is due to the fact that eight delegates in Tennessee in The Star's table are put down as contested. The Taft management says that these votes should be counted for Taft, because Oliver, who instituted the contests, has declared that no matter how the contests may result the delegates will be for the Secretary of War.

Other votes counted by the Taft management and credited to Taft, in The Star's table are in the uninstructed column. These are delegates who have either publicly announced their preference for Taft or have written committing themselves to his candidacy.

CONVENTIONS OF THE WEEK.

Delegations friendly to Secretary Taft, but otherwise uninstructed and unpledged, were elected in Hawaii and in the Second and Third Massachusetts districts this week. Governor Hughes added the Thirtieth and Fortieth New York to his list of delegates and Speaker Cannon the Thirteenth Illinois. Uninstructed delegates were chosen by the Seventh Louisiana (irregular) and the Sixth South Carolina districts.

Minnesota finished up the work begun last week in the Fifth district and every one of the eighteen district delegates and the four delegates-at-large is now instructed for the War Secretary. The other additions to Mr. Taft's strength this week come from the Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Tenth and Fourteenth Massachusetts; Second and Eleventh Michigan; Sixteenth Missouri, First and Sixth Maryland.

Conventions scheduled for next week are the Eighth Alabama, Third Florida, Second and Third Georgia, First and Second Louisiana, Twelfth and Thirteenth Massachusetts, Nevada, six delegates-at-large, New Hampshire state and First and Second districts; Kentucky state, Thirteenth Ohio, and Second West Virginia.

INDORSE TAFT IN MASSACHUSETTS.

AYER, MASS., April 18.—L. C. Carlton and George H. Doty, the latter chairman of the Massachusetts Republican state committee, were to-day elected as delegates to the national Republican convention at Chicago from the Fourth Massachusetts district. The delegaes are uninstructed, although a resolution was adopted favoring the nomination of Secretary Taft.

TWO UNINSTRUCTED IN NEW YORK.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 18.—The Republicans of the Twenty-first congressional district, in convention here to-day, elected Louis F. Payn of Columbia and Robert H. Hunter of Duchess, delegates to the national convention. They are uninstructed.

Another Crime Prevented.

From the Pawnee (Ill.) Herald.

Last Sunday evening a young lady and her brother arrived home from church, in the east part of town, and about fifteen minutes after, on looking out of the window of a dark room, discovered some person walking back and forth in front of the house. The rest of the family were aroused, and watching him found that he was coming toward the house. He walked up to the window of the lighted room and looked in. The father and brother went out, recognized the scoundrel and called him by name, but took pity on his empty head and did not shoot, but ran him a block away. Let it never occur again or the shot will fly.

URGED CAUTION ON SCHNECK

LETTERS THAT MRS. STEWART WROTE THE SUSPECTED KANSAN.

The Prisoner, Who Is Accused of Wife Murder, Told That He Must Be Careful Not to Give Anything Away.

OTTAWA, KAS., April 18.—District court adjourned at 2:20 o'clock this afternoon to allow the jurors in the Schneck murder case to reach their homes. Court will again convene at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. Judge Smart cautioned the jurors against talking of the case with anyone, and against reading any newspaper accounts.

The finish of the first week of the murder trial of Frank Schneck was interesting. The reading of Mollie Stewart's letters to Schneck was heard with many grins by the crowd in the courtroom, but the jury sat with serious faces. It appeared that the jury considered the evidence no laughing matter. Schneck grinned foolishly as he saw the letters over the shoulders of his attorneys, to whom they were passed for identification.

Members of the Schneck family, to whom reference was frequently made in the letters, were embarrassed.

WROTE OF HOG STEALING CHARGE.

The letters deal principally with the charge of hog stealing with which Mrs. Stewart's husband was then charged, for which he was being held in the Lawrence jail. But Mrs. Stewart makes it plain that the disposition of this charge is a necessary move in the defense of the murder case.

"If they convict Ed, you will go up for life," she says, and she proceeds repeatedly to outline the evidence which is to be given in the hog cases.

Schneck's letters were equally full of affection, but were more guarded in any reference to the murder charge.

Turning from her open discussion of the charges, and the serious menace offered by them, Mrs. Stewart in later letters expresses the fear that the letters are being opened, and in these letters she ridicules the charges of crime, in a manner that might admit of the interpretation that the letters had been written for the officers to read.

MRS. STEWART'S FIRST LETTER.

On March 21 Mrs. Stewart wrote the first letter which she gave to young Tipton, the prison trusty, to be delivered to Schneck. She says:

Tuesday Morning—Dearest One—I will write you a few lines again this morning. I am so afraid that my letters may work you up to say something that will make them think you have news from the outside. Now dear, don't do that, let things rest easy for a few days, until the lawyer comes back and let him stir into them. I have paid this man for defending you. Now, pet, don't stand back; let him earn his money. He charged me $50. I paid him part before he came to see you, the very first time he charged me fifty for Ed, so you see where I am at. Babe, we are in an awful fix. I am afraid I am going to lose both of you.

There is one thing sure, that is, if they find Ed guilty on his charge, they will find you guilty of murder in the first degree. It is like I said. Now, pet, if they make it seem that if you stole those hogs, you killed her to keep her from telling on you. I have been to Centropolis to see Rhoda. She did not ask me in. I saw Samp and talked with him. He is so still I could not find out much. I went up to the house and looked at the windows and doors and I want to tell you they did not try to carry out their threats to tar and feather me as they said they would. There was quite a crowd stood across the street and watched me but no one said a word. I would not go up there if I could not go prepared to take care of myself. Do you know, pet, that you are jointly charged with Ed? The papers read both your names like this—that on or about the first of January E. S. and F. S. did enter and carry away hogs belonging to one B. K. Sut. Now Ed is not alone charged but it is the same warrant that will be read to you. Now if they bind Ed over to district court, then your trial for murder will come up while Ed is bound over and his evidence will not be admitted, for he will be charged with a crime and he can't testify for you. See the point?

TELLS HIM TO BE "GAME."

Pet, this may all seem strange to you, but I am not here just doing nothing, you know that. I am doing all I can and going to do and then, dear, if you are convicted there is just one thing I ask, that is you take it like a man, don't ever break down and tell a thing to any living person on earth, never. I have told Ed the same thing. I never want one to turn state's evidence, whatever comes, for that would get all our witnesses in a pretty mess. I look to be arrested when I step off the train at Lawrence. I am expecting that and have notified my mother so she can see after the children. We are all three in together, pet, and let us stay that way if our boat swims or if it sinks. I will be found the true steel clear through. Ed will never own to anything. I think you will stand fire as well as he can or as well as I can.

They would turn Ed loose if he would swear you was not here that Sunday night. Ed will go to the pen first. He will never swear to that. Now, dear, you see how he stands by you and you do the same by him. Now I know you are true as can be, but for God's sake look out for these letters. They would be fatal to all of us and this boy, too. Frank, stand by him with your life if need be and so will I. He has been a priceless jewel to me. Don't say a word to Cody or the attorney or anyone to excite their suspicions.

There is no use talking to a lawyer or anyone that lives here. They would not hurt the feeling of their home people for here is where they get their votes. Now that is why I got a man out of town. This fellow knows Rich. He is going to phone me at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. They want to put Ed's trial off again. I don't know if they will or not.

WARNED ABOUT THE LETTERS.

Dear one, take care of the letters. I do not want to see them in print in the Herald. I went to Goodin and told him about that warrant and had him to come to see you. O pet, I can tell you lots of things when I see you again. I will write more after while.

In her letter of March 18, Mrs. Stewart continues to outline the evidence to be given in the hog case. She says in beginning:

Sweetheart: I do not know if you got what I wrote you or not. If you did you may begin to understand the place you are in. Do not be fooled by what Cody tells you; he is not your friend, pet; he only wants the reward for convicting you, and that he is working for with all his might. He has tried to coax Ed to say you wasn't here on that awful night. Then he threatened Ed, then he tried to hire him, but old Ed is standing pat and there is where he is going to stand if they keep him for a year. If Ed would say that, they would turn him loose and split the reward with him.

If he don't say it they will try to convict him and say you was connected with him in stealing and Jane knew it, and when she left you was afraid she would tell, and you made up your mind that you would have to quiet her forever. You certainly will have trial, and, pet, you will have to be careful. Now don't, for God sake, ever let a word fall to make Cody or anyone on earth think for a minute that you have heard a word from outside. We may be able to do some good and if they stop this it will be awful. Do they give you what things I bring you? I can't bring much, but I will do what little I can. Now if there is anything you want me to do or see about, let me know.

SAW A KANSAS CITY SISTER-IN-LAW.

Say, Pet, I saw that sister-in-law from Kansas City. Say, I wanted to hand her one. I can't stand to look at her. Now you think I am a fool. Could I do any good by going to see Rich? If I can I will go. Now, pet, they asked me where we went the night we had H. D.'s spring wagon. You remember he asked you if you was going up to Dr. and you said yes. Well I told them (for I knew he had that) we went to see Dr. S. but there was no one at home.

Now you be sure and tell me what to say we went for to see about because I must let Ed know what to say before trial day. Make it a point to tell me without fail for this is the most important. From your sweetheart.

Another letter, written March 18, contains a lengthy discussion of evidence to be given in the hog case. Mrs. Stewart opens the letter as follows:

March 18, 1907, Monday night—My Dear Sweetheart: Do be careful of these letters for I see you do not know of the danger you are in. Say first of all, this boy I will love him forever. He is worth his weight in gold. The six hundred is the reward that is offered for the conviction of the murderer of Jane and the children. Now pet there is not on an average one man in each hundred but what is willing to bet his life that you did it. Why, pet, they have went so far as to say they will swear (three men) in Centropolis saw me set in the buggy and hold the horse while you was in the house. They say they thought we were after some of your things. I do not know who these men are. I certainly cussed old Flora, that man that come and got the cushion. I was not at home when he come and got it or he wouldn't have got it.

HIS FATHER AGAINST HIM.

Your paw thinks Cody is alright, and he will tell him anything that you or me say. Say he says you are guilty as can be, and he says Jane phoned him to come down Saturday morning. She said her life was in danger. He said she told him you said you would kill her. Now he has told this everywhere, and people believe it. Pet, you don't know how bitter people are against you. John Lewis wanted to see you so bad but they would not let him in. Pet, I could write you for a week and not tell you half.

ODE TO THE MISSOURI.

Roll on, thou dusky, dank and yaller river, roll!
  Whoever bucks against thee, bucks in vain;
Man rules the cricks and branches; his control
  Stops at thy bank; nor dast remain
Too long upon thy bank; lest thou take toll
Of him and half his farm, and leave a hole
  Where he was lately at; and grief and pain
Be brung to his dear wife; and his poor soul
Be took, we trust, to yon bright heavenly plain
  Where catfish enter not, and gars may rage in vain.

II.

Ruthless thou rushest on, nor dost not give
  A coffer-dam for all we do or say;
Thou never wilt be led or coaxed or driv,
  Though we should rip and rear and tear all day.
Oncet Calvin Cox lived half a mile away,
  And thinking he was safe, he went and dug
A cistern; but no later than last May,
  Thou cut the sile from under, till—kerchug!
  It tumbled in and went down stream, a bobbin' like a jug.

III.

When bitin' Boreas blows his bitter blast—
  As Robert Burns has wrote (so I have read).
I have saw here and there a man who dast
  To cross thy frozen breast in sleigh or sled.
  But, Christmas come a year, my brother, Zed,
In his new slide of old white ellum logs
  Bein' by thy cam, deceitful looks misled—
Spoiled a new suit of fifteen dollar togs,

IV.

And if thy outer face is very grim and rough,
  What of thy slimy monsters down below?
What of they saw-toothed gars and catfish tough?
  (We find them worse the deeper down we go).
  A channel cat late caught by Fisher Joe,
Had a whisky flask, a pair of skates,
  A pipe, a watch, a money-purse also
In his insides: and Joe he says he hates
To let fond mothers know them skates was never mates.

IN SPITE OF DEAN KAYE.

The Dewey-Millspaugh Bridal Party Dinner Given as Planned.

TOPEKA, April 18.—The dinner arranged by Chauncey Dewey at the Topeka club to-night was given without any change, in spite of the objections of Dean Kays of Grace cathedral. With the exception of a luncheon to be given by Mrs. C. R. Thomas Monday at the Topeka Country club, this was the only prenuptial affair arranged before the marriage of Miss Elvira Millspaugh to Mr. Dewey, which will be solemnized at Grace cathedral here Monday evening.

The private dining room of the club and the reception hall adjoining were handsomely decorated in American Beauty roses, with a few Easter flowers intertwined with the large bunches of roses. An orchestra stationed in the reception room furnished music throughout the evening. The dinner was one of the most elaborate affairs Topeka has seen in a long time. It was given expressly for the bridal party.

AGAINST LIQUOR PRESCRIPTIONS

Oklahoma's Medical Profession Opposed to the Operation of Dispensaries.

EL RENO, OK., April 18.—The Canadian County Medical association has adopted resolutions concerning the state dispensary system. Liquors may be obtained from dispensaries only upon a physician's prescription that the liquor is necessary for medical purposes. In their resolutions the Canadian county physicians assert that the social status of the medical profession would be placed in jeopardy by the operation of dispensaries and that physicians would be held accountable for the property of the dispensaries. It was agreed that support of the dispensaries would be withheld by the refusal to write prescriptions for liquors under any circumstances.

WHEN A BEER DRIVER SLEEPS.

Negroes in Kansas City, Kas., Stole Seven Cases and Weren't Arrested.

A brewery wagon driver slept on his delivery wagon at Third street and Oakland avenue, Kansas City, Kas., yesterday afternoon. Several thirsty negroes improved the opportunity to steal seven full cases of beer from the wagon, and carry them away.

The police learned who the thieves were, but did not arrest them. It is not a crime to steal beer in Kansas. Under the state prohibition law beer is contraband and is not protected.

DESERTED, SHE TRIES SUICIDE.

Alleged New York Bigamist Shipped Abandoned Wife Off to Oklahoma.

LAWTON, OK., April 18.—Declaring that her husband in New York city had married again, and, in order to rid himself of her, had sent her to Oklahoma with little more money than enough for car fare, a young and pretty girl, giving her name as Mrs. Irene Byrns, attempted suicide to-day near the Frisco depot.

An Ex-Kansas Legislator Dies.

VALLEY FALLS, KAS., April 18.—William C. Butts, the first Santa Fe agent here, died this afternoon. He came here fifty-one years ago and was 76 years old. He served five terms in the legislature. The Masons will have charge of the funeral.

FOR THE LAW IS PONDEROUS

INCONSISTENCIES IN THE THEATER CASES EXPLAINED TO A LAYMAN.

A Court Frequenter Tells Why a Manager Wasn't Proved a Manager—As to the Failure of the Defendant to Testify.

"It appears to me that there are many inconsistencies in the law relative to this Sunday crusade," the layman said.

"The law is strange, ponderous and peculiar," the court frequenter, the man who "warms" the benches and listens to the argument of counsel, responded.

"Why doesn't the attorney for the state fly into the defenadant in his speech to the jury, and flay the life out of him for not testifying in his own defense?" the layman asked. "Why doesn't the state's attorney make the manager of a theater say whether or not he is the manager? You and I know he is manager, but the state's attorney doesn't prove it to the jury."

THE LAW PROTECTS THE DEFENDANT.

"Ah," the bench warmer, the "wise one," said. "You don't understand the law. The defendant doesn't have to go on the witness stand. The law protects him from that ordeal."

"But," the layman said, "his failure to go on the stand gives the state's attorney a chance to flay the life out of him and tell the jury that he was afraid to go on the stand."

"Wrong again," the "wise one" replied. "The law says the attorney for the state shall not in his speech to the jury even mention the failure of the defendant to testify."

"What's that?" the layman said indignantly. "Wasn't I in the court room the other day and didn't I hear the state's attorney say with much feeling, 'Why don't they place a witness on the stand who will deny that the defendant sold tickets in that theater on Sunday?"

HERE'S A FINE POINT.

"Ah," the "wise one" said. "You fail to discriminate. There is nothing in that about the failure of the defendant to deny his guilt on the stand!"

"Yes, but he might as well have said it."

"Your conclusion is correct. The attorney meant for the jury to arrive at the same conclusion," the "wise one" observed.

"Well, what kind of justice, or law, do you call that?"

"That, sir," the "wise one" said, with a show of superiority and great knowledge, "is where the law and its practice is strange, ponderous and peculiar. You will remember that I made that observation about the law in the beginning of this discussion."

A BOND OF $10,000 FOR GREGORY

The New Upper House President Qualifies for Office.

R. L. Gregory, president-elect of the upper house, in qualifying yesterday, filed a bond for $10,000. His sureties are Walton Holmes, Conway F. Holmes and C. S. Jobes. Mr. Gregory will be president of the board of public works and acting mayor in the mayor's absence and the charter requires a bond.

With Baylis Steele and John F. Eaton holding over the upper house will have nine Democratic members and five Republicans. The lower house also will have nine Democrats and five Republicans. The committees probably will be announced at the meeting Monday night. The committee on streets, alleys and grades, public improvements and finance are regarded as the three most important committees in each house and as usual there is lively maneuvering for places on those committees.

ACCUSED BOY WRECKERS FREE.

Insufficient Evidence to Show That Wichita Lads Derailed Train.

SALINA, KAS., April 18.—When the case against the boys suspected of placing spikes on the Missouri Pacific railroad and wrecking a train last Sunday was called in the juvenile court this morning all were released except Vivian Mayfield. After a trial which lasted nearly all day, Mayfield was released.

There was evidence to show that most of the boys arrested knew something about the matter, but not enough to justify a conviction in either case. Another boy named Archie Chapman was arrested today charged with placing spikes, stones and pieces of ties on the Missouri Pacific track this morning. The obstructions were found by section men just before the arrival of a passenger train from the West. Chapman's trial will be held in the juvenile court Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

HONORS TO ALMA, KAS., SCHOOLS

Wabaunsee County High Schools' First Annual Literary Contest.

ALMA, KAS., April 18.—The first annual literary contest and track meet of the Wabaunsee county high schools closed here to-day. The Alma schools won in the essays, oration, original stories, spelling and also won pennant in the athletic sports.

An Easter Sonnet.

I sing no blooms that blow in summer sun,
  Nor pipe of birds, enriching all the morn,
  Nor forest shades, nor meads of yellow corn,
Nor tinkling brooks that glisten where they run.
To poet kind I leave each fulsome praise
  Of bird and brook and field of golden grain,
  The gamut of old Nature's bliss and pain,
Arcadia's laud and Beauty's shining ways.
But, O, I sing the festive Easter art,
  In merry widow shape or other guise,
  That, with a thousand various tints and dyes,
Refulgence sheds o'er every foot-worn mart—

That makes those garden rare of Babylon

Latter Day Saints—Their Origin, Beliefs and Manner of Living

A Constantly Increasing Sect Whose Earnestness and Morality Are Impressive—Their Faith in Revelations and the Ability of Ministers to Effect Miraculous Cures—Polygamy Forbidden and Circumspect Living Insisted Upon—The Story of Joseph Smith, His Discovery of the Golden Plates and Their Mysterious Disappearance—The Theory Relative to the Origin of the American Indian.

IT might have been a meeting of Baptists, Methodists or any other denomination in the land so far as appearances went. It was only when you heard unfamiliar phrases like "Latter Day work," "administering—laying on hands—consecrated oil," and other words not heard in your own church that you realized you were listening to the sermon of a religion new to you, that had come into Missouri through suffering and persecution almost equal to that which forms the early history of the Christian faith.

On the rostrum were the officers of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints; the Apostles, the prophets, the evangelists, bishops, "seventies," elders, priests, teachers and deacons and the venerable, white-bearded president, Joseph Smith.

In the congregation were about the same sort of men and women that are to be seen in any church, arrayed in their best and looking comfortable and satisfied. The very latest in millinery was present in brave numbers, including even the "Crazy Widow" hat of wagon wheel proportions. It was a very prosperous, contented, earnest-seeming congregation that attended the last day's session of the world's conference of the Latter Day Saints in Independence yesterday.

A MISTAKEN IMPRESSION.

Granting, even, that you have read all about these Latter Day Saints the idea is irresisible that in their meeting you will see solemn faces and somber garb of peculiar cut. Instead you find the people and their church in no way different from any other. The same sort of pulpit is there and the pipe organ with a mirror in front of the player so that he may see the congregation. The minister gives out the number just as he does in your own church and everyone sings "Praise God, From Whom All Blessings Flow."

These were some of the things that surprised one who attended the meeting to observe yesterday. Men and women, whose appearance indicated that they were persons of consequence in business ways, told how they had found this or that denomination short of their expectations and in humility had found rest and safety in the religion of the Latter Day Saints. Some told how wives or children had suffered from almost incurable maladies; how physicians had labored in vain and how, finally, they had been "administered" by the elders and had risen and walked and gone among their friends and families, whole again.

WHILE MIRACLES WERE DISCUSSED.

It was all very wonderful to hear. Street cars were rushing past the church every few minutes. Through an open door a telephone bell could be heard ringing. Young men and women were copying in shorthand every word of the proceedings—inventions and accomplishments of modern times, while men and women were telling of miracles and revelations. On the platform were men in the offices described in the New Testament, working for a belief that they are firmly convinced was handed down to them in a marvelous way through the inspired work of one Joseph Smith, whose life began, history says, in the state of Vermont.

After the testimonial, or experience meeting, an elder held up a large bottle of olive oil, which another blessed and consecrated to a holy use, and later, in the basement of the church, mothers held out their infants to the administering officers that they might be anointed and cured of ailments. Old men who were lame, women who had been ill for weeks, prayed and bowed their heads for the precious oil in proof of their belief. It wasn't secret. Anyone might see it, anyone who professed the faith might receive the administrations of the church.

AS TO THE TERM MORMON.

Probably two-thirds of the people not informed on the subject believe that the Latter Day Saints of Independence are Mormons; that they believe in polygamy and adhere to some if not all of the terrible practices attributed to the Mormons of Utah. To this class of persons the word Mormon is associated with things that children should never hear of, massacres, mysterious disappearances, "endowment house" secrets—Brigham Young! As a plain matter of fact the Saints are nothing of the sort. They are not Mormons as the word is understood in the public mind. They use the word only in referring to the Book of Mormon and that book they read and love in conjunction with the Bible, to which they believe it is corelated.

Latter Day Saints forbid polygamy. This one thing alone it was that split the original church and sent one branch of it, led by Brigham Young, to Utah. The Saints have no secrets. The doors are open and anyone may enter and listen. The first books a visitor found in their Sunday school library yesterday afternoon was "Mormonism Exposed," and "The Utah Mormons—A Confession," describing the fearful things that this sect in Independence condemns.

MEMBERS ALL OVER THE WORLD.

It doesn't take long for the careful observer to learn that the Latter Day Saints believe in social purity honesty and fair dealing. Their converts are from all denominations and represent every English speaking nation in the world. They have members in every state and territory of the Union. There are more than 2,000 Saints in the Society islands of the Pacific, with headquarters in the island of Tahiti. They have a numerous membership in Hawaii and in New Zealand. In Independence alone there are 1,500 members of the church.

Some of the things the speaker said yesterday morning, in the last sermon of the session, were worth remembering. "'Take good heed of thyself,'" he said, quoting from the book of Joshua, eleventh verse, "'that you love the Lord, thy God.' If you do take good heed of yourself," the speaker continued, "you shall not have so much time to find fault with others. It it an easy matter to give testimony in church, but when we are at home or in our stores is the time when we should take good heed of ourselves. The best testimony is the testimony of our everyday life, the life we lead, the testimony of those with whom we have business or social relations."

THE STORY OF THE GOLD PLATES.

The doctrine of the Church of Latter Day Saints has fought hard for recognition. It is one thing to hear of such a doctrine at a distance and put upon it your own value, but it is quite another experience to hear a responsible business man, undoubtedly in full possession of his faculties, tell you how Joseph Smith, father of the Joseph Smith now president of the church in Independence and all the world, discovered the gold plates, on which was inscribed the Book of Mormon, in a mound in New York; how he translated the manuscript from some dead language into the English of to-day. That was about 1827.

"Well" you ask, "what became of the plates?"

"They vanished," the business man replies, and looks you straight in the face. Not being prepared to argue such a point you subside.

MORALITY IS INSISTED UPON.

But whether the golden plates ever really existed and vanished is not so much to the point as the fact that the religion they produced, or the original Joseph Smith taught, has given to the country a people who are good citizens insisting, first of all, that their members must live up to every law and respect and obey every legally constituted officer of government, state, county and city. You find no saloons or other vices among Latter Day Saints. Usually, it is said, they vote right or think they do, which is almost the same thing. Like Spiritualists or Christian Scientists they talk much of their religion and are zealous workers for its advancement, but they do not do it at the expense of others. If you aren't satisfied where you are they'll try to take you into their fold.

No more romantic story is told in church lore than that describing the origin of the Mormon church, for that was its name in the beginning as it is still its name in Utah. Joseph Smith, the first, they call him, was the fourth of nine children in a family. He was born in Sharon, Vt., in 1805.

BEGAN TO SEE VISIONS AT 15.

When Joseph was 10 years old his parents moved to Palmyra, N. Y. When he was 15 he began to "see visions" and stirred up no small amount of excitement among the credulous. When he was 18 years old an angel whom he called Moroni visited Joseph, he said, and told him of a book which was the history of the former inhabitants of America. This book was written upon gold leaves, the angel said, and was buried near Palmyra. It was not until 1827 that Joseph announced that he had dug up the wonderful leaves, thin sheets of metal eight inches long and seven inches wide. Now Joseph found with the gold leaves a pair of magic spectacles which he called "Urin and Thummin" and these enabled him to read and understand the manuscript.

Smith did his translating behind a curtain. He allowed no one to see the plates, the story goes, until his work was finished and then, according to records preserved by the church, he showed several of the sheets to eleven witnesses, who signed their names to a testimonial that they had beheld them. After that the plates, the Saints say, vanished. At any rate no one has seen them since.

WHAT THE BOOK OF MORMON CONTAINED.

The Book of Mormon was published in Palmyra in 1830. It purports to be the history of the occupation of the American continent. Briefly the story is that after the destruction of Babel and the confusion of tongues, America was settled by one of the peoples. Afterwards, in the Sixth century, B. C., Lehi and his sons went to South America and from them were descended the Indians. It is related, too, that after the resurrection, Christ went to America and preached to the people. At the final destruction of the civilized people, after bloody wars, God commanded the prophet Mormon to record the events and hide the record. The book of Mormon is not a doctrinal work. It is chiefly a narrative.

DESCENDENTS OF JEWS, THEY SAY.

The Saints accept the Book of Mormon as being a true record of the people who lived on this continent prior to modern history. As a matter of fact they believe that the particular race that came over were Jews, driven from Jerusalem and in support of this their archaelogists point to the racial similarity between the American Indian—the supposed descendants of these Jews—and the tribes of Asia and the natives of some South Sea islands, all of whom, they say, resemble the Jewish race in many ways, particularly as to features. The Jews never have given their opinion of this theory, however.

The world's session of the Saints just closed in Independence was attended by men and women from many parts of the world. They came from Australia and from Scandinavia, from Canada and from Southern states, from the East and from the West. They filled all the hotels in the little city and overflowed into the homes of the Independence churchmen. "It has been a wonderful session," the president, Joseph Smith said, in closing. "Now, let us go out and attend to our own business. I must speak plainly, I have no use for a tattling elder or a gossipping member. Let us mind our own business and work for the glory of the church."

Alaska Using Many Dredgers.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

TACOMA, WASH.—The greatest demand for gold dredgers in the world now comes from Alaska, and a manager of a big New York company that manufactures dredgers has come here to investigate the situation. He says more dredgers will be shipped to Alaska this summer than are now being operated in the Northern camps. Inquiries for dredgers are coming from sections of Alaska never before heard of. The largest orders naturally are coming from districts in which heavy dredging machinery is already being used.

TOM JOHNSON'S NEW CLUB

A FRANCHISE REFERENDUM GIVES HIM A WEAPON FOR LOW FARES.

The Ohio Legislature Ignored the Street Railway Lobby of Cleveland and the People Will Have a Chance to Decide Now.

The new referendum of franchises law passed by the legislature of Ohio probably will be given a test at a very early day. Its first test will likely be on a three-cent fare franchise passed in Cleveland Thursday night.

Things have been lively in street railway circles in Cleveland in the last ten days. On the day of the Kansas City election the negotiations between Mayor Johnson and the Cleveland Electric railway over the three-cent fare lease ended suddenly in a dispute about the price to be allowed for Cleveland Electric stock in fixing the annual rental. Three days later the company was back offering a compromise. Johnson referred the compromise to the city council which rejected it. A new proposition is now under consideration, but in the meantime new troubles have arisen outside.

The franchises of the Cleveland Electric on Woodland avenue, Lorain street and some of the branches expired a month ago and cars have been running by common consent. Ohio has the same consent of property owners law that has protected so many street railway steals in Missouri. A company having secured the consent of property owners to build a line claimed that consent as something permanent that could not apply to anybody except the original grantees or its successors. The company claimed a property interest in the consents.

THEY LOST A DESPERATE FIGHT.

The Schmidt bill was introduced in the Ohio legislature to change the consent law so that a new franchise could be granted or an old one extended within two years before or one year after the expiration of an existing franchise. That proposed to treat the consents once given as being given for an indefinite time, but to any company to whom the city might give the franchise, not necessarily to the original company. The real object of this was to make legal a franchise granted to the 3-cent lines on a street where a franchise held by the old company had expired or would soon expire without requiring the grantee to get a renewal of consents.

The street railways were making such a desperate fight on the bill that when an amendment was offered in the house, providing that on petition of 15 per cent of the voters of any city in which a franchise is granted the council must provide for a referendum vote, the amendment was adopted almost without debate. All the street railway companies in Ohio had lobbies working with the legislature, but when this amendment was added, Tom Johnson and his followers favoring the bill and the officers and lawyers of the Cleveland Electric opposing it, hurried to Columbus and kept up a fight that lasted until Wednesday, when Governor Harris signed the bill, referendum and all.

THE COUNCIL WITH JOHNSON.

Back to Cleveland went the warring elements. Thursday night the council met and granted franchises to the Forest City railway to build about twenty-five miles of track on streets now occupied by the Cleveland Electric with franchises recently expired. These grants must now wait until sixty days has been given for the referendum petitions. If a referendum vote is not ordered by petition in that time the Forest City railway proposes to make an offer for the old track and Johnson has given notice that if the old company refuses to sell or get out he will use the police and street forces to clear the street for the new company.

The 3-cent companies operate now on three streets with connecting transferring lines. They have recently obtained rights on Central and Quincy streets. These had been granted before the referendum law took effect. If the Cleveland Electric forces a referendum vote it will be tor the purpose of holding the streets as long as it can and making the largest possible profit.

The Woodland avenue line runs for two miles through a business territory and extends into the suburbs southeast and is a very important part of the old system.

TAFT IS FOR WATERWAYS.

The Bill of Senator Newlands Indorsed by the Secretary.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Secretary Taft has indorsed enthusiastically the bill introduced by Senator Newlands providing for the appointment of an inland waterway commission and for the improvement and development of a great scheme of inland water routes throughout the country. The approval from the War department was received to-day by Senator Frye, chairman of the committee on commerce. A number of amendments were suggested to perfect the measure.

Provisions of the bill deemed of special merit by Secretary Taft were pointed out by him. Among these is the provision for co-ordination between navigation and other uses of the waters in connection with their improvement for the promotion of commerce among states. This is recognized by the War department "as wise and necessary."

The co-operation with states, municipalities, communities, corporations and individuals, provided by the bill, is particularly commended. In this connection Secretary Taft said:

> This provision seems to be based on the constantly increasing utilization of the streams, not only for navigation, but for other purposes which has accompanied extension of settlement and increase of population. With sparse settlement largely confined along waterways there was little overlapping or conflict of interests connected with the running waters, but with the present comparatively dense population not only all uses of the streams, but all conflicting interests, must be brought into harmony in order that the waterways may be made generally beneficial.

CAVIAR FROM THE MISSOURI

HOW A KANSAS CITY MAN PROFITED BY SPOONBILL CATFISH.

The Eggs Being Similar to Those of the Sturgeon, He Bought Them for 2 Cents a Pound Here and Sold Them for 90 Cents in New York.

Right in the beginning, let it be known that this is a fish story. But it is a true one and it probably contains a few things you didn't know before. Perhaps you have eaten smoked sturgeon in a high class restaurant and paid for it at a very high price. Ten to one, that smoked sea sturgeon came right out of the Missouri river. Down there it is called spoonbill catfish. And here is another fact—this same kind of catfish is responsible for much of the so-called Russian caviar that is eaten.

The spoonbill catfish is what might be called a first cousin to the sturgeon. There are no bones in the body. A long bill protrudes over the mouth. The meat is similar to that of the sturgeon and the eggs are black. They are the eggs from which caviar is made. Only two fish produce this sort of eggs, fishermen say, sturgeon and spoonbill catfish.

THE EGGS ARE SENT TO NEW YORK.

Kansas City, St. Louis and many other river cities for a long time have been furnishing to the United States much of the caviar used. The roe is prepared and then shipped to New York city, where prices paid for it are as high as seventy-five to ninety cents a pound.

The caviar business began in Kansas City about seven years ago, when Allan F. Little, a former fisherman, came to Kansas City. One day, while walking along the river front, he saw some fishermen cleaning a catfish. The eggs so closely resembled sturgeon eggs that Little decided to ascertain if they would make good caviar. He took some of the eggs home, prepared them as caviar is prepared and tasted. He found it no different from other caviar. So he wrote to New York for prices. The firms there offered him ninety cents a pound for the article and then began the sale of fish eggs from Kansas City.

"I paid two cents a pound for the eggs here," Mr. Little said, "and at first the fishermen were glad enough to get that. But I didn't tell them what I was doing with the eggs.

USED A SPY-GLASS, TOO.

"They didn't catch on to my plan and there I was, shipping the caviar to New York and making a profit of about seventy-five cents a pound on it. But there was one difficulty. The price of two cents a pound for the eggs was not enough to induce the fishermen to hunt me up to sell me the eggs. So I used to sit on a high piece of ground near the river and, with a pair of spy-glasses, watch for fishermen. When I saw some pulling up their nets, preparatory to going home, I would get into a motor boat and chase after them. And the chase usually resulted in some more caviar at ninety cents a pound.

"Then came the day when someone put the fishermen 'wise' that eighty cents a pound was being paid in St. Louis for catfish eggs. They asked me about it. 'Foolishness,' said I, 'but I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll write to St. Louis and find out.' Well, I couldn't continue earning such a big profit and now I've given the business up."

According to Mr. Little, the spoonbill catfish, in the Missouri river, was a despised fish until about ten years ago. Then someone discovered it closely resembled the sturgeon and its popularity began. The fish houses tried smoking it and found that the smoked spoonbill differed little from smoked sturgeon.

MANY IN THE BUSINESS NOW.

Since it has become more generally known that spoonbill catfish eggs are adaptable for making caviar, many persons have gone into the business of preparing the delicacy for the market. The United States government in its fish books gives the recipe for making caviar. It is the same as the recipe used by the Russians in the Caspian sea, where the real caviar is made. And now in Kansas City the business has been taken up as a regular business by seven Russians, who have invested nearly $2,500 in the work. They have bought a motor boat, a large house boat, seines, machinery for canning and everything else necessary for the making of caviar. They fish below the Milwaukee bridge, take the fish to their boat and then make the caviar.

But they are very secret about their industry. An inquiry as to their business brings nothing in answer but a decided shaking of the head.

KNOWS MAUD ALLAN, THE DANCER

She's a Native of Mooresburg, Ontario, a Kansas City Man Says.

"Maud Allen, the dancer who is creating a sensation in London, is no more a sister of Theodore Durant than I am," Mac Duscheneau, a restaurant proprietor, said last night. According to his story Maud Allan is her true name—or rather her maiden name. He says she was married at the Hotel Baltimore several years ago to a man named Frohman.

"I was reared in the little town of Mooresburg, in Eastern Ontario," Duscheneau said. "Maud Allan was born and reared there and she used to sing and dance at church entertainments. Her father is Daniel W. Allan, who was a conductor on the Canadian Pacific railroad and her mother's maiden name was St. Eve. The father is now living in Smith Falls, Ontario.

"I don't see why there should be any mystery about Miss Allan. The Montreal Star recently published an article telling of her success in London, saying that she was a native of Mooresburg."

TEXAS CITIES UNDER WATER

There Are 3,000 Homeless Persons in East Fort Worth.

FORT WORTH, TEX., April 18.—Another rise of three feet in Clear and West Forks forced thousands of persons to flee from their homes in East Fort Worth to-day. So far as known four persons have lost their lives.

The rise was so rapid that persons were obliged to leave their furniture and personal effects. At least 3,000 persons have been rendered homeless and all streams are still rising. Railroad service is badly crippled and the Texas & Pacific railroad reports that it will not be able to send out trains west for two or three days. The Fort Worth & Rio Grande and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe are running very few trains. Five hundred delegates to the state labor convention are weatherbound here.

A cloudburst in Parker and Palo Pinto counties last night probably will send the Brazos and Trinity rivers two feet higher and these streams are now higher than in twenty-five years.

North Fort Worth is isolated and 500 houses are submerged. Mineral City, near Weatherford, is under water and Cleburne, south of here on the Santa Fe, is surrounded by the flood. Engineer Long and his fireman were found dead under their engine to-day. Their train left the track in a washout a mile north of Cleburne. The fireman's name is believed to be Allsup.

The flood sufferers have been provided with shelter. Crops over a large area have been destroyed, and the estimated loss will reach more than ½ million dollars.

HAD TO FIND A NEW MAN.

The Upper House Stole Auditor-Elect Green's Chief Clerk.

Vernon Green, city auditor-elect fancied he had selected his chief clerk until the upper house selected his man for sergeant-at-arms. Green had announced that M. A. Flynn would be his chief clerk, but Flynn prefers the other position.

"I won't announce my chief clerk for a day or two," Green said. "I consider Flynn the best accountant in the city and would be glad to have him, but he can be sergeant-at-arms of the upper house and still have some time to devote to his real estate business. In my office he would be kept busy every day."

Flynn is building an apartment building on Linwood boulevard and is connected with a real estate firm. The sergeant-at-arms of the upper house has comparatively little work to do outside of council meetings. More work is assigned to the sergeant-at-arms of the lower house. W. D. Scoville, who was selected for that position, held it under the Democratic house that retired from office four years ago. Since that time he has been connected with the claim department of the Metropolitan Street Railway company, his present employment. Scoville has also been a promoter of athletic exhibitions.

AN INDIAN SCHOOL IS UNSAFE.

Students Forced to Abandon the Mekusukey Educational House.

MUSKOGEE, OK., April 18.—G. W. Horton, superintendent of the Mekusukey school in the Seminole nation, wired Superintendent Benedict, who is in charge of all government schools in the Five tribes, to-day that the walls of the school building were cracking so that the building had become unsafe, that the school had been dismissed and that 100 Seminole boys boarding in the school were moving out.

Walter Falwell, supervisor of Seminole schools, was sent down to investigate. Mekusukey is one of the national Seminole schools. The building was erected fifteen years ago at a cost of $40,000. It is a three-story brick and strictly modern. It is located twelve miles from Wewoka in the country and the Seminoles have educated their boys there for many years.

OLD TIMER.

BECAUSE HILL IS NOT RICH

MR. LONGWORTH TELLS WHAT GERMANY'S OBJECTIONS WERE.

The Emperor Was Opposed to the American Because His Wealth Will Not Permit Him to Entertain Lavishly.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—"The objection to Dr. Hill as ambassador to Berlin was simply and solely that his private fortune would not enable him to represent properly the dignity of the American nation."

The statement was made to-day in the House of Representatives by Mr. Longworth of Ohio, son-in-law of President Roosevelt, in the course of the consideration of the diplomatic appropriation bill. Mr. Longworth was making a plea for the maintenance by the government of suitable legation buildings at the various foreign capitals. He referred to the press dispatches saying that the German emperor had refused to accept Dr. Hill and to the official denial given to the published stories.

THE STORIES WERE TRUE.

"Nevertheless," said Mr. Longworth, "there is no doubt that there was a foundation for these stories beyond mere rumor, and it is undoubtedly true that persons high in authority in Germany for some time have been saying that Dr. Hill was not persona gratissima to the emperor."

These objections, however, he declared, could not be because Dr. Hill was not experienced in diplomacy, nor sufficiently learned in international law, nor that he was not sufficiently able and representative. They were, he asserted, due entirely to the fact "that because he was not sufficiently well off to pay the difference between the amount paid him as salary and the amount necessary to maintain his position as ambassador, he would not only not be able to keep up such an establishment as that of the present ambassador, but would not be able to keep up any establishment at all."

THE LUXURY OF MR. TOWER.

Mr. Longworth said without going into the question as to whether Mr. Tower had maintained too luxurious an establishment that everybody would concede that the American ambassador to Germany should at least have a house to live in and not be compelled to live in a hotel or a flat.

"It is no excuse," he said, "that we do not act because financial conditions do not warrant the expense. An office holding aristocracy is bad enough in any country when based on birth and blood, but when based on wealth it is infinitely worse, and worse than all in a republic. I would say that any amount of money was well spent for uprooting such a system from this country."

A JURY TO HEAR PERKINS CASE?

Final Arguments on Suit Over Lawyer's Insurance in Kansas City, Kas.

TOPEKA., April 18.—The hearing of the law points in the Perkins insurance case was not finished to-day and will be taken up later by Judge Pollock in Kansas City, Kas. The attorneys for the L. H. Perkins estate are trying to have the equity suits in the federal court thrown out and to require the hearing to be before a jury. It is contended that the purpose of the equity suits has been fulfilled with the exhumation of the body of the Lawrence lawyer and that the question of whether or not he committed suicide with the intention of giving his family the benefit of the insurance money should be left to a jury.

The attorneys for the life insurance companies maintain that, since part of the proceedings were held under the equity court, the case should be finally tried before the judge alone and without the intervention of a jury. Judge Pollock is inclined to favor the trial by jury instead of by the judge alone, but he will hear additional arguments from both sides before he makes a final decision.

NEW MAYOR IN TO-MORROW

THE INAUGURAL CEREMONIES AT NOON IN THE CITY HALL.

Beardsley's Last Act Will Be to Sign Pay Warrants—A Joint Session of the Lower and Upper Houses—The New and Old Mayor Chat.

The new city administration will be inaugurated at noon to-morrow. The old council will meet at 11 o'clock to pass the necessary appropriation ordinances and clean up unfinished routine. Mayor Beardsley's last official act will be to sign the pay warrants for the police, firemen and other employees. When this is done the two houses of the council will meet for the new members to take their seats. Then they will go into joint session in the lower house council chamber where T. T. Crittenden, jr., mayor-elect will take the oath of office with proper ceremonies. All of the new aldermen had been sworn yesterday.

A RECESS WILL BE TAKEN.

After the inauguration the new council, following custom, will take a recess until 7:30 to-morrow night for the regular transaction of business. It is expected that Mayor Crittenden will send his first appointments to the upper house for confirmation then.

Mr. Crittenden, mayor-elect, made a social call on Mayor Beardsley yesterday. The mayor-elect and the outgoing mayor chatted several minutes. Mr. Beardsley said he hoped Mr. Crittenden would enjoy a successful administration.

BEARDSLEY VOLUNTEERED AID.

Mayor Beardsley had previously written to Mr. Crittenden advising him that it was customary for the representatives of the new administration to arrange for the inauguration ceremonies and offered any assistance that he could give. Mr. Crittenden expressed a desire that they be as simple as possible.

Mayor Beardsley will make a short address and will introduce his successor, Mr. Crittenden, who will then take the official oath and make his inaugural speech. The oath will be administered by William Clough, city clerk.

PREPARES FOR ANNUAL TAX LEVY.

Mr. Meservey Instructed by Mr. Crittenden to Draw an Ordinance.

T. T. Crittenden, jr., mayor elect, gave his instructions yesterday for the first necessary proceedings of the new council Monday. He requested E. C. Meservey, city counselor, to have the proper ordinances drawn to make the annual tax levy. This must be done Monday. The comptroller's estimates are that 12½ mills will be sufficient with the usual 3 mills maintenance levy for each park district. This is the same as last year when a reduction of ½ mill was made. It will give 10 mills for general purposes and 2½ mills for the interest and bond sinking funds.

The revision of the city assessment for 1908 was footed up in the city assessor's office last night. The city's total taxable valuation as finally established by the board of equalization is $131,378,585. The amount is $4,320,200 more than the amount of the returns made by the property owners. It is expected that this will yield between 1¼ and 1½ million dollars for general purposes, and for the interest and sinking funds. To this will be added the revenues from licenses and miscellaneous sources.

Real estate	$ 92,815,230
Real estate (railroads)	901,350
Personal property (individual)	22,373,190
Personal property (merchants)	9,349,330
Personal property (banks)	5,718,235
Personal property (railroad book)	221,250
Grand Total	$131,378,585

ELOPING A HABIT WITH HER.

A Missouri Girl Takes Part in Her Second Runaway Match.

SEDALIA, Mo., April 18.—J. R. Owens, who is connected with the Nickelodeon theater in Clinton, Mo., and Miss Eunice A. Sherpey of the same place, eloped from there yesterday and came to Sedalia where they were married by the Rev. S. S. Martin.

This is the second elopement in which the bride has figured. She is only 20 years old, but two years ago she eloped with a young man from Texas. The couple went to Osceola, Mo., followed by Miss Sherpey's father. The young people eluded him and went to Springfield where they were apprehended by a telegram.

Mr. Sherpey followed and took his daughter home. A year later Miss Sherpey was married to Claude Lingle, son of Harvey Lingle, editor of the Clinton Tribune, who divorced her recently on the grounds of desertion. Owens, the second husband of Miss Sherpey, has not yet attained his majority. Miss Sherpey's relatives objected to her marriage to Owens, and it was decided that she should go to live with her sister at Calhoun, Mo. Instead she came to Sedalia, where Owens joined her, and their marriage followed.

FUNERAL OF A SLAIN KANSAN.

Lodges to Raise a Fund to Assist in Prosecuting the Caney Case.

CANEY, KAS., April 18.—The funeral of William D. Carr, who was shot and killed Tuesday night by Mark Killion, was held at 10 o'clock this morning in the Christian church, of which he was a deacon. The Rex. M. E. Spahr of the Methodist Episcopal church officiated. All business was suspended during the services. The funeral was the largest ever held in this city. Fully 2,000 persons attended. The funeral was in charge of the A. O. U. W. and the M. W. A., of which lodges he was a member. The orders will raise a fund and employ assistance for the state in prosecuting the case.

HIGHLAND, KAS., TO CELEBRATE.

The Town Has a New Railroad and Plans a University Building.

TROY, KAS., April 18.—A celebration is billed for Highland May 5. It has a twofold purpose, to rejoice over the completion of the new railroad and to promote the university building project. This jubilee was decided upon by the Commercial club at its last meeting. Governor Hoch, Cyrus Leland and other speakers will be present. The new railroad into Highland was completed to-day and the passenger agent announced that train service would begin Monday.

BRISTOW TO KANSAS FARMERS.

Senator Long's Words and Votes in Conflict, Says Salina Editor.

SHE IS A WOMAN BOMB USER?

California Officers Freed and at Once Rearrested Mrs. Martin.

OAKLAND, CAL., April 18.—The indictment against Mrs. Isabella J. Martin was set aside this morning by Superior Judge Henry S. Wells of Contra Costa county in the superior court of Oakland on a technicality.

The case was immediately resubmitted to another grand jury and the defendant was remanded to the custody of the sheriff with bail fixed at $50,000. It is understood that "Baby" John Martin, who is now in Oakland, will be asked to swear to a formal complaint in the police court, charging Mrs. Martin with attempting to blow up the home of Superior Judge F. B. Ogden in March of 1907.

"CASTRO NEEDS A SPANKING"

So Saying, Congress May Give the President Carte Blanche to Spank.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—From a number of conferences which Chairman Cullom of the Senate committee on foreign relations has had recently with President Roosevelt and Secretary Root, it is now probable that before the adjournment of the present session of Congress blanket authority will be voted to the President to proceed against Venezuela in such manner as subsequent events may require to uphold the dignity of the United States and protect the interests of American citizens.

A resolution giving such authority to the President has been drafted by Senator Cullom and approved by the President and Secretary Root. It provides in general terms that the President shall have the power to deal with Venezuela in the matter of adjusting the controversy with that country concerning wrongs done to American citizens and corporations in Venezuela by reason of the ill treatment they have received at the hands of President Castro.

On several occasions, as is shown by the correspondence between the State department and the American minister, Mr. Russell, the American government has without success called upon President Castro to arbitrate the claims of Americans in Venezuela.

If a resolution giving general authority to President Roosevelt to proceed against Venezuela as he sees fit is adopted by this Congress, and if, in that event, Mr. Castro should continue in his present attitude, there is no question that the American government would have the power to resort to force. Furthermore, the indications are that an aggressive programme would be adopted.

President Roosevelt believes that Castro is trying to "bluff" this government, Secretary Root believes that the dignity of the diplomatic branch of the government has been trampled upon, and Senator Cullom and other members of the foreign relations committee of the Senate believe, to use the chairman's words:

"President Castro needs a spanking."

PASSING OF THE "RAZORBACK."

"Mast Hog" Is the Name of an Improved Type of Western Swine.

"Progress in the stock industry has asserted itself so strongly that the razorback hog of Arkansas and Oklahoma is rapidly becoming a thing of the past," a dealer at the stock yards said yesterday. The hogs of Arkansas and Oklahoma until the last ten years were so wild that it was almost impossible to corral a full carload of them at one time. They preferred acorns to corn.

"By introducing new breeds of hogs into those states the old razorback type has been modified into a much broader, shorter and stockier animal—one that knows what to do with corn. The name of the new type of swine is 'mast hog.' It comes from the fact that the animals at first sustain themselves on acorns, the barks and roots of trees and shrubs. They are 'topped off' with corn before they are sent to market."

About 3,000 of the "mast hogs" were marketed in Kansas City in the last week. Their average weight was 140 to 175 pounds and as a rule they brought fifty cents a hundred pounds under the prevailing market prices. The rule of the packers on razorback hogs used to be to pay $1 a hundred pounds less than for native hogs.

"It is reasonable to expect," the dealer continued, "from the progress made with the undesirable razorback type in ten years that in five years more the wooded districts of Arkansas, Oklahoma and Southern Missouri will have a very desirable commercial hog."

LACK OF RESPECT FOR THE FLAG

Kansas Cityans Ignore the National Anthem, a Navy Man Says.

To The Star: Will some of The Star's readers kindly shed a little light upon a subject of general interest? Four years of naval service taught me one thing above everything else—to show respect to the flag. "The Star Spangled Banner," played at any time or place was the signal to stand at "attention." I have observed this custom elsewhere. Why not here? Surely the citizens of Kansas City are as loyal to their country as the people of New York or Boston. U. S. N.

Smith—How many motor cars are there in Kansas City?

Jones—About 425, and most of 'em are at the street corner just where you want to cross. Ever notice that?

A Motor Car Plant Transferred.

The plant of the Kansas City Motor Car company at Sheffield and other assets were transferred yesterday by I. P. Ryland, the trustee to Charles S. Gill, who paid $60,000 for the property.

THE CONTAGION OF GOLF

ONCE AROUND THE COURSE CAUSED A MUTUAL ADMIRATION SOCIETY.

The Mere Visitor Gleaned What Knowledge He Could as an Outsider, While the Expert and the Enthusiast Became Near-Affinities.

The Expert stuck a little white golf ball on a tee of wet sand, then swung viciously. When the Mere Visitor looked again the ball was gone. The third member of the party—a confessed Enthusiast—was the only one who knew where the ball lit.

"A bird!" he exclaimed.

With his forefinger he marked out a huge arc on the sky and ended by pointing. The three marched resolutely forward. Already it was evident that the Enthusiast and the Expert were going to grow friendly.

"If the ball lights in this road," the Expert said, "you aren't allowed to dress up behind it."

The Mere Visitor had been warned not to be surprised about anything he should hear, so he didn't ask for an explanation. He concluded that the order against dressing in the presence of the ball was issued as a mark of respect.

THE EXPERT DREW ANOTHER CLUB.

The Expert pushed and lofted the ball along for several miles until he came to a small mountain. Then the Enthusiast burst into raptures again.

"What scenery!" he cried. "I dote on scenery. Here's a little brook, and a long stretch of green grass and over all the blue sky."

The Expert drew another club out of his bag and nodded

"Many's the time I've come out here just at sunrise and played around to the tune of chirping birds," he confessed.

After that the two golfers were like affinities—and utterly forgot the Mere Visitor.

"Only one thing is lacking to make this place Elysium," the Enthusiast declared. "And that thing is drink."

"We used to have even that," the Expert answered. "We had a barrel on top of the hill here with a lock on the spigot, and all the club members had a key. But some one who didn't belong got wise to the combination and used to climb over the fence and valiantly try to drink up the whole barrel. So we had to give that up."

THOUGHTS OF THE FAMILY.

Neither golfer smiled.

"You have a wife?" the Enthusiast inquired, apropos of nothing.

"Sure."

"Great! I'll bring my wife out here and leave her with yours. This'll do her good—really save me doctor's bills. I've got a boy, too. This grass would do him good. He could roll around on this turf and be transformed."

"I've got a boy, also."

"G-r-eat! How old?"

"Two years."

"Wonderful! Mine's a year and a half. They can play together."

As the party followed the ball another half mile down the mountain and across a broad, grassy prairie, the Mere Visitor had visions of the two wives and the two boys playing on the turf amid a rain of golf balls. The chances that they would be transformed appeared to be good.

By the time the last hole was reached the conversation turned to scores and records and the Mere Visitor was as much at a loss as if the talk was in French.

The Mere Visitor left the two golfers in the clubhouse making plans for a picnic. The Expert and the Enthusiast were to carry canteens and haversacks and play all day. Their wives and children were to camp in the middle of the prairie, where the golfers could watch them with spyglasses from any part of the course.

TREDENTINE LAW IS IN FORCE.

Beginning To-Day the New Catholic Marriage Regulation Is Effective.

The Tredentine marriage law of the Roman Catholic church, beginning to-day, will be in force in America, as it has been in Europe and Asia, since the council of Trent in the Sixteenth century.

The marriage law was enacted by the council of Trent December 11, 1563. America was then "the New World," an unknown wilderness. The Catholic missionaries soon invaded America and missions, some of which still may be seen in the South, were established in the path of the Spanish explorer. For some reason, no one can tell why, the marriage law was never placed in force in this country. When Pius X became pope he determined that the law should apply to America. This is the day set for it to become operative and every priest in America has received instructions to that effect.

The principal points in the new law are: Persons must sign an agreement to marry when they become engaged; all marriage ceremonies must be performed by a Catholic priest; no marriages will be recognized that are performed by justices of the peace or probate judges; marriages between Catholics and those of other faiths are not forbidden, but the ceremony must be performed by a priest; the marriage ceremony must be performed by the parish priest, the priest of the bride's parish having the preference.

The Catholic clergy say that the new law will do much to prevent elopements and secret marriages, which so often result in disagreements and divorce.

The Death of Mrs. E. J. Wasser.

Mrs. Eva Jane Wasser, 50 years old, died yesterday at her home, 1037 Orville avenue, Kansas City, Kas. She is survived by a husband and five children. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon at the home. Burial will be in Mount Hope cemetery.

"There's a Reason"

WHAT THE ELECTION COST THEM

Baehr Spent the Most, $614.75—Isaac Taylor's Outlay Only $23.50.

Most of the candidates for city offices in the recent election have filed with the county clerk itemized lists of their campaign expenses as provided by law. The following list includes all the candidates who were elected. The law allows thirty days for the candidates who were not elected. This is a list of the candidates who have filed and the totals as given in their reports:

ATTENTION, FLOWER BUYERS
Open To-Day!—
In Order to Care for Yesterday's Overflow
In spite of our boasted facilities for taking care of our patrons, we found ourselves absolutely powerless to handle the business that was tendered us yesterday.
While this condition is perfectly excusable, we none the less regret the fact that hundreds of our friends were at times yesterday prevented from favoring us with their orders, owing to the fact that they could not edge their way through the mass of humanity that filled our store and crowded the doors.
And yet we cannot but feel gratified—exceedingly gratified—over this great manifestation of public favor. We feel newly obligated to our thousands of patrons and friends.
We Are Open To-Day as Usual
And if any of our good friends have cause for grievance over our inability to care for them yesterday in the way that we always want to care for patrons, we trust that they will not be slow in bringing the matter to our attention and allowing us to speedily right it.

EFFECTIVE Advertising is continuous Advertising. It is the only way to familiarize the buyer with your business so that when he wants what you have to offer he immediately thinks of you. Take even a small advertisement like this:
FURNITURE TO ORDER
Substantial, Artistic, Distinctive.
Bradshaw, Twelfth St., Kansas City
Inserted in The Star every morning, every evening and every Sunday for one year, at a monthly expense of only $47.01 an Advertisement occupying that space would be published more than Ninety Million Times
and every possible buyer in Kansas City would know that advertiser's name and what he had to sell. To extend the publicity field to cover the whole of Kansas City's commercitl territory it is necessary only to add The Weekly Star. Morning, Evening, Sunday and Weekly, the little advertisement in one year would, in all, be published
One Hundred and Ten Million Times
a cost of only $62.13 a month. Persistency wins.

OVATION FOR THE FLEET

LOS ANGELES SENT 100,000 PERSONS TO THE SEASHORE.

The Coast Was Lined With Spectators as the Great Squadron Steamed Northward in a Column Two Miles Long.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., April 16.—Los Angeles sent more than 100,000 of its residents to the oceanside to-day to welcome the American battle ship fleet which steamed into San Pedro harbor, twenty-two miles away, in the full radiance of a midsummer sun and dropped anchor at 3:30 o'clock.

The sixteen fighting vessels and three auxiliaries, leaving San Diego shortly after 6 o'clock this morning had steamed up the 100 miles of surf-beaten coast in single column formation, 400 yards apart, and in full view of thousands of persons who gathered at every vantage point.

HALF AN HOUR BEHIND HAND.

With the Connecticut leading and with Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas on the bridge, the long line of ships pointed within the breakwater at San Pedro bay just half an hour behind their scheduled hour of arrival. The Connecticut, Kansas, Vermont and Louisiana took up berths within the sheltered portion of the harbor, where they are to remain the full seven days of the fleet's visit, while the other twelve ships of the second, third and fourth divisions reached out into the open sea in a line nearly two miles long.

The arrival of the fleet was accompanied by all of the flashing colors and embellishments that have made its presence in every home and foreign port visited in the last four months a marine picture unrivaled in imposing beauty. The thousands of persons who made the occasion of the arrival a holiday and lined seawalls, breakwaters, bluffs and beaches surrounding the bay fairly went wild in their enthusiasm as the fleet steamed into its assigned position. They had watched the ships grow from a miniature squadron, smoke enshrouded in the distance, to the full grown glory of the near view offered in the confined area of the harbor, with increasing excitement, and when the anchors dropped with a white splash into the rippling blue waters whistles blew in a perfect pandemonium of greeting, while cheers grew in volume until they could be heard on board the Minnesota, the last of the big fighters in the far reaching column.

FLEET ILLUMINATED LAST NIGHT.

To-night the fleet was illuminated, hulls, superstructures, turrets and yardarms being outlined in electric bulbs.

Mayor A. C. Harper, accompanied by General Adna R. Chaffee and other members of the Los Angeles reception committee, went by special steamer several miles down the coast to greet the incoming fleet, but did not board the flagship Connecticut until the anchoring signal of multi-colored flags had dropped from the signal yards. Admiral Thomas received the visitors in his cabin and thanked them in characteristically gracious manner for the cordial greetings extended.

The stay of the fleet at the port of Los Angeles during the next week is to marked by the most elaborate programme of entertainment both for enlisted men and officers, the city has ever known.

To-morrow morning the fleet is to be split up in squadrons in order that four of the Los Angeles ports may share in the honor of entertaining the greatest naval force the waters of the coast ever has known.

THE WOODWARD STOCK OPENING

"This House in Order" Presented at the Auditorium Last Night.

A large audience saw the opening performance of the Woodward Stock company at the Auditorium theater last night. The play was "His House in Order," a comedy drama presented in Kansas City last season by John Drew and Margaret Illington. The stock company includes several players who have appeared here before and each was generously applauded last night.

Miss Eva Lang received a particularly hearty reception and at the close of the third act, carrying the flowers that had been sent her, said a few words acknowledging the manifestation.

The stock company's presentation of the comedy drama was creditable. Miss Lang's interpretation of the role of "Nina" was interesting. The company had worked hard in preparing the bill and the performance ran as smoothly as if it had been presenting the play for weeks. A complete private performance had been given before the opening. Mr. Jack Chagnon's presentation of the role "Hilary Jesson," was impressive, indicating careful study. The other members of the company are: Misses Marie Hudson, Ica Mentch, Ritta Knight, Jane Evans, Henrietta Vaders and Helen Lenvenson; Charles Dingle, Frank Beamish, W. G. Thomas, J. Francis Kirke, Thomas Hall and William Phinney.

Un-Paternal.

From Judge.

First Canadian—Should a serious dispute arise with the United States, could we rely upon the support of England?

Second Canadian—I have been studying that matter considerably of late, and I believe, from the friendly spirit she is constantly showing toward America, that, in case of a crisis, England would declare herself independent of us and try going it on her own hook for a spell.

BRIEF BITS OF CITY NEWS.

SAINTS HAVE GREAT HOPE

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH SEES A BRIGHT FUTURE FOR THE CHURCH

At the Close of the Independence Conference Yesterday the Leaders Talked of Their Long Service—Some Advice on Promptness and Gossipping.

"This is my forty-eighth year in the service of the church," said President Joseph Smith, to the Saints in Independence yesterday. "It has been my life work. I began editing the Saints' Herald forty-two years ago. I have preached whenever I found time to do so. In all the years I have been preaching I have never asked any man for a dollar for myself. In all that time I have never lacked for enough to supply my needs. While doing missionary work I never got wet through and through except twice, once when caught out in a summer shower and once while crossing the river near Nauvoo."

The general conference of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints, which had been in session in Independence since Monday morning, April 6, was nearing its close. They were putting in the time till the stenographers should be ready with the list of appointments for the ensuing year. A call had been made for a talk from the president.

"I never missed but five appointments in my life," continued the president, "and I never refused to make one until very recently."

Then he told the ministers and missionaries how important it was for them to be prompt in meeting their appointments. President Smith uttered some pretty sharp words on the subject of gossipping.

AS TO TATTLING ELDERS.

"There is nothing so detestable to me," he said, "as a tattling elder. If anyone makes charges to you about another, require him to write them out and sign them. There will be very few made, I'll warrant. I'll not say things about you brethren to your backs that I wouldn't say to your faces, and I want you to deal the same way with me. Remember the saying, 'A lie will travel from Maine to Georgia while the truth is putting on its boots.'"

NEVER CALLED ON GOD IN VAIN.

R. C. Evans of Toronto, Canada, the third member of the presidency, spoke briefly.

"For thirty years I have been in this work," he said. "I have unbounded faith in it. In all these years I have never called upon God in vain. It has been my lot to face mobs in Canada by day and by night, when I have seen the bark fly from the trees, dislodged by the bullets of our enemies. But I have never suffered harm, nor has my family ever had to call in medical aid in all the time I have been away until yesterday."

Much of the time of the afternoon session yesterday was spent in "sustaining" the various actions of the church and the conference. To "sustain," in the phraseology of Latter Day Saints, means to indorse with a vote of confidence.

The conference met last night to hear the list of appointments for the ensuing year.

THE ARMY.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The following army orders were issued to-day:

Colonel George Huhlen, assistant quartermaster-general, is relieved from duty in the office of the quartermaster-general and will proceed to Jeffersonville, Ind., and assume charge of the general depot of the quartermaster's department at that place.

Captain Kirby Walker, quartermaster, will proceed from Kansas City, Kas., to Fort Worth, Tex., to inspect animals to be delivered under contract, returning to Kansas City upon completion of this duty.

The following board is appointed to meet at Fort Logan H. Root for the examination of such persons as may be authorized to appear before it for appointment as chaplain in the army: Major George Deshon, surgeon; Major James Thompson, captain; Mark Wheeler, first lieutenant; Robert Wescott, Sixteenth infantry, and Ernest Roberts, contract surgeon.

Captain Laroy Upton, First infantry, is relieved from treatment at the general hospital, the Presido of San Francisco, and will proceed to Vancouver barracks for duty pending the arrival of his regiment at that station.

Major Herbert Deakyne, corps of engineers, will repair to this city for temporary duty in the office of the chief of engineers.

Heartless Uncle Ike.

  Talkin' to Caleb Gore,"
Says solemn Uncle Ike, one day,
  Down to Binn's grocery store.

"When suddenly seems like it lunged,
  Wobbled this way an' that,
Then kindy pitchin' forrids some
  Jest tumbled with me flat.

"An' I was madder'n settin' hens
  When someone steals their eggs,
For I diskivered it had went
  An' broke two of its legs.

"An' now the ding ol' crippled hoss
  Wa'n't no more use to me
Than ef 'twas sailin' in the sky,
  Or on the salty sea.

"So whar it tumbled in its tracks
  I thought no more'n fit
To leave it layin' wuthless thar—
  An' thar it's layin' yit."

Then Deacon Pennington, who'd sot
  A-wigglin' in his chair,
He shouts, "You air a heartless wretch,
  Ike Stratton, so you air!

"Fer sech a heathen thing ez that,
  The deacon shouts, "by heck!"
Ike Stratton, we sh'd snatch you out
  An' stretch your pesky neck!"

Sorty soliloquizing, then—
  Leastways, he seemed to be—
Ol' Uncle Ike he shuck his head,
  An' solemnly says he:

"I mowt 'a' patched that sawhoss up
  An' somehow made it do,
But it was shaky old, an' so—"
  The deacon, he had flew.

From Temple of Health, Northeast Corner Twelfth and Washington Streets

There is a temple at Twelfth and Washington streets—almost in the heart of Kansas City—that is well worth a visit from the thousands of sightseers who gather here.

There is nothing so remarkable about the building itself, but the remarkable transformation from misery to happiness that is a daily occurence inside the four walls in question makes this place one of the most interesting spots in Kansas City—in fact, one of the most interesting institutions to be found anywhere within the borders of the United States.

Reference is made to the Temple of Health—as it is known in Kansas City and throughout the Middle West. Dr Carson, the proprietor, is the founder of the School of Vital Science and College of Psychic Sarcology.

In almost every state in the Union he has men, women and children who stand as living monuments to the efficacy of his remarkable healing power.

The story of cures wrought by him sounds like exaggeration, yet seeing is believing, and there is a wonderful array of evidence showing how he has brought thousands of sufferers from the verge of the grave and hung upon their cheeks the rosy bloom of health.

No Surgical Operations or Drugs.

No medicines, drugs or surgical operations are used. A few years ago no such disease as appendicitis was known. Now when a person has a severe pain anywhere in the abdomen a doctor is immediately called in. He performs an operation, and if the patient lives it is called a wonderful triumph. Nothing is said if the patient dies. But the day of the surgical operation has passed. Appendicitis can be cured by Vital Science treatment at the Temple of Health without a surgical operation, with its attendant danger and agony. Dr. Carson cures appendicitis every day.

Treats Children Very Successfully.

Many children deformed, suffering from hip joint disease, spinal and other seemingly hopeless ailments are treated with the most wonderful success and in no case does he cause the little one the least suffering, no plaster casts, bandages or braces being used in the treatment, neither is there a drop of blood drawn by the cruel knife.

A NEW RUSSIAN ADVANCE?

ENTRANCE OF THE CZAR'S TROOPS INTO PERSIA MAY BE OMINOUS.

While It May Be a Mere Border War, the History of the Past Is Full of Foreboding—England's Constant Fear for India.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 18.—The foreign office is keenly interested in Russia's little frontier war in Persia. It is the first occasion to arise for the active application of Russia's rights, under the Anglo-Russian agreement, to interfere to preserve order in northern Persia. The operations themselves are considered of minor importance and they will quickly come to an end as soon as the subsidence of the floods permits the movement of the Russian detachments.

Russia counts upon the hearty support of Great Britain and no interference on the part of any other power.

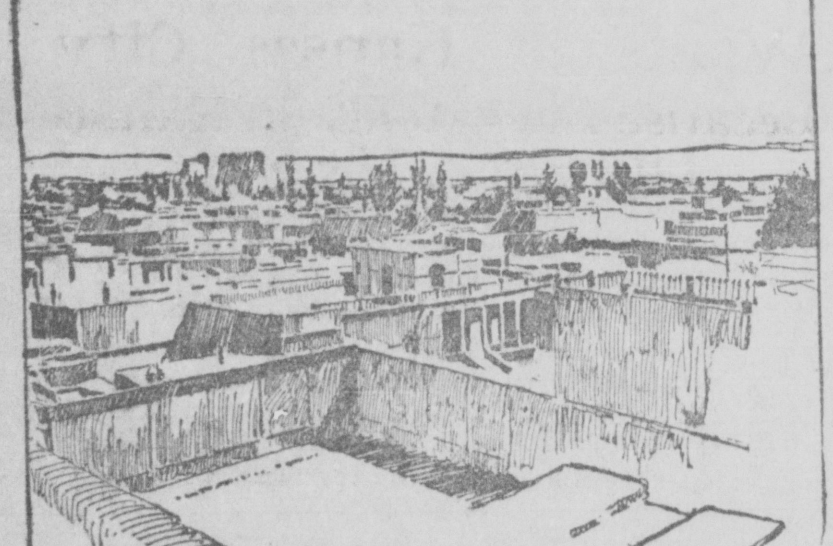
The foreign office has no further news of fighting. The Russian commander telegraphs that the Persian inhabitants along the frontier have abandoned their villages and fled to the mountains. The Russian detachment is still in Persian territory.

A nation with a past, lying supine yet intrusive in the paths of two nations with futures, the storm of whose aggressive greed threatens yearly to overwhelm her; a people whose glory faded in the dim morning tide of civilization, ere the sun of man's cognizance had opened on the peoples who threaten to engulf her; a land of honeyed rain and mellow air, jasmines, roses, ease and decadence—which could it be save Persia?

Where the thoughts of the busy world—barring the plotting diplomat—never travel unless attracted by some new record of bloodshed—assassination, revolt or the aggression of Russia or England—nearly forgotten in the westward sweep of the world's events, lies the land of Cyrus and Xerxes and Darius. But Persia will destroy no more empires, unless, turning backward the ambitions of other centuries, it may revise the oracles and mark its own destruction, as Croesus had dreamed it.

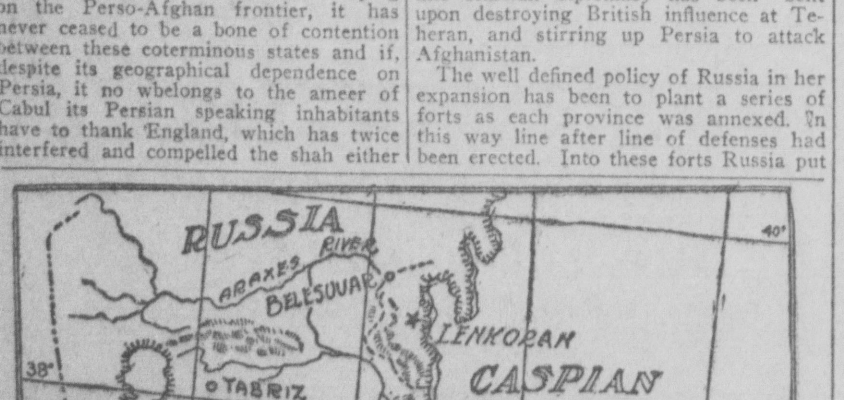
Indeed the toils of British diplomacy for years have been tangled with the fear that Persia may some day figure in its own subversion at the hands of Russia. This event woul pu tinto the hands of the czar the Persian gulf with its outlet into the Arabian gulf and a sea route direct into the jealously guarded India. Worse than that, it would open the way for Russia to throw an army into Beluchistan or Afghanistan, step across into the northern border of India, disaffect the warlike tribes, bring about a repetition of the Sepoy rebellion and possibly wrest from England the mastery of India.

How many sleepless nights this fear, latent as it is with possibilities, has caused the British foreign office can best be surmised. By the arts of diplomacy and the various tricks of embroiling other nations England has thus far held back the czar's aggression. It now has treaties which prohibit Russia from interfering with the unity of Persia any further than is already the case, but the Russian is not one to quibble over treaties when the time to strike arrives. At what moment the arms of the bear may take Persia in their fatal grasp, open the way to the so-called "buffer states" and stand, sinister and forbidding, at the gates of India, is the stirring problem that confronts England and overawes Persia.



A VIEW OF TABRIZ, NEAR THE FOOT OF MOUNT ARARAT, CALLED THE KEY TO PERSIA.

The history of Central Asia for the last century has been nothing more than a record of Russian advance toward the Indian frontier, to which Herat is the key. The title of the "Key to India" has long been another name for Herat Herat, the "Gate of India" and "Pearl of Khorassan," is one of the oldest cities in the world, and has at times been the most populous. Such is the vital importance of its position that it has been fifty times attacked and leveled to the ground, each time rising again from its ruins. Lying on the Perso-Afghan frontier, it has never ceased to be a bone of contention between these coterminous states and if, despite its geographical dependence on Persia, it no wbelongs to the ameer of Cabul its Persian speaking inhabitants have to thank England, which has twice interfered and compelled the shah either to raise the siege or surrender the prize.



MAP OF THE AFFECTED REGION IN NORTHERN PERSIA.

Situated about twenty-six hundred feet above sea level, Herat occupies the center of a productive plain traversed east and west by the Heri-rud, and skirted on both sides by hills.

It is 400 years since the Russians took their first step across the Ural mountains, marking the primary advance into Asia. Ivan III had succeeded in laying the foundations not only of the Russian empire, but of its extension. His grandson, Ivan the Terrible, first to assume the title czar, made many an alliance with Eastern governments, and in his time the first expedition of Russia into Central Asia was undertaken by the Cossacks tribes under their famous chief Yernak. This was really the beginning of Siberia as a Russian possession.

Peter the Great was an expansionist, first and foremost, and, his imagination stirred by the wonderful stories which had reached him of the mineral wealth of the far East, sent an expedition to occupy Khiva and get some of the gold which he was informed could be picked up along the river Oxus. The result of this expedition was not much gold, but the founding of the first fort of what is now the New Siberian line, completed in 1752. It was the enterprising Peter who found a footing on the Caspian sea, and cast an envious eye upon the trade of India by way of Persia. The great czar regarded Astarbad on the Caspian sea, which Russia had acquired in 1722, as the base of this Indian enterprise.

A TYPICAL PERSIAN COUNTRY PLACE. THIS ONE WAS ONCE OCCUPIED AS AN AMERICAN LEGATION.

When the Crimea was annexed in 1775 thousands of the Tartars were slaughtered, and twenty-five years later Georgia, which had been the bone of contention between Persia and Russia, was formally annexed by the czar. In 1801 Paul was so delighted with Napoleon's ideas of world conquest that he agreed with him upon a joint invasion of India. The arrangements had all been made and the army of Cossacks had been started, when the czar died, and his successor, Alexander I, abandoned the project, although he continued his struggle for the extension of the dominion in Central Asia, but with little decisive result.

Five years later an English statesman, Sir Harford Jones, was the first to recognize the danger which threatened the British possessions in India on account of the growing advance of Russia. At this time Persia had formed a peculiar treaty with Great Britain, by which the English agreed to aid the shah if he were attacked by any European power, but Great Britain refused to act with him in case he took the initiative. All, therefore, that Russia had to do was to provoke the Persians to declare war, which they promptly did, and Great Britain, refusing to aid her, Persia had to surrender many provinces to Russia. From that day to this Russian diplomacy has been bent upon destroying British influence at Teheran, and stirring up Persia to attack Afghanistan.

The well defined policy of Russia in her expansion has been to plant a series of forts as each province was annexed. In this way line after line of defenses had been erected. Into these forts Russia put thousands of Cossacks, who serve not only as soldiers, but as farmers, cultivating the district around the fort.

Up to 1859 Russia had bent every energy to the completion of her line of forts in Russian Turkestan, and it was only in that year that, by the conquest of the stronghold of Julek, afterwards changed to Fort Perovski, Russia felt secure in her possessions. Even in 1865 the British viceroy of India was blind to the danger threatened in the Russian occupancy, claiming that Russia would prove a "safer neighbor than the savage tribes of Central Asia."

But the Russian policy was followed with wonderful persistence until all of Bokhara had been conquered and they could formally announce the formation of the Russian province of Turkestan, which included all of the territories acquired within a half a century, with headquarters at Tashkent, ruled by a governor general appointed from St. Petersburg.

At last the British government woke up and bethought themselves of the formation of a "buffer state," a neutral zone, between Russia and India. In 1873 an agreement was signed, fixing more or less loosely the northern boundary of Afghanistan. The frontier on the northeast and northwest was so described by Russia as to make it easy for her to later seize and occupy Merv and a large piece of the adjacent territory.

Availing himself of the war between Servia and Turkey, in 1876 the czar brought his troops over the Turkish frontier in the following year, under the pretext of sheltering the oppressed Christians in the Turkish possessions, invading Armenia with his troops and gaining possession of all the Armenian fortresses in 1878.

Great Britain had at last succeeded in establishing a certain ascendancy over Afghanistan, having a British resident at Kabul under the treaty of Gandamak Under this agreement certain valleys were assigned to the British government, which obtained complete control over the Khyber and Michan passes. The ameer agreed to conduct all negotiations with foreign governments through the authorities in British India.

But now Russia saw another opportunity for making one more step toward India. She obtained a footing in the Akhal country, persisting until she had conquered the Turkomans of Akhal and Merv, and had garrisons only a short distance from Herat.

The British government now made very anxious "inquiries," and Russia protested vigorously that she had no intention whatever of pushing her garrisons any further forward, fixing the Russo-Persian frontier by the convention of Teheran in 1881. The oasis of Merv was, however, occupied and annexed in 1884, when Great Britain was so busily occupied in the Soudan that she could not protest with any vigor. This was a great triumph for the Russian schemes, for the strategical and commercial importance of the Merv oasis is difficult to exaggerate.

The railroad has been Russia's most important engine for securing herself in the possession of her new territory, and she has now extended her lines of railway as far as Kushk, only seventy miles from Herat.

Behind this last spur lies a whole system of railroads, either actually built or in process of construction, by which, at a moment's warning, Russia can gather a tremendous army in a few hours, and throw thousands of Cossacks across the Afghan or Chinese frontier.

It is an open secret that the power of the czar is greater in Persia than is that of the shah. The entire country of Iran is surveyed for a network of Russian railways, some of which are now being built, so that St. Petersburg and Teheran will soon be connected by them. Another project of railroad construction now planned by Russia is to branch off when within a few miles of Herat, run a railway to Kandahar and then through Baluchistan.

The review of these historic events shows that England's theory of a 'buffer state" between the Russian possessions and India has been futile. That Russia is bent upon having a port on the Persian gulf is as certain as any point in her programme of expansion.

The territory in which the warring Kurds are now making opportunity for Russia is an especially interesting portion of the world. Tabriz, the "key to Persia," and principal city of the district, lies very near to Mount Arrarat where Noah's doves found the landing place for his flood bound ark. It may be called the second cradle of man. Indeed the entire district is intimately connected with the history of the Jews and may be termed another Holy Land, near as it is to the original.

According to scientific research the district just north of the place now affected, the east shore of the Caspian, is the real cradle of the human race from which the Aryan tribes, Hindus, Assyrians, Egyptians, Jews, Greeks, Romans, Gauls and Teutons went forth in their migrations at the dawn of our history.

DR. W. E. KING'S SUMMER HOME.

Dr. W. Eugene King is building a summer home on his farm near Independence. The building is of the bungalow type. It will have a living room 18x32 feet, with an old fashion fireplace in one end and a bay window in the other. There are to be three sleeping rooms above. A large veranda surrounds the entire house. The interior is finished in weathered oak.

The house is to built on the old William Chrisman homestead, one-half mile south of Independence and on the Raytown rock road between the summer homes of Henry N. Garland and Albert Marty. The tract is covered with some of the finest old forest trees in Jackson county.

MRS. WEST ON THE "STUMP"

The Most Spirited Campaign in English Politics Centers Around the Young Cabinet Member and His Handsome Mother, Mrs. G. Cornwallis West.

LONDON, April 18.—The recent reconstruction of the cabinet which came about as a result of the retirement of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and the assumption of the office of premier by Herbert H. Asquith, has plunged the country into a miniature election. Not less than seven bye elections have been made necessary to fill the vacancies created by the cabinet changes. Four of these will be decided during the coming week.

MRS. GEORGE CORNWALLIS WEST.

By far the most interesting will be held to return a member from the Northwest division of Manchester, where the fate of Winston Churchill, who is seeking re-election on his elevation to the presidency of the board of trade, will be a surer index of the country's estimate of the past two years of Radical rule than are the verdicts of the smaller constituencies which recently have gone against the government. This contest will be fought hard and the political fighters in both the dominant parties are preparing for the fray.

FIGHTING THE OLD OPPOSITION.

Mr. Churchill will again be opposed by W. Joynson-Hicks, who contested this seat in the Unionist interests at the last general election. There is also a Socialist candidate in the field, but he does not cut much figure.

Mr. Churchill is showing his customary dashing energy in as fiercely waged a contest as has been seen in this country in years. After a brief Good Friday truce he addressed no fewer than half a dozen meetings to-day, four of which were in the open air in different parts of the district.

HIS MOTHER IS AIDING HIM.

Mr. Churchill's mother, Mrs. George Cornwallis West, married to her present husband in 1900, is repeating her tactics of the last election. She accompanies her son to the platform and is untiring in her work among the doubtful groups of electors. Among these must be reckoned the Hebrews, the Roman Catholics and the Irish Nationalists. All three groups are demanding pledges regarding the alien exclusion bill, education, and home rule, respectively. All three voted for Mr. Churchill at the last election, and the defection of any one of these groups might easily spell defeat April 24, the date of the election.

THE SUFFRAGISTTES AGAINST HIM.

The women suffragists are proving a thorn in the side of the young statesman. Although Mr. Churchill has declared himself in favor of women suffrage, the women are overrunning the constituency in favor of the Unionist candidate, declaring that the recent attitude of the members of the cabinet and of Parliament proves that the government has no intention of forcing the cause of women to the front.

The great importance attached to this fight is seen in the fact that the chancellor of the exchequer, Lloyd George, and other ministers, disregarding all precedent in this country, will address not less than ten meetings in Manchester on the eve of the election.

BUT HIS SEAT IS SAFE.

In the hardly anticipated eventuality of an adverse result somt complacent Radical holding a "safe" seat will be given political inducements to resign in favor of Mr. Churchill. Consequently, beyond the loss of prestige to both himself and the government he represents, Mr. Churchill's position in the cabinet will not be affected.

JANUARY THE NAUGHTY MONTH.

It Holds the Record for Fines in Police Court.

The belief that more crime is committed in the hot months of the year is discredited by the annual report of the clerk of the Kansas City police court, submitted to Mayor Henry M. Beardsley yesterday afternoon. If the total amount of fines assessed is a criterion, more misdemeanors were committed in Jaunary than in any other month in the fiscal year.

In January the total fines assessed amounted to $24,173, or just $5 short of double the amount of June, which had only $12,088. December was only a little less wicked than January, as its fine record was $22,679. The month of March just closed is entitled to honorable mention in the list of bad months, as its fines amounted to $17,973. August was the only hot month in the running, and it finished a poor fourth with $17,574.50. November was the best month of the whole year, for only $11,290 in fines was its fine record. May had $14,538, July $13,217, September $13,059 October $17,429, February $12,939.

Out of a total of 9,319 persons who have faced Judge Harry Kyle in police court in the fiscal year, 7,273 have been convicted of offenses against the city ordinances, 1,682 have been acquitted and 364 cases have been dismissed. The year's fines total $193,689.50 of which amount $54,517 was collected in cash and the rest worked out at the rate of fifty cents a day, for each work day at the city workhouse, or remitted by stays of execution. The average fine was $27.

Immediately after he submitted it, Nelson Crews mailed his resignation to Thomas Crittenden, mayor-elect. Previously he had promised to resign with the close of the Beardsley administration, that Mr. Crittenden might lose no time appointing his successor.

A LOBBY FOR THE BUFFALO

THE PRESIDENT AND OTHERS GOT A BILL PASSED.

It Is Purposed to Set Aside 12,000 Acres in Montana as a Home for the Disappearing Game Animals of America.

WASHINGTON, April 18. — Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, and George Earl Grey, governor general of Canada, and other distinguished citizens on the North American continent, who have organized the American Bison association have proved themselves to be most effective lobbyists. When these friends of the buffalo discovered that their bill providing an appropriation of $30,000 to buy a game preserve in Montana could not pass the House they promptly had it attached to the agricultural appropriation bill as a rider. The Senate committee on agriculture took action to-day and there was not a dissenting vote.

DO NOT THRIVE IN ZOOS.

For several years the lovers of the American bison have by personal and literary appeal aroused a widespread interest in their movement to perpetuate the buffalo. It has been discovered that even the best zoological gardens were unfit for a home for the bison. The animals which once roamed the Western prairies by the millions were in a fair way to become extinct until the American Bison association was formed. It first attempted to induce the state of New York to purchase for $20,000 a preserve in the Adirondack mountains.

The bill passed the New York legislature by a unanimous vote, but Governor Hughes with his ready pen vetoed it. The next move was to set apart a game preserve in the Wichita mountains in Oklahoma. This joint action of Congress and the administration has resulted most satisfactorily, but the range is not extensive enough for the broad purposes of the association. The New York zoological gardens sent six bulls and twelve cows and heifers to the preserve in the Wichita mountains. The society in its report to Congress as a reason why the purchase in Montana should be made cites the Oklahoma preserves as an argument. Since the arrival of the herd in Oklahoma two calves have been born.

"We look forward to a herd of 100 in a few years," say the friends of the bison.

TO HAVE DEER THERE, TOO.

It is further set forth that it is the hope and expectation of the association that the Wichita preserve may shortly have American elk, prong-horned antelope and mule deer ranging on the bison range and that "they will thrive and multiply with their natural neighbors, the bison."

There is now a small herd of wild white-tailed deer inhabiting the mountains and timbers of the bison range. The preserve which it is purposed to purchase in Montana will contain 12,000 acres and is at the confluence of the Oreille and Jocko rivers. It is a part of the reservation of the Flathead tribe of Indians, and a private citizen has proved its superior advantages as a buffalo range by increasing his herd in a few years until he sold to a Canadian purchaser 400 head for $100,000.

The American Bison association pledges itself to stock the range without cost to the government. The range is conveniently located for sight-seers and is traversed for nine miles by a railroad, from Ravillo to Jocko.

STEAMER IN A COLLISION.

A Car Barge Rams a Hole Into the Coastwise Liner North Star.

NEW YORK, April 18.—The steamer North Star of the Maine Steamship line was seriously damaged in a collision with a loaded car float in Hellgate last night, while bound in from Portland, Me., with between eighty and a hundred passengers on board. A big hole was stove in the steamer's side, but she was able to proceed to her dock under her own steam. None of the crew or passengers was injured.

TOBACCO TRUST TO QUIT? BOSH!

The Rumor of a Voluntary Dissolution Vigorously Denied.

NEW YORK, April 18.—There is absolutely no foundation for a report that the American Tobacco company is about to be voluntarily dissolved, according to a statement made to-day by Caleb C. Dula, vice president of the company. Mr. Dula's statement was made after the return to this city of James B. Duke, after a visit to California.

Mr. Dula declared that the investigation of the company's affairs by the government has resulted in showing "unmistakably that the company has not in any respect violated the Sherman anti-trust law," or any other law.

"This story of voluntary dissolution of the American Tobacco company is absolutely false and without a shadow of foundation," said Mr. Dula. "The company's counsel and attorneys in the pending suit of the government of the United States are not only not frightened by the evidence gathered in that case, but they advise that the full disclosure of the affairs of the American Tobacco company, made by its officers and employees in that case, show most clearly and unmistakably that the company has not in any respect violated the Sherman anti-trust law or any other law, and that the result of the litigation is bound to be a victory for the American Tobacco company."

A CLEW TO DAISY SCOTT.

The Girl Given Away by Her Mother Now Married, C. M. Davey Says.

C. M. Davey, a real estate dealer of 1316 Indiana avenue, believes he can solve the mystery of the disappearance of the daughter of Mrs. Florence J. Scott of 1303 Wabash avenue. Mrs. Scott appealed Thursday to Mrs. Elizabeth Burns, police matron, for news of her daughter, Susan, from whom she was separated ten years ago.

Ten years ago Mrs. Scott was left a widow with four children to care for. She applied to Mrs. Mollie Lee, who was then police matron, and at Mrs. Lee's recommendation, gave away her daughter, Susan, to a Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Martin, who said they lived in Maryville, Mo. Mrs. Scott said she had written many letters to Maryville, but had received no answers.

"I believe I know where the girl is," Mr. Davey said yesterday afternoon. "Until four years ago I lived next door to the Martins in Maryville and although they never said the girl was not related to them I believe it was the child that was given away by Mrs. Scott. The Martins called her Daisy Martin, but she was the same age as Mrs. Scott's child. About five years ago Mrs. Martin died. Three years later, although she was only 15 years old, the girl married. I don't know the name of the man to whom she was married, but they are now living in Barnard, Mo."

Have You Hollow Sunken Cheeks?

Send for Free Trial Package and Prove It.

Are you nervous, weak, tired, rundown, dispirited, easily exhausted—in other words, do you feel limp as a rag at times? Do you ever have to stop right in the middle of your work to take a rest?

Rich Blood Is Bound to Build You Up. Read How to Do It.

Nearly every woman has these miserable experiences, and many such sufferers seek relief in secret remedies, containing harmful drugs and alcohol. If you are doing this stop it now, before you ruin your health completely. Your condition is bad enough without making it worse.

Your blood makes you what you are. Pure blood is just as sure to build you up and fill out your hollow, sunken cheeks as the sun rises and sets. Here is a remedy and tonic for the blood which is the most effective purifier ever discovered.

You need a tonic that will brace up the nervous system, cleanse the bowels, liver and kidneys, and enrich the blood. The best, purest, safest preparation to do this is Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are not a secret remedy. They do not contain harmful drugs, nor do they lose their medicinal power as most liquid medicines do, because these wafers are in tablet or lozenge form, which cannot deteriorate or evaporate.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain sulphide of calcium, the strongest blood purifier known; also golden seal, quassia, eucalyptus, belladonna and the vegetable alteratives and laxatives. These ingredients will restore the normal action of the bowels, liver and kidneys, invigorate the nerves and brain; make pure, rich, healthy blood; drive away that tired, wornout feeling and make you feel ten years younger.

You can obtain Stuart's Calcium Wafers in any drug store at only fifty cents a box, but if you have any doubts as to the merits of these wonderful calcium wafers, why send us your name and address and we will send you a free sample package, so you can give them a fair trial and convince yourself. TO OPEN A NEW CHURCH

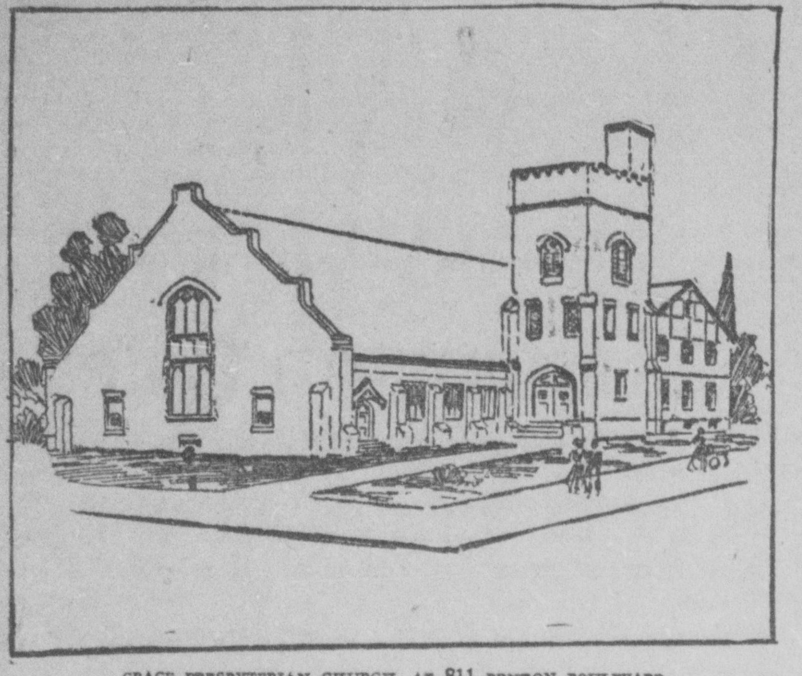
FIRST SERVICES IN THE GRACE PRESBYTERIAN EDIFICE TO-DAY.

The Rev. B. P. Fullerton of St. Louis to Preach the Easter Morning Sermon —A Description of the $50,000 Building.

The congregation of Grace Presbyterian church will celebrate the completion of the new edifice at 811 Benton boulevard by holding the Easter service there this morning. The morning sermon will be preached by the Rev. B. P. Fullerton of St. Louis, field secretary of the board of home missions. Dr. Fullerton built the First Cumberland Presbyterian church at Thirteenth and Oak streets twenty-seven years ago and was its pastor for twelve years.

The sermon to-night will be preached by the Rev. John H. Miller, stated clerk of the Missouri synod. Dr. Miller organized the former Fourth Presbyterian church, whose first home was on Washington street, near Seventeenth street, and was its pastor for several years.



GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, AT 811 BENTON BOULEVARD.

FORMAL OPENING THIS AFTERNOON.

The formal opening of the church will occur at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when informal talks will be made by several of the Presbyterian pastors of Kansas City.

Grace Presbyterian church was organized November 4, 1906, by the union of the former First Cumberland Presbyterian church at Thirteenth and Oak streets and the former Fourth Presbyterian church at Tenth street and Indiana avenue. The Rev. William Knowles Howe, the pastor, was formerly the pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Previous to coming to Kansas City he was pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Aurora, Mo.

A GYMNASIUM IN THE BASEMENT.

The new edifice was started a year ago from plans by Charles A. Smith. The building is of English Gothic design and is built of native stone and stucco. The roof is of Spanish tile. The first floor contains the auditorium, which has a seating capacity of about 400, Sunday school apartments, library and the pastor's study. There are three rooms in the Sunday school apartments, which are in the rear of the auditorium. Rolling partitions make it possible to throw all the rooms on the first floor into one, thus giving a total seating capacity of 700.

There is a reception room over the Sunday school apartments where 250 guests can be received, also a parlor and kitchen, intended for meetings of the various church organizations. The building and land cost $50,000.

Once More.

From the Youth's Companion.

As the mild eyed, slow spoken man turned from the car window to regard his seat companion his gaze fell on the great letters heading the account of an accident. "That's the only way to do it," he said half to himself.

"What's the only way?" asked the other man.

"Write it," said the mild eyed man. "Then folks will read it; they won't listen to you telling it.

"If you've been in the most thrilling accident in the history of the nation and begin to relate your experience they'll sit with their mouths open, but not from amazement, O no!"

"No?" echoed the other.

"No, sir," said the mild eyed man, "It's so that the first time you stop for breath they can burst into the middle of your story to tell about the accidents they were in; or if they weren't ever in any, about the ones their father' great uncles or their second cousins-in-law were in."

"You speak bitterly," said his companion with interest. "What experience have you had?"

"I was out in San Francisco the day of the earthquake," said the mild eyed man, "and my hotel——"

"What hotel were you in?" asked the other. "My sister and her husband were——"

"There!" said the mild eyed man, and he turned his head to the window and did not speak again till he said good-bye as he clambered out over the other man's feet.

Cuban Women Do Not Shop.

From the New York Press.

Women do not shop in Cuba, even among the many stores in Havana. Servants go to market, and our own department store is represented by peddlers who travel along the country roads. Life is simple in the villages. A few clothes last many a year. The notion peddler and the shoe peddler seem to supply all the needs of the average Cuban woman. In a land of mantillas a milliner would starve to death. The shoeman carries little stock, for the two smallest sizes of shoes made in the United States—one and one and a half—fit the whole feminine population. Even the Cuban laborer is fitted with a size that averages four and a half, and often with shoes as small as three.

The Keramic Club's Exhibit.

The twelfth annual exhibit of the Kansas City Keramic club will be held at Swan's, 1018 Grand avenue, beginning Tuesday evening, April 21, and continuing the balance of the week. The club has obtained the collection of old Japanese prints owned by E. T. Shima for this exhibit. On Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock Mr. Shima will lecture on "Japanese Genre Painting."

WHERE "ROOKIES" ARE BAGGED.

A Famous British Army Recruiting Station to Be Removed.

Another London landmark, and one that probably is familiar to most traveled Americans, will soon disappear. It is the recruiting place for the British army near Trafalgar square, probably the oddest post of its kind kept up by any government, but one that has been maintained by England for more than twenty years. It is situated on the sidewalk of St. Martin's lane, close to the National gallery corner, and appertains to St. George's barracks just behind the famous square. These barracks are to be torn down to make room for the new wing of the gallery and when the work of demolition begins the sergeants who hang about the corner on the lookout for raw material for the British army will seek recruits elsewhere.

On the iron fence which here stands between the gallery and the sidewalk hang billboards on which are depicted in brilliant colors the various types of the British army. Below these various figures are printed the requirements of the particular branch of the service represented, its peculiar advantages, the rates of pay, etc., concluding with "God Save the King!" in big type as an appeal to patriotism. The recruiting force on duty varies according to the needs of the army. When any branch of the army falls so far below its complement as to make canvassing necessary, sergeants, selected for their stalwart physiques and persuasive powers, are sent to this corner with instructions to bring in all the "rookies" they can get hold of. As for every accepted candidate the war office divides a bonus of $5 among the sergeants engaged in recruiting for the arm in which he enlists, the wearers of the chevrons need no urging. No sooner does a likely looking youth stop to look at the pictures than the sergeants pounce upon him, much as do the "ropers in" for some cheap clothing store in America when a prospective customer appears in sight. He is beguiled with stories of the glorious opportunities which the army offers a poor man to see something of the world. He is told of Sir Hector Macdonald and other famous soldiers who have risen from the ranks. He is reminded that with $2 or $3 a week as a dead sure thing and food, clothing and shelter found, the soldier is really much better off than the average hardfisted toiler in civil life with whom employment is of uncertain duration and the necessity of providing himself with board and lodging is ever present.

It is only when a youth looks as though he would be able to pass the doctor, however, that the sergeants really let themselves out to capture him. So expert have they become in sizing up raw material that they can tell at a glance whether a man possesses the necessary physical qualifications to don the king's uniform. It is said to be a poor day when the staff does not bring in eight or ten who will pass muster. From this Trafalgar square station more recruits have been obtained than from any other post in the kingdom. But despite all the efforts made to make the army popular nearly every branch of it is at present below its full strength.

A Portland Horse That Faints.

From the Portland Oregonian.

Walter Rosenfeld, the well known cigar merchant, has a horse that faints. Mr. Rosenfeld is not sure that his fancy roadster Coolie fainted, but Milton Kahn is certain of the fact and he swears that if Mr. Rosenfeld's horse had not fainted they would have both been killed last Friday night.

It seems that Mr. Rosenfeld and Mr. Kahn were enjoying a drive on the Linnton road. It was quite dark and just as they were rounding one of the turns in the road, without lights, a big automobile and a pair of spooning lovers in the front seat, came tearing straight at the buggy. Mr. Rosenfeld tried to swing his horse out of the way, when suddenly the horse collapsed. The driver of the automobile came to his senses quickly and stopped his car just a few feet from the prostrate animal.

Just to add to the excitement the lady in the machine fainted also, and Mr. Kahn was in a quandary for a minute whether to apply restoratives to the woman or to Mr. Rosenfeld's horse.

In the Padded Cells.

From Judge.

"Who is that young man there repeating to himself, 'Eighty-nine, ninety, ninety-one' all the time?"

"He was saving a thousand coupons for a meerschaum pipe, and the company went bankrupt on his nine hundred and ninety-first."

CHINA THAT PIERCE USED

A Steward Who Bought Part of the Set When Arthur Ordered the "Rubbish" Sold Returns It—Owned Four Pieces.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The White house collection of presidential china, which has come to be a great attraction of the home of Presidents, has received another valuable addition, this time of several pieces of the state dining set of the Pierce administration. The newly acquired china is among the rarest of this historic collection and for a long time it seemed impossible to find any of it, except a few pieces in the hands of wealthy collectors who did not wish to part with it.

Two years ago Mrs. Abby G. Baker, who is in charge of the presidential ware, went to New Hampshire to see Frank Pierce, the nephew and one of the few remaining immediate relatives of President Pierce, but found that there was none of the famous china in his family, although authentic records describing it had been preserved.

Some months ago a friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, through a curio dealer, secured a teacup and saucer of the Pierce set and two cups and saucers of the Buchanan china, and these she presented to Mrs. Roosevelt, who turned them over to the White house collection.

Through the dealer of whom the china was purchased it was learned that William T. Crump, who was steward of the White house under Hayes, Garfield and Arthur, now a resident of Washington, had some of the most valuable White house relics in the country. Mr. Crump was seen, and through the generosity of his daughter, Miss Harriet B. Crump, to whom he had given the china, the collection is enriched by four pieces of the Pierce set, a gift which adds inestimably to the cabinets.

Mr. Crump's account of the china is most interesting. When President Hayes came into the White house there were a great many odd pieces belonging to state sets of china which dated from almost every administration from Jefferson's day, and the old original kitchen in the basement, the present boiler room, was stored with cracked, nicked and injured table ware and other discarded articles of the White house. These things continued to accumulate until President Arthur came in, and then, as the dining table was well supplied with the many-pieced set which Mrs. Hayes had ordered, he, without realizing their historic worth, discarded the odd pieces in the china closets.

He directed that they should be sold and that the "rubbish" should be disposed of in the old kitchen. At that sale Mr. Crump purchased many pieces of the historic ware, and it is the pieces of the Pierce set which were thus secured which his daughter has now presented to the White house. They consist of a covered vegetable dish, an exquisite fruit dish on a standard, a breakfast plate and a small sauce dish. Each piece is banded with the well known red border and outlined with gold.

MISS VAUGHAN'S HOMECOMING.

Georgia Brown's Daughter Here Next Week in the Play "Strongheart."

Miss Evelyn Brown, daughter of Mrs. Georgia Brown of this city, known upon the stage as Evelyn Vaughan, will be at the Grand next week as leading woman for Ralph Stuart in "Strongheart," the college play used several seasons by Robert Edeson. Last year Miss Vaughan had the title part in George Ade's comedy, "The College Widow." Miss Vaughan won her first success as an actress while leading woman for the University of Kansas Dramatic society. Her work as an amateur attracted attention and she was engaged to play in stock, from which she passed to a road company and eventually to "The College Widow."

NEW MARRIAGE LAWS TO-DAY

A Practical Ban on Mixed Marriages, the Limitation of Jurisdiction of Priests and Other Provisions to Govern Wedlock.

NEW YORK, April 18.—With Easter day the Catholic church in this country will adopt the new rules on marriage contained and prescribed in the recent papal document, Ne temere. In every church, chapel and mission the pastor in charge to-morrow morning will direct the attention of the laity to the prescriptions of Pius X's decisions relating to the sanctity of the marriage state.

All the archbishops of the country have issued to their clergy messages and commentaries on the papal document. Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Glennon of St. Louis and Ryan of Philadelphia have supplemented the pope's decree with special instructions that interpret its significance for the Catholics of the United States.

ARCHBISHOP FARLEY'S INTERPRETATION.

Here in New York, Archbishop Farley has addressed an official document to the clergy of the archdiocese of New York, explaining the provisions of the new legislation.

The most radical change in the present laws is that relating to the jurisdiction of priests and mixed marriages.

"The decree," Archbishop Farley says, "effects a very radical change in our present discipline with regard to mixed marriages, which, after Easter, will not be valid unless contracted before a priest having jurisdiction over marriage in the place in which the marriage ceremony is performed. Even when a dispensation has been obtained, the marriage, in order to be valid, must be performed by a priest having such jurisdiction."

LIMITS THE RIGHTS OF PRIESTS.

The limitation of the jurisdiction of priests in this respect is one of the chief clauses in the papal document and Archbishop Farley has especially directed the attention of his clergy to that clause. In plain words, no priest can go into another city, town, village or hamlet and perform a marriage ceremony validly, unless he has first received authorization from the episcopal authorities or their administrators. The only exception to this is in the case where the circumstances are such that "marriage is necessary to relieve conscience," as in the case of a person about to die, and so "legitimatize any offspring there may be."

Village Prohibits the Use of Tobacco.

From the St. Paul Dispatch.

ECHO, MINN.—The lid has been put on the pipe and cigarette in Echo, so far as school children and boys under 18 years of age are concerned. At their last meeting the school board appointed the chief of police as truant officer with instructions to round up scholars who stay out of school and to strictly enforce the law regulating the sale of tobacco and its use by scholars. The police have already been busy. All dealers in tobacco have been warned and business men instructed to allow no smoking by young men attending school, or under 18 years of age in stores.

THE LOST FIND THEMSELVES

MORMONS FROM UTAH GOING TO SEE THE BIG FLEET.

Since the '40s the Tide of Civilization Has Swept Past a Settlement of 100 Persons—Just Learning Something of the World.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 18.—Within a fortnight 100 or more simple beings will step out of the late '40s into to-day.

For nearly sixty years these quaint folk have lived in remote parts of Utah. They are the few who remain of the motley bands which followed the Mormon prophet, Brigham Young, across the plains from Nauvoo, Ill. Some were captains of "hundreds" or "fifties." Others were of the rank and file of the companies which journeyed in emigrant trains or pushed handcarts from the Missouri river across the apparently interminable prairie to the Rocky mountains and to Zion.

Some came as men and women, who are now spending the twilight of their lives at toil, and others came as children, who to-day have only the vaguest recollections of the forbidding trip over prairie and sagebrush desert. Some are the offspring of those whose bones lie bleaching beside the "Emigrant way," or are lost forever in unmarked graves on the great American plains.

THEY WERE LOST TO THE WORLD.

These people are almost entirely ignorant of the wondrous changes which have been wrought in the West since 1847. They recount vague tales of territorial days when the redoubtable Brigham set up his patriarchy and, with his Nauvoo legion, openly defied the authority of the United States. They remember the Lamanites and the Danites. The Utah expedition under Colonel Albert Sidney Johnson and the establishment of an army post at Fort Douglas by General "Pat" Connor are vivid in their minds. Together with exciting memories incident upon the early settlement of Utah, these weird thoughts of the long ago completely filled the little world in which the forlorn "saints" have lived.

ARE GOING TO SEE THE FLEET.

With the advent of a new people Utah has changed. There is not a man or woman in the state who does not know that Uncle Sam has sent a great fleet of battle ships half way around the world. For months the main topic of conversation has been the long voyage of the warships.

Gradually the latent germs of country-pride and patriotism which has become almost moribund in some hearts has been rejuvenated, and young and old alike are determined to journey to San Francisco to see the fleet.

The 100 will emanate from the 'ong ago into the now. For the first time in their lives they will gaze upon urban life. In the short space of a few days new scenes, new thoughts, new desires, new hopes will be crowded into their minds with a rapidity that will figuratively stun.

K. U. BOYS AND THEIR GAMES.

LAWRENCE, KAS., April 18.—When the boys at the University of Kansas have a few minutes to spare between classes they amuse themselves with two diversions—one exceedingly old, the other rather new. Pitching horseshoes and the game of crackaloo are the two sports.

The Engineers are the devotees to the time honored horseshoe pitching. They have a plot of ground staked off near the Fowler shops and, finding themselves free for fifteen or twenty minutes, they choose up sides and test their skill in pitching the shoe. They have developed some star players and have challenged the other schools, but to no avail. The boys in the other schools have some other amusement and cannot interest the boys in overalls.

The "Laws," the bitter enemies of the Engineers, have devised a game comparatively new at the university. It is called crackaloo. The boys of the Law school have even more time to play than the Engineers, consequently, at almost any time of the day, five or six fellows may be seen in front of Green hall, the Law building, intent on a game of crackaloo.

The game is nothing more than pitching a dollar at a crack in the cement walk. The science of the game lies in the ability to hit the crack or come as close to it as possible. The game can be played for fun or for keeps. When playing for keeps the lucky man, that is the man coming nearest to the crack, is awarded five cents from each of the other contestants. It is said that two or three of the boys have become so skillful at it that they make enough money to pay their necessary expenses while in school.

The "Laws" received a challenge not long ago from the Engineers to engage in a tug of war. The challenge was eagerly accepted, but the match was forbidden by the university authorities, as it was feared that it would result in an old-fashioned "scrap."

HE'S FOR MUSIC IN THE PARKS.

A Suggestion That the Park Commissioners Hire the Best Musicians.

To The Star: What is the board of park commissioners going to do about music in the parks this summer?

I am heartily in favor of employing a good band to give regular concerts. Let not the question of union or nonunion musicians enter into the contract. A dispute of this nature, in my opinion, spoiled the park music one season. I say if the best musicians belong to the union, why, by all means, let us hire them and have good music even if it comes a little higher. "Them's my sentiments," and I believe most music lovers feel the same way.

DEFEATS CHIRO-PRACTICE BILL.

Senator Stanford's Measure Overruled in the Oklahoma Senate Yesterday.

GUTHRIE, OK., April 18.—By a vote of almost two to one the senate to-day defeated Senator Standford's bill recognizing the chiro-practice school of medicine in Oklahoma. The bill would have permitted a chiro-practice college to grant diplomas to graduates. The chiro-practices have maintained a costly lobby at Guthrie ever since the sitting of the legislature.

YOUNG GIRL WON DAMAGE SUIT.

A Shawnee, Ok., Electric Light Firm Must Pay May Sears, Aged 15, $10,000.

SHAWNEE, OK., April 18.—Fifteen-year-old May Sears of Shawnee has won a law suit in the supreme court of Oklahoma that gives her $10,000 with two years' interest as damages for the loss of a leg. Two years ago the little girl was walking along a street in Shawnee when she came in contact with a live wire of the Shawnee Light and Power company, receiving injuries that for many days threatened to prove fatal. One leg was so badly burned that it had to be amputated, but she recovered. In a suit in the lower court before Judge Burwell, she was awarded $10,000 and this has been affirmed by the supreme court of the state.

EMALINE AND A BULLDOG.

The Junior Clerk's Wedding Present Caused Another Disaster.

"Because I'm-m-m Married-d-d-d-d now-w-w," the office boy was near-singing, and the noise caused the junior clerk to turn uneasily on his high stool.

"Regular Italian, always harpin' on something," he muttered; "wonder you can't let up on something once in awhile." The office boy changed the tune and began to whistle, but the junior clerk's temper became no better.

"Well," the office boy said, "loosen up an' get it out of your system. There's somethin' comin'. Might as well tell it—it'll worry you if you don't."

"Kiddin' me about it?"

"Naw, gwan."

"We've busted up housekeepin'—for the present," the junior clerk said "An' right after we'd started, too. You know Emaline an' I got one o' these foolish flats—one of that kind that you gotta go into sideways an' then slide out again to turn around, one of that kind where you can sneeze in the kitchen an' ruffle th' curtains in the parlor at th' same time. Well, as I was sayin', we moved in an' then Emaline started lookin' over her weddin' presents. Honest, never saw so much cut glass an' all that kind of junk—musta been a carload. Well, Emaline gets it all out an' piles it on the dinin' room table an' just about that time I remembered I hadn't bought her any present.

"BECAUSE I'M MARRIED-D-D NOW-W-W," THE OFFICE BOY WAS NEAR-SINGING.

"'Be back in a minute,' I says as I jams on my hat an' starts out. Got down th' street a little ways an' somebody stops me.

"'Wanta buy a dog?' he asks, pointin' to the worst lookin' bulldog I ever saw.

"'Just what Emaline wants,' I thought, 'I'll get it. Gentle?' I asks.

"'Gentle as a flock of lambs,' th' guy said, 'lessen you want 'im to be ugly. Then you grab 'm by th' shoulders an' point 'im where you want him to bite. He'll get it all right.'

"I forked over $8.92 an' started home with the insect.

"Emaline was still a-fussin' with th' cut glass an' the hand painted china when I blew in with Xeniphon.

"'Who's Xeniphon?' the office boy inquired.

"The dog—think it was a box car? Yessir, Emaline was just dippy about th' thing. Looked at him for a minute an' then asks if he'll bite.

"'Will he bite?' I asks, 'all you gotta do is grab him like this an——'

"'Y-a-a-a-h-h-h-h,' Emaline yells an' starts for the parlor an' the dog right after her. He thought I'd siced' him an' he certainly was goin' the limit. I tried to hold on to the chain, but that brute sure was strong. Jerked me off my feet an' dragged me along just as if I wasn't anything at all. Emaline dodged 'round the table an' the dog went right after her, chewin' air at every jump. Got me tangled up in the table an' the next thing I knew I was trying to swim out of two wagon loads of broken glass an' china. Emaline rushed into the bath room an' shut the door. But that didn't stop Xenophon. He butted the door like a goat an' pulled me through after him.

"'HOLD HIM!' I SHOUTED. 'THINK I'M A DERRICK?'"

"'Hold him!' Emaline yells as she hiked out the door again.

"'Hold him!' I shouts, 'think I'm a derrick? Why don't you get out the way?' 'Bout that time Emaline sees a shotgun an' grabs it. Then she trips an' falls. Gun went off an' blew a hole through the floor of the flat above. Things were gettin' serious.

"'Bout that time one of Emaline's shoes came off an' Xenophon grabbed it. He swallowed it whole an' that's just what saved us. Thing got stuck in his throat an' choked him to death.

"'Bigamist!' Emaline yells when it's all over. 'Tired of me already! Wanta kill me an' marry again.'"

"An' I suppose she's gone home to mother?" the office boy interrupted.

"Worse'n that, worse'n that," the junior clerk murmured sadly. "She's goin' to bring her mother to live with us."

HOSTS MAY SERVE DRINKS

OKLAHOMA "HOSPITALITY" BEYOND THE GOVERNOR'S DROUTHY MIGHT

Many Were Frightened When the Executive Said He Would Have No "Booze" Parties at Home, but the Courts Limit His Power.

GUTHRIE, OK. April 18.—There was some disquietude among Oklahomans when they heard lately that Governor Haskell would instruct officers of the law to prosecute persons who entertained guests by serving beverages that could be used in sufficient quantity to produce intoxication. Governor Haskell said he did not purpose that there should be any "booze" parties in Oklahoma.

A booze party could be construed, of course, to mean a social function where the guests were served by the host with any intoxicating beverage, from a small glass of beer to a quart of champagne for each person at the table.

Lawyers who have looked into the matter, however, are of the opinion that Governor Haskell's zeal to make statewide prohibition prevent the use of intoxicants for any purpose, except medicinal, exceeded his technical knowledge of the law. The state attorney general, upon whom the governor relies for current interpretation of the law, has not given an opinion on the dispensing of intoxicants by a host to his guests, and it is doubtful that the authorities on the shelves in the office of the attorney general would permit him to agree with Governor Haskell.

The "Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure" is accepted by most lawyers as authoritative. On page 181, volume 23, is this language:

> Even under the statutes prohibiting selling or disposing of intoxicating liquors, it is no offense to give liquors in one's own house to his family, domestic servants or invited guests, as a mere act of kindness or hospitality, and with no purpose to evade or break the law.

This statement of law is upheld by the citation of cases in Indiana, Illinois, Alabama, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Vermont and other states.

A BRYAN PENNSYLVANIA CLAIM.

Delegates Will Be Instructed for the Nebraskan, It Is Asserted.

LINCOLN, NEB., April 18.—Warren Wirth Bailey of Johnstown, Pa., secretary of the Bryan Democratic League of Pennsylvania, claims the Keystone state for William J. Bryan. He sent the following telegram to Charles W. Bryan today:

> Fifty-one of the sixty-four district delegates to the national convention chosen by popular vote at the uniform primaries are for Bryan. The Bryan Democratic league candidates in James M. Guffey's district were successful. Outside Philadelphia nearly every Bryan Democratic league candidate won at the polls, and even there our candidates were defeated only by Republican help for the Donnelly-Ryan organization candidates. The latter, however, are all pledged to Bryan, but will follow the Guffey lead. The delegates to the state convention are almost all Bryan men, Bryan's friends will control the convention, will write the platform, select delegates at large and instruct them for Bryan. Reports spread broadcast from reactionary sources to the effect that Pennsylvania will go to Denver uninstructed are absolutely false.

ITALY TO INTIMIDATE TURKEY.

The Duke of the Abruzzi to Lead a Naval Demonstration.

ROME, April 18.—Orders have been issued for an Italian squadron to make a demonstration in Turkish waters, the reason being that Turkey has objected to the opening of Italian postoffices in Turkish territory such as are maintained by other countries. This proposed demonstration is in no way connected with the Tripoli situation, which arises from the murder of an Italian missionary and the persecution by the Ottoman authorities of natives who have sold land to Italians.

The battle ship commanded by the Duke of the Abruzzi forms part of the squadron. Orders have been issued for the duke to be ready to sail with his command.

SUFFOCATED IN THEIR REFUGE.

A Dispossessed New York Family Went From Poverty to Worse.

NEW YORK, April 18.—One person was killed and three others overcome by coal gas in the boiler room of a house in West One Hundred and Fifty-fourth street early to-day. Thomas Quinn, 41 years old, his wife, Alice, and their son, John, aged 14, were taken to a hospital in a dangerous condition, but will recover. Another son, Joseph, aged 6, was dead when found. The family had been dispossessed yesterday and sought shelter in the boiler room last night.

The Death of a Kansas City Jurist.

FREDONIA, KAS., April 18—Judge Alfred Craig, who settled in this county in 1859, died here to-day. He had served as county commissioner, justice of the peace and police judge in this city. He was a member of Company G, Ninth Kansas cavalry. He will be buried with Masonic honors to-morrow.

AFTER PITTSBURG JOINTISTS.

The Kansas Supreme Court May Prosecute Saloonists for Contempt.

TOPEKA, April 18.—The jointists at Pittsburg—seventeen of them—may be prosecuted for contempt of the supreme court for violating the order of the court prohibiting the city from accepting money from jointists in lieu of license fees. Contempt proceedings were brought some time since against the firemen and policemen of the city and Frank Linski for violating the court order, and the answers of these men were filed in the court to-day. The firemen were said to have sold their warrants to Frank Linski, who collected money from the jointists to pay these warrants. It was charged that in this way the order of the court was violated.

Linski, in his answer, admits that there was deposited to his account in a Pittsburg bank certain sums of money, about $4,600 in all, and that he issued checks to the firemen and policemen to pay their salaries and took up their warrants from the city. He says that he did not solicit this money and does not know who told the jointists to make the deposits.

Fourteen of the firemen admit that they sold their warrants to Linski, while eight make general denials of the entire charges.

It is the intention of the attorney general to begin taking testimony in this case at once to determine who told the jointists to pay the money to Linski, and this may bring out further contempt proceedings in addition to the charges against the jointists. The attorney general believes that the jointists, in paying the money, violated the order of the court by depositing the money to the credit of Linski, in that way evading the ouster suit.

SOLDIER SHOT A SERGEANT.

A Canadian Petty Officer Dead From a Drunken Man's Bullet.

LONDON, ONTARIO, April 18.—Color Sergeant Harry L. Lloyd of the Twenty-eighth regiment of Stratford, was shot and killed by Private Moyer of the Royal Canadian regiment at Wolsey barracks last night.

Moyer appeared in an intoxicated condition and Lloyd reprimanded him and ordered him to his quarters. Shortly afterwards an orderly reported an unusual noise coming from Moyer's room and notified Lloyd, who, with the orderly, went to investigate. As they opened the door Moyer covered Lloyd with a rifle, shouted "hands up," and in the next instant shot him through the breast. Dropping tthe rifle, Moyer secured a revolver and chased the orderly who escaped injury.

Moyer escaped in the darkness and has not yet been captured. Lloyd lived only a few minutes.

CAPTURED AN ACID THROWER.

St. Louis Man Disfigured His Wife Five Years Ago, It Is Said.

ST. LOUIS, April 18.—After being sought for five years on the charge of having disfigured his wife by dashing carbolic acid into her face, Frank Cullen Keeney was recognized on the street today by Hubert R. Estes, an insurance man, the father of the victim, and arrested.

The acid throwing resulted from anger because Keeney's wife had filed suit for divorce. Keeney met her on the street and failing to effect a reconciliation, dashed acid into her face, disfiguring her. He escaped and no trace of him was found until to-day. Meanwhile the wife won her suit and remarried. Her home is in New York, but she is here on a visit and declares she will prosecute her ex-husband. Keeney declined to make any statement following his arrest.

FOR A UNION OF METHODISTS.

A New York Conference Is in Favor of One Organization.

SARATOGA, N. Y., April 18.—At the session to-day of the Troy conference of the Methodist Episcopal church a memorial to the general conference was adopted requesting that body to take some action looking toward organic union of the Methodist Episcopal, Free Methodist, Wesleyan Methodist and other Methodist bodies.

The conference decided by an almost unanimous vote to take no action on a memorial asking that the paragraph forbidding dancing, card playing and theater going, be stricken from the book of discipline.

A LEAKY BOAT COST A LIFE.

Three Muskogee, Ok., Boys Were Rowing on a Pond—Two Escaped.

MUSKOGEE, OK., April 18.—Oliver Veach, 14 years old, was drowned in a small pond within the city limits to-day. With two companions he was trying a new boat when it sprang a leak. The boys jumped out and started to swim to shore. Two of them got out, but when they looked back Veach had gone down and before help could reach him he was dead.

Tenth Ward Club to Attend a Funeral.

The Tenth Ward Republican club will attend the funeral of C. E. Burnham this afternoon in a body. Members are requested to meet at Twenty-sixth street and Prospect avenue at 1:45 o'clock.

GOING! GOING!

The auctioneer's hammer was never more final and absolute than our closing announcement to-day. We have reached the end of our contract. The few remaining sets of a world famous library now in our hands are going rapidly. Within a few days they will all be GONE, and we cannot obtain another volume at any price. Our readers are aware that for several months we have been direct distributers for the NEW WERNER 20TH CENTURY

ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA

Our Co-operative Club plan has actually saved our subscribers FIVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS. But its very success has proved its undoing. The publishers of the higher-priced English edition have secured the withdrawal of the American edition absolutely in their favor. This has left us—as distributing agent— powerless to supply sets beyond the few hundred now in our hands. We therefore give fair warning.

IT IS NOW OR NEVER!

By responding by return mail you may obtain this magnificent library at HALF the publisher's price, and on small payments. The entire set of 31 massive volumes is sent you at once, for every member of the family to read and enjoy.

For more than one hundred years the Encyclopaedia Britannica has occupied the foremost rank as a self-educator and work of reference. At intervals new and enlarged editions of the work have been published, thus keeping pace with the progress of the world. The New Werner 20th Century Edition which we now offer occupies 31 magnificent volumes, containing nearly 25,000 pages, and covers every department of knowledge known to mankind.

You will never again have an opportunity like this. Act quickly. The delay of a single day may make you too late!

ONLY 198 SETS LEFT

As a result of an agreement between the English and American publishers, the Twentieth Century (American) Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica is to be entirely withdrawn. Our Encyclopaedia Club must close at once. Then the remarkable opportunity we have been able to offer you will be a thing of the past. Do not mistake what this means to you. A small first payment, and we at once deliver to you the set of 31 superb volumes. You pay for the books from month to month in sums so small as to amount to but a few cents a day. You cannot afford to neglect this opportunity to equip your home with this splendid Library, which will bring you and your children pleasure and profit the rest of your days. This is your last chance. When the last set is shipped your opportunity will have passed. We have on hand a limited number of oak bookcases, made especially for these sets. They will be given free of charge to all who order through the coupon below.

NINE INNINGS TO A TIE

THE FOURTH BLUE-HOOSIER GAME CALLED ON ACCOUNT DARKNESS.

The Count Was 6 to 6—Clyde Goodwin Made His Debut as a Kansas City Pitcher and Performed Creditably.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., April 18.—The Blues and the Hoosiers battled here to-day to a nine-inning tie, the score being 6 to 6 when Umpire Owens called the fray on account of darkness. Played on a slippery field and under a threatening sky, the struggle was full of unexpected turns and kept 2,800 bugs in the wildest excitement.

FOR baseball news call only Main 24 and Main 25. Baseball inquiries not answered on other Star numbers.

Druhot is about the size of a sardine, but he has all kinds of curves and a fair amount of speed.

LINDSAY'S FINE HIT.

The visitors were all to the good for six innings, piling up a total of four runs at the rate of one at a clip. Chris Lindsay played second for the Browns, Otto Williams being shoved over to take Bush's place at shortstop, the latter youngster being hurt in a collision yesterday with a certain hardheaded Swann, who was not feazed at all. Chris was under a cloud for five frames. He materially assisted the Blues to two runs and acted like he was trying to help his old friends. However, in the sixth inning, with the bases full, our esteemed Brown utility infielder came to the front with a slashing triple that never hesitated until it struck the fence. It was at this critical period that Leahy, the Blue backstop, got into the struggle on the wrong side of the fence from his manager's standpoint. Hopke drew a pass and attempted to steal second, when Mr. Leahy, with a wild heave in an attempt to cut off the Brown third baseman, shot the ball into center field, Lindsay capering home.

In the seventh the Browns jumped into the lead, Coulter drawing a pass, going to second on Hayden's sacrifice and trotting home on Carr's single to right. The lead was short lived for Mr. Brashear, who, with one Mr. Beckley, formed a stumbling block for the Hoosiers all during the series, poled a triple into deep center and came home on Cross's bunt. Leahy forced Cross at second, and Krueger went to third, cantering home on Goodwin's single to center.

Hopke started things in the eight for the Browns with a clean single. This combined with a bad throw of Leahy's to first filled the bases. Hopke again tied up the score when he raced home on Hayden's long fly to Hill.

GOODWIN HAD SPEED.

Neither team was able to do anything in the ninth. With one man down Druhot was chased and Tevis, Carr's Texas league recruit, was sent in. He had barrels of speed, and the Blues faded away in short order. Goodwin's speed and the falling darkness combined to put the Browns out of the run getting business, and Mr. Owens's guttural exclamation, which may mean strike, ball, safe, out, or whatever you want it to mean was interperted to mean "darkness" and thus ended the fourth game of as lively a series as has been witnessed on the local lot in many seasons. President Joseph O'Brien of the American association witnessed the game from the president's box, and was highly pleased with the showing of the teams. They are both unusually strong, if one may judge from to-day's playing. The score:

OTHER ASSOCIATION GAMES.

The Columbus Champions Made It Four Straight From St. Paul.

COLUMBUS, April 18.—Odwell, Kruger, Friel and Congalton got singles in the seventh inning that pulled Columbus through to the fourth straight victory over St. Paul. Noonan, whose hitting was the feature of the game, was put off the field in the eighth. The score:

BROOKLYN, April 18.—The New York Nationals shut out the Brooklyn team to-day by a score of 4 to 0. Mathewson's pitching, the feature of the game, was very effective. His only weak inning was the fifth when, with two out and two on bases, he filled the bases with a gift on balls to Pastorius, but the next man, Pattee, was an easy out at first, Mathewson covering the bag. VICTORY FOR JAYHAWKERS

HASKELL BRAVES FINISHED SECOND IN A 3 TO 0 CONTEST.

Connell, the Indian Pitcher, Held Kansas Without a Hit for Six Innings, but Weakened in the Seventh—Harlan Allowed Only Three Hits.

LAWRENCE, KAS., April 18.—After a break of three years in athletic relations, the University of Kansas and Haskell Indians clashed in a brilliant baseball exhibition this afternoon, the Jayhawkers winning the contest by a 3 to 0 count. For six innings of snappy and consistent baseball neither side could dent the home plate with a run, the Jayhawkers getting but one man to first in these innings and that on a base on balls. Then Connell, the Redskin twirler, weakened and a base on balls and timely singles by Carlson and Angney netted the university nine a pair of scores. The following inning another base on balls and a hit by Young gave Kansas its third and last score.

It was a pretty pitchers' battle throughout. Harlan was touched for two two baggers and three singles during the contest, but they were all scattered and only once in the second inning did the Indians seem really dangerous, but fast fielding nipped the redskins' only chance of scoring. Thirteen strikeouts were also chalked up to the Jayhawkers' speedy twirler's credit during the contest. Connell's work on the mound was brilliant for six innings, not a semblance of a hit being gathered by the university lads, but he tired and was batted freely during the last two sessions.

The fielding on both sides was brilliant. The redskins pulled off the entire contest without a sign of a bobble, while the Jayhawkers' only error came on a difficult chance at second. The game to-day is the first of a series of three games, which the athletic manager at the university has scheduled for this spring. Three years ago last fall the Jayhawkers and Haskells had a dispute over the eligibility of three of the redskins' football stars, and after much wrangling and fruitless negotiations the big football contest was called off the day before the game. Since then, while there was no formal rupture of athletic relations, the two schools have never met on the athletic field. The scheduling of games again with the Indians will probably mean the resumption of athletics in every department in the near future.

"Athletic relations have never been broken with Haskell," said the Kansas manager to-day. "We simply did not care to play each other. However, the Haskell baseball schedule and our own had several open dates this spring and we got together and scheduled a series of three games. We will not play Haskell football next fall, as we have no place for them on our schedule, although in the near future we may again schedule a gridiron game with the Indians."

WENTWORTH DEFEATED CENTRAL.

The Cadets Finished Strong Against the Fayette Collegians.

LEXINGTON, MO., April 18.—In one of the most exciting games of the season the Wentworth Military academy baseball team defeated the Central college team of Fayette to-day by the score of 6 to 5. At the end of the seventh inning the score stood 2 to 1 in favor of Central. During the first half of the eighth, through errors, Central ran in three runs, but in the Cadets' half the Soldiers knocked Cox, Central's pitcher, off the rubber and tied the score. Central was shut out in the ninth and Kelly of the Cadet team brought in the winning run by a Texas leaguer. The feature of the game was Upton's pitching and the batting rally of the Cadets in the eighth. Batteries—Central, Cox, Clingenpell and Ferrell; Wentworth, Upton and Ahrens.

Double Header at Stevens Park.

There will be two games this afternoon at Stevens park, Twenty-fourth and Summit. The first game, between the Bentons and H. C. Hulls, will be called at 1 o'clock. The second contest will be between the R. S. Stevens and Master Plumbers. Following is the lineup of the Stevens-Plumbers game:

JACK CANNON, DEMIGOD.

Martin A. Delaney, the athletic director of the Kansas City Athletic club, is meeting with great success in his plan of coaching the ward school athletes by sending instructors to the various schools at least twice a week. These assistant coaches are drilled by Delaney by means of blackboard talks. They have been received with open arms, so to speak, by the boys of the ward schools. The lads listen with rapt attention to every word the instructor speaks. Many amusing incidents have resulted from this method of teaching the ward schoolers how and what they must do to become proficient in athletics.

A good story is told on Jack Cannon, the captain of the Kansas City Athletic club track team. Jack was delegated to tell the boys of the Garfield school everything in the world about athletics. Jack always has the goods with him, so he covered the assignment. The 12-year-old son of a prominent Kansas City minister is a pupil in the Garfield school and the lad was all the eager attention when Cannon was orating. Several days thereafter the boy's father found his athletically inclined son busily engaged in massaging his calve muscles with witch hazel.

"What are you doing, son?" inquired the fond father.

"Just getting the knots out of my legs," the lad replied. "I must have supple muscles."

"Why must you have supple muscles?"

"Well, I've got to have 'em if I want to run fast."

"Who told you that?" the father asked.

"Jack Cannon," was the quick rejoinder.

Several days later it was noticed that the boy had apparently given up roller skating.

"Why don't you use your new skates?" the father asked.

"O, I can't. They ruin my speed."

"Who told you that?"

"Jack Cannon."

But the limit was yet to come. It was at the dinner table, and the boy had refused a piece of pie, although he had always been very fond of pie.

"Why, son, what is the matter?" inquired the anxious mother. "Isn't the pie good?"

"Oh, it isn't that, mamma," the young athlete replied, "but, you see, I can't eat any more pie. I'm in training now and pie isn't good for me."

"Well, who told you such a thing?" the mother asked.

"Jack Cannon," said the son.

THE WAY OF "BRICK" OWENS.

There's no denying that our friend,
"Brick" Owens, knows a balk;
And that he will not condescend
To stand for any talk.
"Brick" knows the baseball rules by heart;
His dignity is great,
And when a player acts up smart,
And passes "Brick" the bait,
He swells up like a fat old toad,
And in his thundery tones
He reads O'Brien's riot code,
And finds the mut ten bones.

CENTRAL HIGHS STILL WINNING.

The Kansas City, Kas., Team Was Trounced in an Exciting 2 to 1 Game.

The Central high school baseball team won a close and exciting game from the Kansas City, Kas., high school team yesterday afternoon at Chelsea park by the score of 2 to 1.

Olmend of Kansas City, Kas., outpitched Burns of Central, but lost his game on account of errors made by his teammates at critical times.

TWO STRAIGHT FOR WASHINGTON.

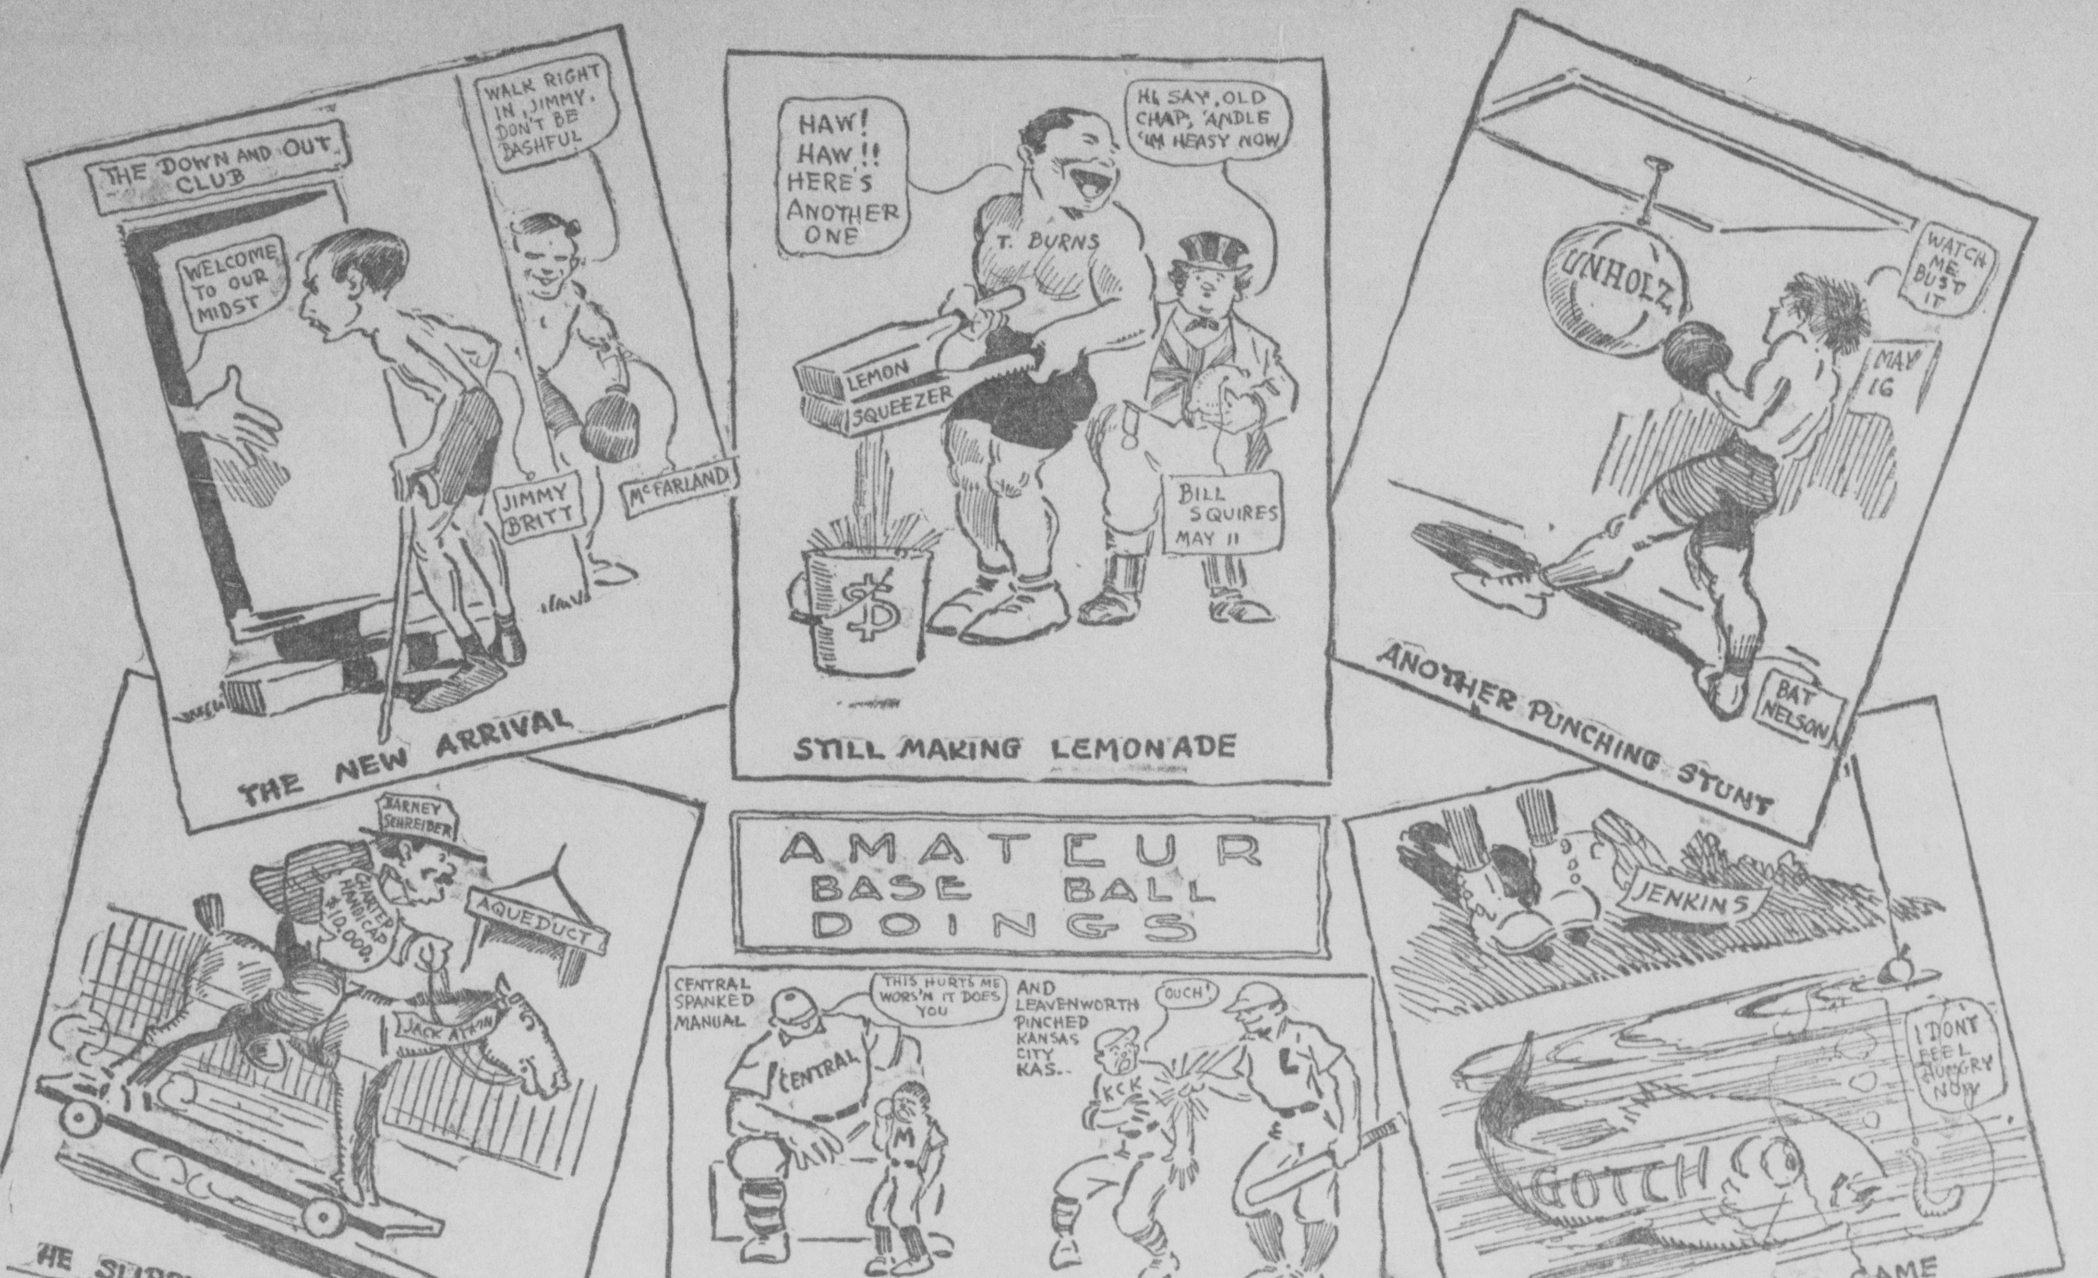
The Tiger Baseball Nine Is Still in the Rut.

ST. LOUIS, April 18.—The Washington university baseball team made it two straight over the University of Missouri by winning to-day's game of the series of two, 2 to 1. Batteries—Washington, Menges and Rodenburg; Missouri, Gumby and L. Hamon.

The Tennis Doubles Postponed.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Darkness prevented the finish of a match in the men's lawn tennis doubles on the court of the St. Nicholas rink to-day. It was in the first round of the event and brought together the old national champions, Holcomb Ward and Beals C. Wright against Raymond D. Little and Theodore R. Pell. The former took two sets to one by the score of 7 to 5, 8 to 6, 6 to 8.

SOME SIDE LIGHTS ON SPORT



A CITY BOWLING TOURNEY

THE FIRST ANNUAL TEN-PIN MEET TO BEGIN MAY 4.

The Tournament Will Be a Handicap Affair, Giving Every Bowler an Equal Chance for the Prizes.

Following the example of Chicago and St. Louis, Kansas City is going to pull off, beginning May 4, its first annual city tournament in the ten pin game. It has been decided to adopt the handicap plan used by St. Louis in its last city tournament, the success of which made bowlers in all parts of the country marvel. They received 125 five-men team entries, 233 doubles and 431 singles and it is believed by them that no city, with the possible exception of Chicago and New York, can hold a successful tournament unless the handicap plan is adopted. Some of the older bowlers object to giving away pins, alleging that in these tournaments the route is only a three-game contest in each event and that the amateurs are likely to outluck them. On the other hand the persons that favors the idea point out that the new bowler is not likely to bowl his average game, because he has not been in competition often and is more liable to stage fright, and as a consequence bowl below his average.

Every man who is a resident of Kansas City, Mo., Independence, Kansas City, Kas., and all Kansas City suburbs is eligible to enter and will receive as a handicap in each game one-half the difference between his average and the scratch man that is put on or about 190 basis. For instance, if you cannot bowl more than 100 average, your handicap in each game will be 45 pins, which is 50 per cent of the difference between your average and the best bowler or the 190 man.

The entrance fee in each event is $1 per man, which includes the price of the bowling. The games will all be bowled at night, on alleys Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, first floor at "Kid" Nichols's Bowling academy, which will be specially prepared for the event.

It is estimated that there will be at least forty five-men teams, eighty doubles and 150 individuals enter for the competition, because it is a handicap contest and every bowler will be on an equal basis. This estimate seems like a very conservative one from the fact that there are at least 1,000 men in the city who bowl occasionally.

Mr. W. B. Bentley, president of the Kansas City Bowling association, has named the following committe, which will have the detail work of the tournament in hand:

Schedule Committee—George C. Lowe, E. G. Treiber.

Handicap Committee—Ed Lambert, J. H. Mann.

Tournament Committee—William Lucas, T. N. McClelland, E. S. Kellogg, F. Donahue, H. B. Farley, H. R. Graham, Walter Graham, Robert Bishop, H. Haug and Earl Shepherd.

Entry blanks have been placed at the bowling alleys of both cities and anyone in charge will gladly furnish any additional information upon request. All entrance fees should be sent or handed to Mr. George C. Lowe, secretary and treasurer of the Kansas City Bowling association at Schmelzer's Arms company. Entries close April 30.

IN THE CITY LEAGUE.

The Kid Nichols "Kids" Are Monopolizing Most of the Honors.

The "Kid" Nichols team seems determined to monopolize most of the honors of the city bowling league. This team holds the high ten frame average, 1,040, and the high thirty frame average, 2,871. Riley of the "Kids" is high individual in ten frames with 268 and in thirty frames with 679. Bechtel continues to lead in the individual averages. The averages follow:

NOTES OF THE BOWLERS.

The tie game that resulted in the big league two weeks ago when the Syndicates met the Nichols, which has been a subject of debate ever since, was finally settled last night in favor of the Syndicates at a meeting of the team captains of their league. The interpretation of the rule that should govern ties in the game could not be agreed upon and the precedent that was alleged to have been established in former years in Kansas City caused those interested to hand down the decision they did. A. L. Langtry, secretary of the American Bowling congress; Sam Karpf, former secretary, and F. L. Pasdeloup, treasurer of the parent body, were all appealed to and their opinions differed. The discussion that has arisen on account of this tie will result in the American Bowling congress forming a more explicit rule at its next annual meeting. The decision was important inasmuch as the team that lost the game and the point in dispute lost its chance to bowl off a tie with the Rivals for the first place in the league and the championship of Kansas City for season of 1908-1909.

The special roll-off match between the Syndicates and Rivals, now tied, will be played to-morrow night. Half the games will be rolled on Nichols's alleys and half on the Brunswick alleys.

On Tuesday night the Pilsners, made up of Laidlaw, Kling, Voght, Roeder and Farley, will roll a picked team a six-game total pin match. Three games on the Brunswick alleys and three games on Nichols's. Harry Haug of the famous "Nichols Kid" rolled in good form on Nichols's alley, getting on average of 253 for three games, with 298 for high game.

OAKLAND HANDICAP TO MARSTER.

Frank Flittner Was the Favorite, but Could Do No Better Than Third.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18.—Marster's sudden reversal caused considerable comment when he captured to-day's feature, the Tamalpias handicap at Oakland. Frank Flittner was the favorite, but he met with all kinds of trouble. The best he could do was to finish third to Marster and Cabin. Marster bothered several horses in the strenth, but the judges took no action in regard to the rough riding. The summaries:

First race, six furlongs—J. W. O'Neill, 108 (Kelly), 4 to 1, won; Hector, 102 (Mentry), 10 to 1, second; Elmdale, 109 (W. Miller), 7 to 1, third. Time, 1:14. Budapest, Bell Reed, Dr. Sherman, Lustig, Head Dance, Mintia, Broker, Water Thrush and Peggy O'Neal finished as named.

Second race, four furlongs—Tom Hayward, 109 (Miller), 3 to 2, won; Alice George, 104 (McIntyre), 5 to 2, second; Woodlander, 112 (Buxton), 4 to 1, third. Time :47 4-5. Heine, Flying Dance, Calera, Miss Danville, Angel Face and Vesper Hymn finished as named.

Third race, six furlongs—Yada, 109 (McIntyre), 15 to 10, won; Andrew B. Cook, 113 (Rettig), 9 to 1, second; Preen, 114 (W. Miller), 11 to 1, third. Time, 1:12 3-5. Lee Harrison, Orelio, Canardo, Charles Green, Wistaria, Pocahonto and Standover finished as named.

Fourth race, mile and a sixteenth, Tamalpias handicap—Marster, 103 (Sandy), 10 to 1, won; Cabin, 108 (McIntyre), 4 to 1, second; Frank Flittner, 105 (W. Miller), 11 to 5, third. Time 1:45 3-5. Johnny Lyons, Edwin T. Fryer, Raleigh, Vox Populi and Fred Bent finished as named.

Fifth race, mile and seventy yards, selling—Boggs, 96 (A. Walsh), 8 to 5, won; Earl Rogers, 101 (Harris), 10 to 1, second; Eduardo, 109 (Fisher), 16 to 1, third. Time, 1:44 1-5. Tommy Ahearn, Royal River, Gypsy King, Elie, Hand Me Down and Bellemence finished as named.

Sixth race, futurity course, Novato handicap—Pajaroita, 111 (W. Miller), 13 to 10, won; Native Son, 99 (A. Walsh), 7 to 2, second; Dominius Arvi, 110 (Boland), 12 to 5, third. Time, 1:09. Fantastic and St. Francis finished as named.

Prokus Won in Two Falls.

Jim Prokus defeated the Texas Ranger in a wrestling match at the Century theater last night. The first fall was in 37 minutes, the second in 22 minutes. The match was rough.

A Call for Shively.

Dr. D. M. Shively is requested to call at the "Kid" Nichols Bowling academy.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION MAGNATES

FORM IS ESSENTIAL IN THIS EVENT SAYS MARTIN A. DELANEY.

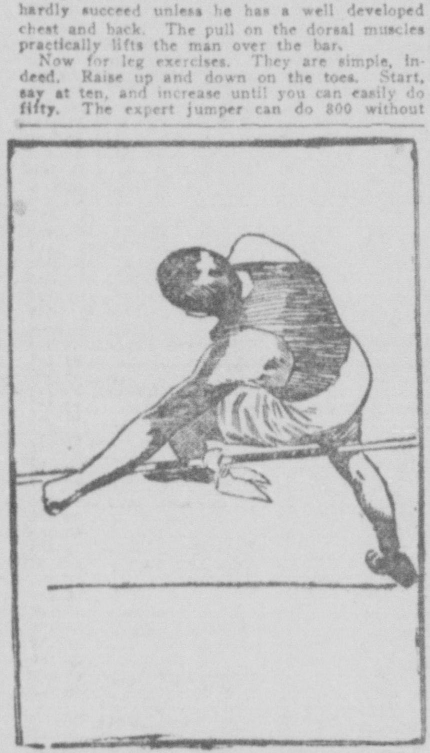
The Boy Must Work Hard and Consistently to Attain Proficiency in This Branch of Field Sport.

(In this story, the third of Martin A. Delaney's series of instructions for ward school athletes, the K. C. A. C. Athletic director tells the boys how they may become proficient in the high jump. Mr. Delaney will take up the shotput in his next article.)

By Martin A. Delaney.

In the high jump more than in any other branch of athletics is form required. Athletes may have a natural spring, but lack the form to help them over the bar. To acquire form the athlete should start to work in the "gym" in the winter, working on the chest machines to strengthen the chest and back. An athlete can hardly succeed unless he has a well developed chest and back. The pull on the dorsal muscles practically lifts the man over the bar.

Now for leg exercises. They are simple, indeed. Raise up and down on the toes. Start, say at ten, and increase until you can easily do fifty. The expert jumper can do 800 without much fatigue. Another good exercise is to place the heels together and then squat and rise. A few times will do to start with and increase until you feel you have enough.



IN THIS ILLUSTRATION NOTICE THE CONTROL THAT THE ATHLETE HAS OVER HIS BODY, BY THROWING THE LEFT ARM UP AND BACK, AND BY DOING THE SAME WITH HIS LEFT SHOULDER, HE WILL LIFT HIS LEFT THIGH OUT OF THE WAY AND CLEAR THE BAR.

Also to help the back, bend over with the leg stiff, arm extended and touch the finger tips to the floor.

Do very little jumping indoors for height—as running on a board floor is hard on the legs and you are liable to injury by slipping.

"As soon as the weather permits, practice outdoors for a week in the open air is worth four weeks indoors. There is no set foot to take off from. Many good men use the right foot, but for the sake of uniformity let's say we make the left foot the better one to jump from. A good way to judge the take-off is to stand on the left foot, lift the right until it touches the crossbar with its toes. You will find, I think, the distance from the left foot to the foot of the standard is the height of the crossbar.

"After the take-off has been marked, measure, say, sixty feet for the run to the take off, then try the run a few times and see if the jumping or spring foot hits the take-off squarely. If it's all right, then try a jump. You will notice that in the jumping or spring foot the heel hits the ground squarely, which gives the power for the jump. The toes must show the direction imparted by the heel and the shin muscles which connect with same. The jump has now started, and the jumper has, when alighted on the other side, formed a half circle, and should be the same distance from the base of the standards as he was when he started from the other side.

"All jumpers have different forms, but I would suggest that the boy use a straight run at the bar and make more hop over than jump, that is, to throw one foot high into the air and quickly lift the other over the bar, and at the same time shoot the elbow back hard and try to turn so as to land facing the bar.

A very hard thing to do is to manage the body while in the air. The accompanying picture gives a good idea of the shoot over.

Boys following out this programme should take care of the back, thigh and calf muscles, and rub them every evening and morning to keep them from getting knotty and hard.

Tug of war boys should follow out the preliminary work in this schedule for their event, as it will help them and make them strong both in legs and back.

A MEDLEY OF SPORT.

The University of Washington will revert to four-oared rowing to prepare for a race with the Portland Rowing club during the Rose carnival to be held at Portland June 1 to 6.

Weaned from her love of the horse by the automobile, Mrs. John D. Gerken, the famous horse show exhibitor, it is said, will sell her entire stable to devote her attention to the motor car.

There are eleven mares that have produced two 2:10 trotters. Nancy Hanks, 2:04, who threw Admiral Dewey, 2:04¾, and Lord Roberts, 2:07¼, is the only mare with a record that fast herself to produce one.

The billiard championships are again in a somewhat chaotic condition. Hoppe and Schaefer have surrendered their 18.2 and 18.1 emblems, respectively, on the ground that they called for unsatisfactory defense of championship titles.

The Olympic games are more than a competitive meeting of champion athletes. They are a great international affair, a conference between the nations of the world in the interest of sport, and of the desirable qualities that sport promotes and produces.

Dr. B. F. Roller has posted $1,000 at Seattle to wrestle any man in the world.

Bob Blake of Vanderbilt university, the best end that the South ever produced, has been awarded the Rhodes scholarship of Tennessee, defeating Lex Stone of Sewanee for the position.

Edwin Lemp of St. Louis wil give a silver trophy for competition among the eight-oared shells for the rowing clubs of St. Louis and vicinity. The race will be held June 21, under the auspices of the Western Rowing club, on the Mississippi river, over a two-mile course up stream.

E. T. Cook, jr., a schoolboy athlete of Chillicothe, a few years ago astonished the followers of interscholastic athletics by his wonderful performances in a "prep" school meet at Ann Harbor, Mich., and now Cornell expects to win the interscholastic championship this year through the work of the Ohio phenom.

Arthur "Tums" Cavill of San Francisco, who swam across the Golden Gate at the beginning of last October, has announced his intention of going after bigger game on the 3d of May. This time he will attempt to swim across the bay, a feat that has never been performed, though it has been attempted on several occasions.

The Cincinnati American Bowling congress tournament committee had $106.49 left after paying $61,000 for this year's annual championships. The balance was turned over to the Children's Home. Chairman August Hermann was presented with a handsome hardwood vase over two feet high by the committee.

"Ty" Cobb of the Detroit baseball team says: "I believe that in two years all players will demand that they be guaranteed salary when injured while playing for their club's interests. If half the truth were told of how players are docked for time they spend in the hospital after receiving injuries fighting for their team's interests it wouldn't look good for the club owners."

It is said that the California colt, Ray O'Light, 2:13½, will be trained with the view of beating the world's 3-year-old pacing record of 2:05½, now held by Klatawah. As Ray O'Light showed miles around 2:09 last season and is a strong, rugged colt from an extreme speed family of does not look an impossible task. If he succeeds in turning the trick the honors, however, will not quite pass out of the present reigning family, for his granddam is a full sister of Klatawah.

In speaking of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock, which Fife has designed, the London Yachtsman says "that the boat will be lighted throughout by electricity, the storage batteries being stowed just above the keel, and therefore well below the cabin flooring, where their weight will be best disposed. This is a trifle, but it is interesting to note that the Shamrock will be the first racing yacht to be fitted with electric light, thus obtaining a maximum of light with a minimum of dirt, trouble and weight of lamps. Pains have been taken to save weight in the cabin fittings—even the frames of the paneling have, he says, been hollowed out. The sail locker, too, will be below the cabin floor, a very useful, if a somewhat unhandy arrangement."

Pensylvania's relay races, to be held at Philadelphia April 25, have for years been the most popular events anywhere in this country. In many respects they are the most remarkable held in any place in the world. The number of schools and colleges represent an enormous enrollment. This year there will be more than fifty colleges represented, the largest number that has ever been seen on any athletic field in the history of the sport. These colleges represent at least 80,000 students. Already the number of schools is more than 100, and there will be close to 150 schools at the meet. These represent an average of about 800. This means that 45,000 pupils are drawn on for the scholastic teams that compete on Franklin Field. Thus the number of students represented in the scholastic and collegiate events is over ½ million.

One of the most unusual schemes for training a crew has been evolved by the management of the Columbia Rowing club of New York city and will shortly be put into practice. The Light Blue collegians have purchased a barge, which will be anchored on the Jersey shore of the Hudson river and used as a boathouse for all training purposes. About a month before the Poughkeepsie regatta the barge will be towed up the Hudson and used at the regatta course, thus making it unnecessary for the Columbians to bother their heads, as in the past, about hiring a suitable place. The purchase of the barge was inspired by the desire of the Columbians to do their practicing on the Hudson instead of the Harlem. The mooring of the barge on the Jersey shore will place them within easy reach of a four-mile straightaway course, with practically the same water conditions as are found at the Poughkeepsie course. The barge is 132 feet long and has a thirty-two-foot beam. The upper part of it will contain lockers and will be used as training quarters, and is big enough for the men to live there during the practice work up the river. The lower part will be used for the storage of the shells. The Columbia oarsmen will row on the Harlem until about May 1, when they will take up the work on the Hudson.

GOOD WORK BY FRESHMEN.

Jayhawker Tyros Show Up Well in Indoor Track Meet.

Lawrence, Kas., April 18.—Some good records were made in the freshmen track meet held at the University of Kansas gymnasium this afternoon. In the quarter mile Howard won first and Bradley second. In the half mile event, Osborne got first and Badger second. In the mile event Allen Dorfer was first and Badger second. The time was 5:12. In the two-mile event Parks took first. Time, 11:04. Casthold put the shot 36 feet, 8 inches. Myers threw the discus 89 feet, 10 inches. Casthold threw it 80 feet, 8 inches. Myers threw the hammer 126 feet and Casthold threw it 109 feet, 6 inches.

CHANGES IN RACING RULES.

Boys Weighing Under 70 Pounds Will Not Be Allowed to Ride.

Lexington, Ky., April 18.—The Kentucky state racing commission to-day granted licenses to 125 trainers, apprentices and jockeys who will appear on the tracks at Lexington, Louisville and Latonia this year. Two new rules were put into effect, one being that boys under 13 years and weighing under 70 pounds shall not be allowed to ride, and a rule affecting weight, for instance, 2-year-old horses must not carry less than 80 pounds, 3-year-olds, 87, and 4-year-olds, 100, apprentice allowances.

FRANK MAGGIOLI IS HERE.

The Crack Billiardist Will Give Exhibitions at the Royal This Week.

Prof. F. Maggioli, champion of the South, will play all comers at the Royal billiard hall, commencing to-morrow. He will give two exhibitions daily, at 3:30 and 8:15 p. m. There will be an exhibition of fancy shots after each game. Free lessons will be given to the women from 11 to 12 a. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m. This will be a great opportunity for the women to learn billiards.

TOMMY BURNS, FINANCIER

A CHAMPION WHO CAN'T SLEEP NIGHTS FOR FEAR OF OVERLOOKING MONEY

Says He Is a Wealthy Man, but Denies the Report That He Is Going to Buy the Late Duke of Devonshire's Piccadilly Mansion.

London, April 18.—"It is not true," said Tommy Burns, champion heavy weight prize fighter of the world, "that I am about to purchase the late Duke of Devonshire's mansion on Piccadilly. This much I will say, that if the easy things continue to roll in as fast as they have done since I struck these hospitable shores I will soon have money enough to buy any of the fancy palaces that may be on the market.

"As it is, I have enough money now to make me independent for life, and what is more, I propose to hold on to it. When I get through with the fighting game I don't want any benefit to save me from the soup house. I've got mine now, and all the slaps on the back and the bullcon handshakes and 'he's a good fellow' won't get it away from me. I've seen too many in my game down and out and passed up by the people they made money for and spent it on to be taken in by the 'hot air.' My theory of being a good fellow is to be good to yourself and your family first. My motto is the old one, that 'a man's best friend is his pocketbook.'"

It was in this fashion that Mr. Burns, who first discovered that easy things grew in abundance in the English fistic arena, philosophized in a talk this week. He sat in his armchair in the sitting room of his suite at Jack Straw castle at Hampstead. His faithful typewriter was at his right hand, and his eyes would wander from the machine out the window and take in one of the most glorious views in England, Hampstead Heath. The interview was frequently interrupted by some thought coming to Burns of a chance to get some more easy money that he was on the point of overlooking. Burns, with a gentlemanly apology, would swing to the typewriter and make the gentle machine shudder as he pounded out a defi or a proposition.

Burns as he talked showed no signs of the big head. His sense of humor hadn't deserted him. The fighting game to him was merely a business. Every proposition made to him he regarded from a business standpoint. He was out to get the money, and was getting it, he said. He didn't regard himself as a hero, although his natural vanity was pleased at the receptions and ovations which had been showered upon him. He regarded himself purely as a business man.

"There is no use of my denying that I have been up against a lot of easy marks here in England" said Burns. "I haven't been obliged to extend myself once in any of my contests. From what I have seen, England hasn't a heavy weight fighter that is worthy of the name. Those I have been up against don't seem to possess any knowledge of ring science. The English heavy weights go into the ring and biff-biff-bang until one of the other goes down and out. Science doesn't count with them. English fighters play entirely for the head. The value of fighting for the body is not recognized. A good body fighter can lick about any of the men in England. The English fighters have the willingness, but they haven't had the experience. They don't fight often enough. In America a man to be a prizefighter realizes that in order to get to the top he must fight, fight, fight. The worst dub can teach you something. In the lightweight class in England I have seen some promising boys, particularly Driscoll, who would make it lively for the best of our boys on the other side.

"In ring arrangements America is way to the good. I don't like the English style of having the referee out of the ring. With the referee sitting in a comfortable chair by the ringside, it is impossible for him to see half the things that are going on. In my fight with Moir at the National Sporting club, at one time Moir's back was turned to the referee and he delivered several blows that were foul, not intentionally, mind you, but foul just the same. The referee didn't see them, and I didn't make any kick, but if I hadn't worn a protector I might have been injured for life. As it was, my legs just below the hips were black and blue from the blows I had received there. The referee, in my opinion, should always be in the ring, as the present English system gives too much opportunity for dirty work.

"That Roche fight was the best money-maker I have had. I won a clear $15,000. The Moir fight netted me $11,000, and the Palmer fight $8,000. In the meantime I have been picking up a lot of easy money in the music halls. I work about every other week at a salary of $1,500 a week. I could work every week if I accepted less money, but what is the use? I make just as much by working every other week and don't run the risk of tiring myself out as I would do if I worked every week. I did intend to return to America immediately, as my wife has been ill, but now she is on the road to recovery and I think I will stay on this side for a while and pick a few more bunches of grapes. They are dead crazy to have me fight in Paris, and possibly things may be fixed up there. I don't think Moir and Squires are anxious to accept my proposition to fight them both in one night. They think it would be too humiliating.

"There is a proposition on foot which I hope will come off, and that is for me to fight Moir again. His backers are now out with the excuse that he was badly seconded in his contest with me. A second battle with him would tickle me immensely. It would be real easy money. Moir can't fight, and I know it. In my battle with him he was obviously afraid of me and kept backing away. I didn't rush in at once because a good fighter can make a sucker of himself in such a situation. I just stalled and took my time. I pretended to stagger about the ring, and the audience rose to their feet and cried, 'Go in, Moir, you've got him going.' Moir's courage returned and he came on just as I wanted him to do. Then I bowled one across, but the end of the round saved him.

"I haven't found any prejudice against me here or against any American fighter who delivers the goods. The money has been easy, I will admit, but more joy to the man who can pick up money without trouble. If people knew the hard times I went through as a kid of 15, how I hoboed across the country and was glad to work day and night for a square meal and a place to sleep, they wouldn't begrudge me what I am getting now.

"It is easy to get money in this game, but not so easy to keep it. When I read of Terry McGovern, down and out; old John L., Jake Kilrain in bankruptcy, George Dixon dying a pauper, it makes me more and more determined to hold on to what I have. To be called a good fellow won't buy you a meal, but a lot of yellow backs in your pocket will."

BURNS WINS ANOTHER.

"Jewey" Smith, a South African Boxer, Knocked Out in the Fifth.

Paris, April 18.—Tommy Burns, the American heavyweight pugilist, knocked out "Jewey" Smith, the South African boxer, here to-night in the fifth round of what was scheduled to be a ten-round bout.

The meeting of Tommy Burns and Smith was the biggest affair of the kind ever held in Paris where something of a craze for boxing exists at present. It was witnessed by a big crowd of fans who paid high prices for their seats.

Smith was a beaten man from the start, although he scored several heavy body blows in the first and second rounds. The American showed much more skill than his opponent and after playing with him, floored Smith with a left hander in the third round. In the fourth round Burns had matters all his own way. Smith was knocked down twice, but managed to get to his feet before the count ended. In the fifth he rallied gamely after taking a severe punishment, but he could not succeed in reaching the agile Burns who ended the one sided match with a terrific right to the jaw which put Smith to the floor and out.

Almost a panic was caused at the end of the third round when a photographic apparatus exploded setting fire to the flags and decorations. Scores of the spectators leaped to their feet, but they were prevailed on to remain in their places and the fire was speedily extinguished.

KEENE'S HORSE THE WINNER

RESTIGOUCHE, AN ADDED STARTER, CAPTURED FREEPORT HANDICAP.

Jack Atkin, Victor in the Carter Handicap, Finished Three Lengths Behind—Thistledale Landed the Winfield Steeplechase.

Aqueduct, N. Y., April 18.—James R. Keene's Restigouche, an added starter and quoted at 6 to 1 in the betting, won the Freeport handicap at seven furlongs to-day, defeating the Carter handicap winner, Jack Atkin, by three lengths. Jack Atkin, on his good race in the Carter handicap, was heavily played, being backed down from a high quotation of 3 to 2, closing at 4 to 5. Restigouche, although he had worked well, went back in the betting. The start was good. Restigouche was slow to break, but was rushed into the lead in the first furlong. He opened up a big gap on the turn, but in the stretch Jack Atkin caught him and then began to stop while Restigouche responded gamely to the whip and won ridden out by three lengths. Thistledale, at 7 to 5, won the Winfield steeplechase by twenty-five lengths.

First race, 2-year-old fillies, four furlongs—Indomitable, 106 (E. Dugan), 11 to 5, won; Mystify, 106 (Notter), 13 to 5, second; My Mariutch, 106 (Lang), 6 to 1, third. Time, 0:49 2-5. Ocean Maid, Black Mamie, Thistle Belle, Melissa and Catharine Simpson also ran.

Second race, the Winfield steeplechase, handicap, 4-year-olds and upwards, two miles—Thistledale, 155 (Stone), 2 to 5, won; Motor, 135 (McAffee), 10 to 1, second; Palm, 133 (Henderson), 13 to 5, third. Time, 4:27 2-5. Only three starters.

Third race, 3-year-olds and upwards, selling, one mile—Juggler, 117 (McDaniel), 5 to 2, won; Molesey, 103 (G. Burns), 5 to 1, second; Smoker, 95 (McCarthy), 3 to 1, third. Time, 1:40 4-5. Saracinesca, Import, Al H. Woods, Littleton Maid, Royal Lady, Compare and Bodador also ran.

Fourth race, the Freeport handicap, 3-year-olds and up, seven furlongs—*Restigouche, 98 (Delaby), 6 to 1, won; Jack Atkin, 127 (Musgrave), 4 to 5, second; Rialto, 101 (E. Dugan), 5 to 1, third. Time, 1:26 2-5. Rifleman, Blandy, Fordello, Zienap, Killiecrankie and Campaigner also ran. *Added starter.

Fifth race, maiden 2-year-olds, selling, four and one-half furlongs—Chaperone, 105 (McCarthy), 8 to 1, won; Ramble, 99 (E. Dugan), 7 to 2, second; St. Withold, 105 (Notter), 4 to 1, third. Time, 0:56 3-5. Pleasing, Havre, Long John, Dander, J. W. Kent, Bonnie Kelso, Gavin, Never Late, Elmer Roy, Fair Lassie, Harry Rogers, Hobo and Gold Find also ran.

Sixth race, handicap, 3-year-olds and up, six and one-half furlongs—Voorhees, 112 (W. Doyle), 6 to 5, won; Halket, 105 (McDaniel), 8 to 5, second; Pretension, 110 (Musgrave), 7 to 2, third. Time, 1:21. Castlewood also ran.

CURES WITHOUT DRUGS

THE MODERN UP-TO-DATE

Dry Cell Body Battery

NO CHARGING NO VINEGAR NO SMELL
NO BURN NO BLISTER NO SHOCK
ALWAYS CHARGED—EASILY REGULATED
POWERFUL CURRENT OF GUARANTEED STRENGTH

ELECTRO-VIGOR cures Nervousness, Falling Vitality, Backache, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Indigestion, Constipation, Stomach, Kidney and Bowel troubles, and, in fact, any and all of the many human ills which are now successfully treated with electricity by the most learned and scientific physicians in the world.

ELECTRO-VIGOR gives you in the privacy of your home all the benefits of the grand curative and strengthening power of electricity, without any of the discomforts or loss of time caused by treatment at a specialist's office, and costs only a fraction of what a competent specialist would charge you. Furthermore, a specialist would give you but a half hour of his time, and probably fifteen to twenty minutes' treatment. ELECTRO-VIGOR can be used for hours at a time, thus allowing the weakened nerves to absorb the current. It will pour electric life and force into your body while you sleep, warming and vitalizing the nerves and blood and invigorating every vital organ. It has attachments, suitable for every person, by means of which the current can be applied to any part of the body.

Why don't you stop it! you are still doctoring! But changing doctors does not cure your sickness. You are trying one medicine after the other, with the same disgusting disappointment. Patent medicines do you no good. You are a drug doser, and the only change in your bodily condition is for the worse. Why don't you stop this drug habit? Why don't you avail yourself of the modern remedy? Proceed in Nature's own lines. Use the life-giving, healing, strengthening forces of Electricity.

Electro-Vigor is a relief from the old habit—the drug habit. It does by natural means what you expect drugs to do by unnatural means. It gives real strength to your body and when your body has its natural strength there can't be any pain, for there is no pain in a perfectly healthy body.

Electro-Vigor is a girdle of dry cell batteries which you can wear about your waist while you sleep. It is always charged, ready for use, and generates its own power constantly. Electro-Vigor is not like the electric belt you know—there is no charging to do—no vinegar or acid solution to bother with, and we have perfected it with a regulation device which makes the current mild or strong at will.

Electro-Vigor is the grandest invention of the age for weak men; the surest and easiest cure for all nervous and chronic diseases. Its wonderful power is directed to the seat of the nervous system through which its vitalizing strength penetrates into all of the body, carrying new life to every function which has been weakened by excesses or dissipation, restoring energy to the brain and power to the vital organs. No sick man, no sickly or delicaate woman will ever regret a fair trial of Electro-Vigor, which is nature's restorer of vitality. It will cure Rheumatism, Nervous Debility, Weak Stomach, Kidney and Liver Troubles, Lame Back, Sciatica and all ailments in Men and Women.

CONSULTATION FREE—BOOK FREE

We want to tell you more about Electro-Vigor. Can't you find time to call at our office? If not, send for our 100-page book, which is beautifully illustrated and is FREE for the asking, and you will learn more about our great invention and 'what it does. Call or send coupon to-day for FREE BOOK.'

A CLASSIC PLAY IN KANSAS

No Previous Attempt to Give the Famous Greek Tragedy Has Been Made in the West—A Success at Harvard.

EMPORIA, KAS., March 26.—The Greek play, "Agamemnon," by Aeschylus, will be put on by the Greek department of the college of Emporia. The first presentation will be Saturday afternoon and will be complimentary to the Classical association of Kansas and Western Missouri, which will meet in Emporia Friday and Saturday. A second presentation will be made next Tuesday night.

MISS MARGERY HAYNES, WHO PLAYS THE PART OF CASSANDRA.

The play will be staged in Austin chapel of the college, and Tuesday night's performance will be for the general public, though anyone who wishes to attend Saturday afternoon may do so.

ROLLA A. CLYMER.

The English translation of Dr. William W. Goodwin will be used except in the choruses, which will be from Plumptre. The chorus passages will be somewhat abridged.

This is the first time "Agamemnon" has been attempted in this part of the country, and the Rev. John R. Wilkie, head of the Greek department of the college, says that while the attempt savors of considerable assurance for so small a school, he feels that his students will justify it. Mr. Wilkie is superintending all the details of putting on the play, and he is assisted by Mrs. Wilkie, who is a teacher in the academy. The college of Emporia is the synodical school of the Presbyterian church of Kansas, and its students and faculty are noted for their high grade work.

A STUDENT MAKING THE SCENERY.

The costumes for the play are handsome and appropriate in every detail for the scenes in which they will appear. Charles Nicholas, a college student, has designed and is making and painting the scenery, which will be elaborate. The stage in Austin chapel is about 10x35 feet and will be lengthened several feet for this play. The chapel will seat 500 persons.

MISS AXLINE FAYE, WHO TAKES THE PART OF CLYTEMNESTRA.

Dr. Richard Green Moulton of the University of Chicago gave interpretative reading of "Agamemnon" in his series of lectures in Emporia in January, which was considered especially helpful to the putting on of the play by the students. The play, as given at Harvard in 1906, was one of the most successful ventures of that institution. Three performances were given and the Harvard Graduate Magazine says that the acting required in such a setting was so different from that of the modern stage that it is hard to arrive at any comparative criticism.

WAYNE SNODDY.

FIRST PLAYED 458 B. C.

"Agamemnon" was first performed at Athens during the Greater Diomped, in the spring of 458 B. C., when it won first prize in the dramatic contest. Ten years, the play recites, have passed since Agamemnon, king of Argos, led the Greek hosts against Troy. To appease the wrath of Artemis he had offered his daughter, Iphigenia in sacrifice. In vengeance for this and also because of her adultery with Prince Aegisthus, Clytemnestra, his queen, plans to murder him on his return. The cast of characters for the play as it will be given in Emporia follows:

Agamemnon, king of Argos	Rolla A. Clymer
Clytemnestra, his queen	Axline Faye
Cassandra, a captive Trojan princess and prophetess	Margery Haynes
Aegisthus, a prince, cousin of Agamemnon	J. V. Berger
Watchman	J. E. Bartholomew
Herald	Ray Miller
Chorus leader	Wayne Snoddy

Chorus of Argive elders, soldiers, attendants, captives.

Scene before the royal palace at Argos.

Time, night, then day.

MEAT HIGHER IN NEW YORK

No Part of the Advance Will Go to the Farmer and Stockman.

NEW YORK, March 26.—Retail prices of meats of all grades have increased two cents a pound within the last week, and before another week has gone by it is very probable that prices will go from three to five cents a pound higher as a result of a strange combination of circumstances which has affected the cattle raising industry of this country. In fact local packers say that if conditions become much worse it will be necessary for the big packers of this country to import sheep and cattle from the Argentine Republic, England and Australia.

Persons visiting the butcher shops in the last week for their customary supply of meat, no matter what its quality, have found that from three to five cents a pound has been added to the price they paid for beef a week ago.

When they turned to lamb and mutton as a substitute they found that the price had increased two cents a pound and upon asking for the price of pork found that the heavy demand had increased that product from one to two cents a pound from sausage to loin roast and chops. When asked for an explanation, the only thing that could be said by the retailer was that the wholesale price had been increased from $2 to $2.50 a hundred pounds.

CHICAGO, March 26.—Farmers of Illinois, Iowa and other states who raise live stock for the Chicago market will not benefit by the increased price of meats established by packers and retailers Tuesday and raised still higher yesterday.

The cost of all meat, excepting veal, has been increased during the last two days from one to five cents a pound. Farmers, owing to their shipping of all available stock during the recent financial panic, are said by the packers to have exhausted the supply and now will not reap the benefit of the increased price offered by packers.

PRESIDENT GOES TO SCHOOL

A WASHINGTON CLASS ROOM RECEIVES AN UNEXPECTED VISIT.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt Slipped Away From the White House to Hear Quentin Make a "Speech" on Geography.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Quentin Roosevelt and his schoolmate, "Charlie" Taft, had distinguished auditors yesterday when they gave a talk on geography and history before the pupils of the Force school.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt were driven to the school building and went directly to the Sixth grade, where the exercises, comprising a review of geography and history, were in progress. So quietly did the President leave the White house that his personal bodyguard of secret service sleuths was not aware of his departure.

The appearance of the Preident at the school caused a flutter of surprise among teachers and scholars. Quentin, his youngest son, and "Charlie" Taft are members of the Sixth grade and were participants in the exercises. Quentin spoke twenty minutes, reviewing the geography and incidentally some of the history of France. He referred to his notes only once or twice.

President Roosevelt then addressed the school. He told the teachers and scholars he was delighted at the knowledge the pupils displayed and the general condition of the school. He said he was glad of the opportunity to be present and regretted he could not stay longer. He said he had a school of his own to attend, one where the masters were not as lenient as the ones the pupils have; that his masters required him to attend school at all hours of the day and sometimes late at night.

On the Right Trail

There is not a person in Kansas City outside of the Metropolitan organization who knows whether Kansas City can reasonably demand and enforce a 3-cent street car fare from the Metropolitan.

Mr. Beardsley does not know it. He does not and cannot promise the reduction. But he is pledged to find out.

The best proof that he will find out if re-elected is the Metropolitan's violent opposition to him.

The Metropolitan's opposition is likewise the best of all reasons for the belief that the Mayor is on the right trail in his inquiry into the possibilities of the three-cent fare.

Let's see the books.

A Complaint of the Fifth Street Line.

To The Star: In Monday's Star I read that a health officer was thrown from a Fifth street car. That did not surprise patrons of that "Bully" line. It is certainly the worst in Kansas City in service, treatment by its conductors and motormen, and above all its filthy, rotten cars. A good many complaints have been sent from patrons of other lines, but let them get on Fifth street cars and then they will be satisfied to go back to their own. Must we put up with these cars and the service forever? It is a paying line. Is not our money as good as that the company collects from Rockhill, Northeast and other big car lines? Let us hurry and have the public utilities commission. I live east of the east end barn from where they run a plug, and often have to wait ten or fifteen minutes for the car. Is there not a way to compel the company to run all its cars to the end? There are a good many men who work at the end of this line who have a "hard kick" coming.

The Career of a Bushel of Corn.

VIOLA, MINN.—To The Star: Did you ever follow the career of a bushel of corn? The following illustrates the career of a bushel: From a bushel of corn the distiller gets four gallons of whisky which retails at $16.80.

The farmer gets 45 cents.

The United States government gets $4.40.

The drayman gets 15 cents.

The manufacturer gets $4.

The retailer gets $7.

The jails get occupants.

The man that votes license gets what?

Elephants March Through Georgia.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

VALDOSTA, GA.—The people between this city and White Springs are greatly excited over the roaming at large throughout that section of two big elephants, which escaped Wednesday night from the Van Amberg shows at Live Oak, Fla. Chief of Police Dampier and Sheriff Passmore received telegrams from the owners of the shows stating that the elephants were coming back to Valdosta, where they spent the winter, and requesting the officers to prevent any one from shooting them, if possible. The elephants escaped while being loaded on the cars and got away from their keepers in the darkness. It is reported that they have done considerable damage to the farms and truck patches in their line of march, smashing fences and tearing up the crops. The show men are scouring the country, but so far have not been able to capture or control the elephants.

"A Knight for a Day" Opens To-Night.

"A Knight for a Day," one of the big successes of the theatrical season, will be the attraction at the Willis Wood theater to-night. This comic opera, or musical comedy, is said to have created a sensation wherever it has appeared. The company appearing here comes direct from Chicago, where it has enjoyed one of the longest runs recorded by any musical play in that city. Eddie Redway, who is remembered as the Gingerbread man in a musical comedy of that title, created the leading role in this extravaganza and will be seen here in his original part. He will be assisted by Miss Elsie Herbert. The engagement is for three nights and a matinee Saturday.

TWO $150,000 KENTUCKY FIRES.

Buildings Were Destroyed in Covington and Winchester.

COVINGTON, KY., March 26.—The leaf tobacco warehouse of T. S. Hamilton & Co. was destroyed by fire early to-day. The loss is estimated at $150,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin. Five residences and a saloon also were destroyed.

WINCHESTER, KY., March 26.—Fire, which started here early to-day, caused a loss estimated at $150,000. One business block was destroyed and other buildings were threatened. An appeal for aid was made to Richmond, Ky., and fire apparatus was sent from that city.

THE "BLACK HAND" IN KANSAS

A Threat of Death Made Against a Coffeyville Banker.

COFFEYVILLE, KAS., March 26.—Charles T. Carpenter, vice president of the Condon National Bank of this city, received to-day an unsigned letter telling him to be ready to give up $300 on demand without asking any questions. The letter was mailed here last night. Mr. Carpenter is not alarmed over the letter and turned it over to the police.

"We received more than a dozen such letters after the Dalton raid," said Mr. Carpenter to-day, "and nothing ever came from them. We never had any trouble over them, and I believe this is a similar bluff. At least, I am not frightened."

The letter said that Mr. Carpenter had been watched for a week and that if he did not give up the money when asked for it by an unknown man his bank and his house would be blown up with dynamite.

"And don't you dare put a detective on this case. If you do we will kill you," concluded the letter.

MORE HOLLAND MONEY COMING.

The Cement Industry Now Attracts the Dutch Investors.

"Holland money is invested over all the United States," J. P. Andre Mottu of Norfolk, Va., said this morning. Mr. Mottu represents a number of Holland investors. He is in Kansas City as the guest of Walton H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust company.

"I am here for the purpose of reorganizing the Southwestern Portland Cement company, in which a number of Holland people are interested," Mr. Mottu said. "It was Holland money that built the Kansas City Southern railroad and that is now largely invested in Port Arthur. There is a good deal of Holland money in Virginia in coal mines and other properties. Holland investors own 25 per cent of the stock of the Steel trust. They bought in 1903 for 10 and sold for 40 and rebought last October."

NEW HONEYMOON FOR BROKAWS

Mutual Jealousy Underlay All the Troubles of the New Yorkers.

NEW YORK, March 26.—Completely reconciled and cured of the mutual jealousy which, their friends say, prompted all their domestic differences, Mr. and Mrs. W. Gould Brokaw are about to sail for Europe on a brand new honeymoon. According to reports to-day, Mrs. Brokaw, since leaving a sanitarium in this city, has been with her husband in the country, where the typhoid fever has disappeared. In its stead, the same friends averred, has come a reawakening of the affection that led them to marry. Mrs. and Mrs. James Blair, parents of the bride, are given much credit for the reapproachment. They convinced both that it was only Mr. Brokaw's jealousy engendered by his great love for his wife that ever parted them.

Game Preserve for Each County.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

J. W. Wheeler, state game commissioner, hopes to interest the Illinois legislature in his plans to establish a state game preserve in each county. He thinks a group of land owners in each county could get together and agree to protect game birds upon their tracts, prohibit hunting thereon and also feed the birds supplied by the game farm in Sangamon county. It is desired to secure a tract of not less than 1,200 acres in each county for these branch preserves. The plan, it is said, has been worked successfully in California after a thorough trial and it is believed it will work as well in Illinois. Such protection and such propagation will greatly assist the state game department in the efforts to restock the fields and forests of Illinois with quail, prairie chicken, pheasants and other species of game bird.

An Emergency.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

"And so you think there really is occasion for a new party?"

"Occasion?" responded the promoter, "I should say so. Not one of the old parties has offered me a job."

What the Metropolitan Is Fighting

The following are the three provisions of the Enabling act which authorizes a Public Utilities commission:

1. The city may by ordinance fix rates of charge for all pubic utilities like street railway service, gas, electricity, telephones, etc., but not steam railways.
2. The public utilities companies may go into the circuit and appellate courts if the rates are not fixed reasonably. The courts are confirmed in their power to protect the companies from unreasonable and unfair action by the council.
3. A Public Utilities commission is authorized to "make investigation into all facts and matters touching the establishing of such just and reasonable rate or rates of charge." To make the investigation effective each corporation inquired into may be compelled to produce its books and papers, and personal witnesses may be forced to give testimony. The commission has no power to fix rates, but could only report its findings of facts with recommendations to the council for final action.

A square deal to the corporations as well as to the people is the basis of the Enabling act and the Utilities commission plan.

All that the Metropolitan could possibly lose through an effective commission would be what it takes from the people over and above a square deal charge. If its rates are reasonable now it would retain them. If its rates could not be affected until after the existing franchises had expired the Metropolitan has nothing to fear from that.

But the Metropolitan knows that it can never get its franchises extended upon any terms but a fair return to the people when once the people are as well informed about the facts as it is.

Unique Features

The novel feature of a beautiful woman instructing an audience of other women in the art of becoming beautiful is the programme for Mme. Yale's Beauty Culture Lecture, to be given at the Willis Wood theater next Tuesday, March 31, at 2:30 p. m. As the creator of beauty culture and the leader of this science, Mme. Yale has become the most popular woman among women to-day.

Mme. Yale's Lecture

will consist of four parts. Two acts will be devoted to physical culture and two acts to beauty culture. Exercises for developing, reducing and rejuvenating the figure will be scientific features of this great woman's entertainment.

Mme. Yale's Costumes

will be creations of Parisian art and worn with such charming grace that their beauty will be double enhanced.

Immortal Fame Won

Mme. Yale being the Creator of "Beauty Culture" as a scientific branch of education, also the discoverer of "Skin Food" and the originator of the "Yale Walk" that gives to all women exquisite style and queenly bearing, is herself by far the most interesting woman before the public. Her remarkable personal appearance, that has won the admiration of women everywhere, proves incontestibly the truth of her claim to Recreate Beauty and Reincarnate Youth.

MME. YALE

When Mme. Yale makes her appearance on the stage of the Willis Wood theater she will present a picture of perfect womanhood and youthful, flawless beauty. Ladies, bring your notebooks and opera glasses, for this "Woman Beautiful," who has done nothing else but make herself and other women beautiful all her life, will bear the closest scrutiny.

TICKETS COMPLIMENTARY

With each purchase of the Yale preparations amounting to 75c or over, complimentary tickets for Mme. Yale's Beauty Culture Entertainment may be obtained at the Toilet Goods Department of park, and a police patrol kept the people back.

The bomb throwing had a pacifying effect upon the crowd, and a half hour later comparatively few persons remained in the vicinity.

Along with Silverstein and the body of his companion four policemen were placed in patrol wagons. Silverstein and the policemen were taken to Bellevue, and the body to the morgue.

Silverstein appears to be about 28 years old. His companion was a large man with red hair and mustache and probably was 40 years old. The body was later identified as that of Ignatz Hildebrand of 388 Third avenue. He is supposed to have been a tailor.

SILVERSTEIN CAME FROM RUSSIA.

Silverstein, it was later found, had been living with an aunt, Mrs. Gussie Alexander, at 82 Beaver street, Brooklyn. She told the police that Silverstein came from Bialystok, Russia, about four years ago. His real name, she said, was Cohen, though since coming here he had adopted the name of Silverstein. Mrs. Alexander said that her nephew was 22 years old and, though a tailor by trade, had recently been out of employment and was despondent. She knew that he had socialistic tendencies, but had not believed he was an Anarchist.

THE RIOT IN THE HAYMARKET.

In Chicago Twenty-Two Years Ago a Bomb Caused a Worse Tragedy.

The throwing of a bomb in Union square, New York, by an Anarchist recalls the noted Haymarket riot in Chicago twenty-two years ago this spring, which has many points in common with yesterday's fatal demonstration. No single event for many years made so profound an impression on the nation or resulted in such bitter feeling and sweeping results as this first striking act of Anarchy in America.

The participants in the Haymarket riot, who later were tried and convicted of plotting murder, were nearly all foreigners and the conclusion was reached that the great horde of immigrants sweeping into the country at that time was made up of Anarchists and undesirables who were overrunning the country with the ultimate purpose of lawlessness and revolution. Subsequent developments corrected this conclusion and it has been shown that the Haymarket killing was the act of a few Anarchists in a crowd of wildly excited men, whom inflammatory speeches had convinced that police were murderers and their enemies.

On May day, 1886, about 40,000 Chicago workmen struck for an eight-hour day. Two days later the strikers attacked the workmen leaving the McCormick plant. The police were called and half a dozen men were wounded in the struggle that followed. That night handbills were scattered over the town carrying this announcement in English and German:

> Great mass meeting at 7:30 o'clock at Haymarket, Randolph street, between Desplaines and Halsted. Good speakers will be present to denounce the latest atrocious act of the police, the shooting of our fellow-workmen yesterday afternoon.
>
> EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

By half past 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, May 4, a crowd of a thousand persons had gathered at the designated place. August Spies, editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, was the first speaker. After a long, rambling talk on the labor problem he reverted to the strike situation in Chicago.

"What means this display of gathering guns, cannon, bayonets, patrol wagons, clubs?" he said. "What means this calling out of the First regiment? Is it an entertainment for you? McCormick denies that he is responsible for the bloodshed yesteday. I say he lies. He is responsible for the death of our brothers."

Other speakers followed in a similar strain, one of them openly counseling the use of violence in avenging the men who had been shot by the police in the clash in front of the McCormick Harvester company's plant three days before.

Some of the conservative heads in the crowd of about 1,400 men protested against this rash counsel and there was the threat of an impending fight between members of the mob in the air. Word of the trouble was carried to the Desplaines street police station less than 100 yards away and 170 policemen were sent from the station as quickly as they could be assembled. They marched into the old Haymarket square, an area 2,900 feet long but only 150 feet wide, and proceeded quietly to the place where the crowd had gathered on Randolph street between Desplaines and Halstead street.

After momentary delay, while he took in the situation, Captain Ward, in charge of the detachments, raised his club to command attention and cried:

"In the name of the people of Illinois I command this crowd to disperse."

As he spoke a spluttering spark of fire described an arc from an alley behind the speakers' wagon. It fell with a roar in the middle of the street between the double columns of police. The explosion of the bomb killed one man almost at once and inflicted on several others wounds that proved mortal. A revolver fight between the police and the crowd followed. Newspaper accounts differ, but, according to the Annual Cyclopedia, seven policemen were killed and sixty wounded as a result of the explosion and fight and several members of the crowd were killed or wounded.

The bomb thrower was never discovered, but eight agitators were indicted and seven of them—Spies, Schwab, Fielden, Parsons, Fischer, Engel and Lingg—were found guilty of murder and sentenced to death. Another, named Neebe, was condemned to fifteen years' imprisonment.

Parsons, Fischer, Engel and Spies were hanged; the sentences of Schwab and Fielden were commuted to life imprisonment; Lingg killed himself in his cell by biting a stick of dynamite. Schwab, Fielden and Neebe were pardoned June 26, 1893, by Governor Altgeld on the ground that the facts tended to show that the bomb was thrown as an act of personal revenge against a police captain and that there was nothing to prove that the murderer' actions had been instigated by the men who were convicted.

In the excitement which followed the throwing of the bomb, the policemen of the city of Chicago did a remarkable thing—one which called the attention of a great part of the world to their courage and heroic forbearance. With the rioters firing on them and their comrades going down under the rain of bullets from the pistols of the mob, the policemen refused to lose their heads.

Few shots were fired in return and a battle much bloodier than the already sanguinary clash was avoided. Instead, the reinforced police surrounded as much of the mob as possible and made arrests with as little excitement as could be. In commemoration of this marked bravery a handsome bronze monument was raised in honor of the police on the spot where the clash occurred. On it is inscribed:

> Peace in the name of the people of Illinois.

Misused and ill-cared for, as is the common fate of the charges of American municipalities, this memento of one of the proudest and saddest days in Chicago"s history had finally to be taken from Haymarket square to one of the city's parks where it stands, accorded more honor and care than on the ground its memories consecrated.

THE ATTACK ON CHIEF SHIPPY.

A Chicago Anarchist Tried to Murder the Head of the Police.

The most recent Anarchist attacks on the police was the the attempt, less than a month ago, to murder George M. Shippy, chief of the Chicago police, in his home.

The morning of March 2 Lazarus Averbuch entered the home of Chief Shippy under the guise of having business with that official. He was shown to the officer's room. Something in the man's bearing warned Shippy and he called his wife while he held the Anarchist. Mrs. Shippy felt the revolver in the man's pocket and tried to hold it. In the struggle that followed Averbuch tore himself free and cut the chief in the side with his knife.

Momentarily checked, Shippy stopped long enough to let the would-be assassin draw his revolver. At this juncture the chief's son rushed in and was shot twice by the Anarchist. A coachman who came to the chief's assistance also was slightly wounded.

While Averbuch was firing at the others, however, Chief Shippy got his revolver out and opened fire on him. Four bullets took effect and the Anarchist died on the spot. Shippy's son is even now recovering from his wounds.

While there has been no evidence of a plot, the Chicago police are firmly convinced that the attack on Shippy was only the beginning of what would have been a butchery of officials, had the Anarchists succeeded in what is believed to have been their initial attempt.

FIRED AND THEN CALLED POLICE

Alexander Harris, a Negro, Killed by George Murray, His Nephew.

Alexander Harris, a negro, 25 years old, was shot in the neck and fatally wounded last night by George Murray, his nephew, 28 years old. Harris died at the general hospital two hours later.

The shooting occurred at Harris's home, 2105½ Harrison street. Murray was arrested by August Metzinger, a patrolman, and taken to the Walnut street police station. He made the following statement:

"Harris attacked my wife about a month ago. He came back to my house last night and said one of us must die. I fired three shots at him and he ran. He came back about 9 o'clock and I shot him."

Murray telephoned the police station that he had shot a man and waited until he was arrested.

A WOMAN STOLE A $42.50 HAT.

An Obliging Clerk in a Department Store Was Deceived.

A young woman went into a downtown department store yesterday afternoon and said she desired to buy a spring hat. The obliging saleswoman showed a number of the latest creations. Finally the young woman appeared to be almost persuaded.

"Now, if that only had a yellow bow in front I'd take it," she said.

Fortunately the saleswoman remembered that just such a hat was at the other end of the room. She went for it. When she returned the customer had left, wearing a hat that was tagged "$42.50." In its place was left a second-hand hat of small value.

A KANSAS CITY MAN WON.

Shelby Todhunter Nominated as Sheriff in an Arkansas County.

FAYETTEVILLE, ARK., March 28.—Shelby Todhunter, who won the Democratic primary for sheriff of Washington county, is a native of Clay county, Missouri. Todhunter lived in Kansas City while his brother, Robert S. Todhunter, was a member of the police force there for many years.

Citizen Crittenden's Glowing Words

Even if The Star desired to say unkind things of the Democratic candidate for Mayor—which under any circumstances it would be reluctant to do—it could hardly have the heart to speak derogatively or even discourteously, of the gentleman, whose earnest, eloquent, discriminating and generous commendation of the editor and owner of this newspaper is given herewith. Shying bricks at The Star is to be the sensational feature of the Democratic canvass and perhaps Candidate Crittenden may feel impelled to chuck an occasional missile in this direction to avoid being accused of undue delicacy, but whatever he may do in his quest for electoral favor, The Star will revert for consolation and renewed good cheer to the spontaneous and heartfelt eulogy uttered by Citizen Crittenden, candidate for nothing except for a place among the proud builders of a great city. Citizen Crittenden's speech, from which this verbatim excerpt is taken, was made at a dinner of real estate men, December 18, 1905:

* * * There is another who has been upon the firing line of every public movement of this city since it was a village. An editor of a great newspaper, like Greeley and Dana and Bennett and Watterson; his every act, and nearly every thought, has been marched in review of public opinion. There have been times when some of us differed with him. My first fight in public life, and I hope my last, was in opposition to his powerful newspaper, but an impartial review of his history will place him in the front rank with all the great benefactors of this city. He led the movement for the parks—he was the park pioneer. He led the movement for paved streets and a clean city. He led the magnificent movement that builded Convention hall. He has builded himself what is in reality a great park on the Southern edge of the city. He led the great movement for public baths. His splendid newspaper led the great movement for honesty in public office, which resulted in the election of the present Governor of this state. He has at all times and under all circumstances been upon the firing line for clean city government, for clean county government, for clean state and national government, and the crowning glory of his life, the greatest one asset of this great city, is that he is the founder, editor, owner and proprietor of what is regarded as the greatest newspaper in the world. I would suggest and do suggest, that in the days of his life, while he is still mingling with his fellow men, driving the great engine of progress for the people now on earth, Kansas City show to William R. Nelson, through some great public movement, that it has appreciated the great material and moral accomplishments which would, perhaps, not have been were it not for his wise and brave leadership. I rob the memory of no man of a single laurel when I say that which you know and I know, that William R. Nelson has done more for Kansas City than any thousand men who have ever lived and thrived there. His opportunities have been great, but he has made his opportunities.—T. T. Crittenden, jr., at the Real Estate Dinner, December 18, 1905.

QUESTIONS ABOUT SALOONS

ANSWERS FROM THE TWO CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR.

Superintendent of Anti-Saloon League Asked About Sunday Saloons, Other Dramshop Laws and the Sale of Liquor in Parks.

Seven ministers, representing the largest churches of these denominations of Kansas City, Christian, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and Congregational, met last Tuesday afternoon to discuss the position of the mayoralty candidates on the saloon question.

As a result of the meeting the Rev. Albert Bushnell, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, placed in the hands of the two candidates for mayor letters of which the following is a copy:

Dear Sir: In the names of the churches of this city, I herewith ask you three questions:

If you should be elected mayor of this city at the coming election will you, throughout your term of office, stand resolutely for the closed saloon on Sunday as required by law; for the enforcement of all laws pertaining to dramshops, and the safeguarding of our pleasure parks against the licensed sale of intoxicating liquors therein?

Hoping for a prompt reply, I remain, yours sincerely, ALBERT BUSHNELL.

MR. BEARDSLEY'S ATTITUDE PLAIN.

The first mail the next morning brought the following reply from Mr. Beardsley written on the bottom of the letter of inquiry:

Dear Mr. Bushnell: I will do all the things suggested in the above questions. That I have done these things during the past two years is proof of my position upon these questions. Faithfully yours, H. M. BEARDSLEY.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday passed with no reply from T. T. Crittenden, though Dr. Bushnell communicated with him by telephone and urged him to give an immediate reply. Yesterday the following letter was received at the office of the Anti-Saloon league:

Rev. Albert Bushnell, Superintendent Missouri Anti-Saloon league, 506 Kansas City Life building, city: Dear Sir—Your letter of March 24 received. I owe you an apology for not answering sooner, but you can readily understand how difficult it is for me to find occasion to even open my mail in these busy days of the campaign.

You ask me three questions. First, if elected mayor of Kansas City will I stand resolutely for the closed saloon on Sunday, as required by law? I answer yes.

Second—For the enforcement of all laws pertaining to the dramshop? I answer yes.

"IFS" IN CRITTENDEN'S REPLY.

Third—The safeguarding of our pleasure parks against the licensed sale of intoxicating liquors therein? In answer to that question I desire to say, if you mean the city's parks I am unalterably opposed to the granting of any license for the sale of intoxicating liquor upon any of the city's property.

If you refer to the granting of licenses to individuals doing business in or near parks other than the city's, my answer is this: that the board of police commissioners is vested with a wide discretion in the matter of granting or refusing licenses for the sale of liquor. It can and does refuse licenses whenever it thinks best for the interests of the community to do so, whether it be on account of the character of the applicant, the location of the proposed dramshop, or for any other reason.

If I were a member of that board, as mayor of Kansas City, I would pass upon each individual case as it came before me, and decide the same in the light of all the circumstances surrounding it, according to what I thought was best for the interests of the community. Yours truly, THOMAS T. CRITTENDEN.

CRITTEDEN'S NAME LED ALL THE REST.

Inasmuch as the city could not license saloons in the parks owned by the city if it desired, the first part of Mr. Crittenden's answer to the third question is wholly irrelevant. It is the private parks such as Electric park and Forest park that can be licensed and are, consequently, involved in Dr. Bushnell's question. The answer as to parks owned by companies and individuals is completely non-committal but an incident of last spring might throw light on the subject.

In the spring of 1907 the police board refused to grant a saloon license to Electric park. L. C. Boyle was employed by the Heim interests to secure, if possible, a reconsideration and a grant of the license. He appeared before the police board with a large number of letters asking that the dramshop license be granted. He told of petitions by citizens of the Twelfth ward. The following is from the The Star of June 6, quoting Mr. Boyle:

"From the rest of the city we have thousands of petitions, asking you to grant this license. We have also hundreds of letters asking you to grant the license." He read some of the letters and the names of signers of other letters.

Among the letters presented were appeals in behalf of the license by T. T. Crittenden, jr., Simpson & Groves, J. C. Wirthman."

A score of others were named in the list, but it was an odd circumstance that Mr. Boyle read Mr. Crittenden's letter first.

POINT TO O'HERN'S RECORD.

And Beardsley's Opponent Indorses the Saloon Keeper, Republicans Say.

In a recent ward meeting at Thirteenth and Central streets last Tuesday night the Democratic candidate for mayor left the platform after delivering his speech. He was called back by the chairman, who whispered in his ear. Then the candidate for mayor mounted the platform again and said:

"And I want you people to vote for Mike O'Hearn for alderman from the Second ward. I want 'Mickey' in the council with me and if you send him there I will personally stand good for him."

C. L. Orr, in a tent meeting at Independence and Brighton avenues last night, said:

"How do you people regard a candidate for mayor who stands publicly for 'Mickey' O'Hearn and says he will personally stand good for him? O'Hearn is a protege of Ed Butler of St. Louis, by whom he was tutored. O'Hearn came to Kansas City from St. Louis about fifteen years ago and has owned a saloon since that time. He now owns a saloon on Walnut street south of Twelfth street."

Mr. Orr then went into the saloon record of O'Hearn at length.

MISS O'BRIEN'S FATE IN DOUBT.

The M. S. U. Executive Board Hears the Appeal of the Independence Co-Ed.

COLUMBIA, MO., March 28.—The executive board of the University of Missouri heard the appeal to-day of Miss Agnes O'Brien, who was suspended some weeks ago for insubordination and discourtesy. She refused to sign an apology to her instructor, Miss Florence Alden, as it was worded by the discipline committee. She was then suspended until the close of this semester. Her case was appealed to the executive board. She was represented by Colonel J. E. Price, a lawyer, and A. L. Oliver, who made speeches after the papers in the appeal had been read. The discipline committee was represented by Captain James Frazier and Prof. M. L. Lipscomb, who also spoke.

The board took no definite action, but has the matter under advisement.

Miss O'Brien was accused of being discourteous to her instructor while remonstrating with her against the summary dismissal of Miss Mary Craig of Knobnoster, Mo., from basket ball for failure to take a cold shower bath after a basket ball practice at Bothwell gymnasium. Sympathetic strike was talked among the students, but quiet was restored several days ago when Miss O'Brien returned to her home in Independence, Mo. She did not attend the trial. Miss O'Brien sent Miss Alden an apology of her own wording, but this was not accepted by the discipline committee.

EMBANKMENT SAVES A TRAIN.

A Frisco Passenger Derailtd Near Bristow, Ok., Without Fatalities.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK., March 28.—While running at a speed estimated at twenty-five miles an hour, St. Louis & San Francisco passenger train No. 407, due here at 7 o'clock this evening, was wrecked in a cut one mile east of Bristow, Ok., at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon. The engine jumped the track and was followed by cars, but none was overturned because of the deep embankments on both sides of the track.

It was reported here that eight persons had been killed and many injured, but the agent at Bristow denies this report, saying that only one person, the baggageman, was injured and he only slightly. The engineer brought the engine to a stop immediately after leaving the rails, but had it not been for the embankment, it is believed, many would have been killed. Traffic was delayed several hours.

FOR COMMISSION PETITIONS.

Plans to Be Made at a Meeting in Kansas City, Kas., Thursday.

The advocates of the commission form of government for Kansas City, Kas., will hold a meeting Thursday night to decide on plans for obtaining the signatures of voters to petitions, asking Mayor D. E. Cornell to call a special election to decide whether the plan shall be adopted. The petitions must be signed by about 1,500 qualified voters, or 10 per cent of the number of voters registered in the city.

DEMOCRATS ACCUSE THE SPEAKER OF VIOLATING HIS OATH.

John Sharp Williams Called for the Yeas and Nays, a Constitutional Prerogative, but Was Waved Aside.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—In a scene of the wildest disorder Speaker Cannon declared the House of Representatives adjourned to-day after a continuous legislative day that had lasted since April 6. His ruling that the House was adjourned followed a viva voce vote and left John Sharp Williams, minority leader, in the aisle calling at the top of his lungs for a division, which is the accepted preliminary to a call for the yeas and nays, which are guaranteed by the constitution.

Speaker Cannon only smiled in the direction of Mr. Williams, while the Republican majority loudly applauded a ruling by which the session, already prolonged beyond the usual time, was saved the additional forty minutes consumed by a roll call. But the Speaker's exercise of his "arbitrary discretion of recognition" was taken as a personal affront by all the Democratic members, and the fight that has dragged on through many weeks of filibustering is expected to gain new life.

THE DEMOCRATS WERE ANGRY.

In the Democratic cloak rooms exclamations of "pernicious outrage" and "unheard of abuse of power," were heard, while John Sharp Williams soon afterward in his minority room gave out an interview in which he charged that the Speaker had deliberately violated his oath of office for the purpose of saving forty minutes.

"The facts are," said Mr. Williams, "that the Speaker had just announced the number of the vote, as he had counted and said 'the ayes seem to have it.' This, if undisputed, would have adjourned the House with the simple announcement of it by the Speaker, but before he said another word, I called for division, which is the natural prelude to call for the roll which is provided for the minority in the constitution.

"This action of the Speaker is unprecedented. No speaker that we have ever had—and we have had Democratic and Repuublicans who were accustomed to have their way—has ever dared thus transparently to violate the oath that he swore to uphold the constitution.

"There is no question of his not having heard me when I called for division. He came down to me afterwards and tried to pass it off as a joke, just as he has frequently done.

REFUSED TO SEE A JOKE.

"'Ah, Sharp,' he said. But I waved him away. I did not do so in anger, but because I believed I owed it to the minority not to allow their constitutional rights to be turned into a mere joking matter. And what will the country think when it hears how the Speaker, who has taken the oath to support the constitution—the only oath required in this country—has turned that oath into a joke? His action is simply revolutionary. Even Reed, who was arbitrary enough, has certain definite limits to which he adhered. He overrode the minority as much as the present Speaker ever did, but when it came to rights given in the constitution he halted. So has the Speaker heretofore.

"What am I going to do about it? There are many things I could do. I could send the minority home and leave it to the majority to keep up a quorum. But I do not intend to protect the minority against revolutionary measures by adopting the same measures. I am simply going along with my programme as I announced it at first and as I repeated it just before the Speaker declared the House adjourned.

"I am not filibustering, and the Speaker knows it. Whenever I call for the yeas and nays that call goes to the country freighted with the demand that the Republicans give us a campaign publicity bill and that they put wood pulp on the free list. This is my policy, these are the things the President has demanded. I intend to keep up the fight until the President backs down.

THE PRESIDENT WON'T BE BLAMED.

"I don't mean until he backs down through an interview with Jim Watson, but on his say. If he sticks in the fight till the elections come the Republican men here will have to stand the brunt of public opinion, but the President will go free."

Mr. Williams appeared absolutely calm while he made this statement, but a number of his followers crowded into his room to hear him, and they were anything but amused at the Speaker's action. Many of them took the attitude that the Speaker had given a personal insult to their leader and that it ought to be resented by some overt act.

DO YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUNG?

Well, Then, Lead a Simple Life and Get a Pink Diaphragm.

Rose C. Tillotson in New York Evening World.

Are you old and wrinkled and do you long for the bloom of youth? If electrical massage has failed you and the before and after treatment proved futile, the despairing one whose face is crossed by elevated, subway and surface lines can take heart, for the eternal question of woman—how to look young though old—is solved at last.

The New Thought specific for old age—latest producer of youthful charms—is guaranteed to bring joy to the hearts of ancient ladies with girlish aspirations. If you are a century plant and want to look like sweet 16, just cultivate a delicate pink diaphragm.

At least this is the cheap, recherche and novel method of defying Father Time suggested by Mrs. Florence Brewster Hudnall, who has come all the way from Georgia to divulge to fair and otherwise New Yorkers the secret of successful longevity.

When I rapped on the New Thoughtist's door, a lithe little woman with abundant brown hair parted over a face of peculiar sweetness greeted me cordially and acknowledged herself the leader of the new doctrine of youth.

"There is no reason why women should grow old," said Mrs. Hudnall in explaining the secret of eternal youth. "When the consciousness of infinite union is learned one may aspire to become 100, and in order to accomplish this a pink diaphragm should be cultivated. A pink diaphragm produces a sweet disposition and white corpuscles healthy old age."

"But how are pink diaphragms and white corpuscles grown?" I asked, vaguely wondering if my system would have to be recolored.

"Drink sour milk," came the prompt answer.

"One grows old from disease," continued Mrs. Hudnall. "To avoid disease, grow white corpuscles, and to grow white corpuscles live on sour milk. Such a diet may not seem healthful at first, but as each person swallows 14,000 germs per hour, why hesitate at a few more? Fruits, nuts and cereals are also allowed in the diet I recommend to those who wish to grow young, but moderation is necessary. Besides moderation, thorough mastication is important.

"Exercise and plenty of it is the third rule, and fresh air night and day comes fourth. Cheerfulness is necessary if a woman wants to keep young, for pessimism and worry will produce wrinkles in abundance. Especially should cheerfulness be cultivated at the table. Frivolous conversation helps digest food. Don't eat when depressed, worried, angry or exhausted unless you are willing to start a poison factory in your system.

"Work, too, will help to prolong life, for no idler is happy, and happiness is essential to longevity."

"Then the New Thoughtist who wants to be one hundred must live the simple life?" I inquired.

"Exactly," answered Mrs. Hudnall. "A diet of onions, carrots, cabbages and apples, and plenty of sour milk will produce wonderful changes in the appearance of the aging man or woman. Any one can live to be one hundred and look young at that age, too, but unless you cultivate a pink diaphragm and white corpuscles longevity is impossible."

Mrs. Sage's Gift to Woman's Exchange.

From the New York Tribune.

Mrs. Russell Sage could not be present at the thirtieth annual meeting of the managers of the New York Exchange for Women's Work held yesterday at Madison avenue and Forty-third street, and so she sent in her stead a gift of $2,500. This rounds out the sum of $10,000 contributed to the Woman's exchange during the last few months by its "fairy godmother," as she is sometimes called.

"We call her that," one member explained, "because when we specially need something it is Mrs. Sage who comes to the rescue."

The first installment of the $10,000 given by Mrs. Sage was used to put a roof over the exchange, the old roof being very much worse for wear.

Yesterday's meeting was a celebration of the thirtieth birthday of the Woman's exchange. Mrs. W. G. Choate, the president, said in her report that during the thirty years of its existence the exchange had sent out to consignors $1,384,389.

Don't Let Your Piles Grow

Every Hemorrhoidal Ulcer is a Fertile Field for Cancer and Other Deadly Diseases.

WOMEN FIGHT IN THE STREET

CROWD AT A ST. LOUIS THEATER SEES AN UNEXPECTED SHOW.

A Commission Man's Wife Pounces Upon Him in Company With the Wife of a Doctor and a Fight Ensues—Both Go to Jail.

ST. LOUIS, April 18.—The large crowd pouring into the Century theater to-night witnessed a curtain raiser shortly before 8 o'clock when Mrs. Ella Vanderpool, wife of a commission merchant, and Mrs. Evalina Jones, wife of a physician, engaged in a fist fight that extended from the lobby of the show house to Eleventh and St. Charles streets. Both women were arrested and locked up at Central station. An hour later they were released on bonds.

Mrs. Jones was with John Vanderpool, husband of Ella Vanderpool, when the trouble started. Mrs. Vanderpool was accompanied by her 18-year-old sister, Jessie Roe. Jessie and Vanderpool took to their heels when the fight started. Later Miss Roe came to the station of her own accord.

"She was with my husband smiling into his face and holding his arm," declared Mrs. Vanderpool at Central station. "She was trying to steal him from me."

"I just met your husband by accident to-night and he walked a few feet with me, when this woman pounced on me like a setting hen," asserted Mrs. Jones.

"You've been telephoning to him all the time. You have been trying to steal him," screamed Mrs. Vanderpool.

"You're crazy," asserted Mrs. Jones. "I've got a good husband of my own, and he is worth ten of yours."

"I guess I'll cross-charge you both with disturbing the peace," interrupted Desk Sergeant Conlon at this juncture.

Mrs. Vanderpool and Mrs. Jones were both handsomely dressed and diamonds glittered from their fingers. Mrs. Vanderpool wore a large hat, which was cracked in several places when she arrived at Central station. The other had a large flower hat surmounted by a bird that was decapitated in the fracas.

While being booked at the station both women stared at each other with the dust of battle in their eyes. Lieutenant Hess had an officer by the side of each of them and when they were sent to the holdover he had them placed on opposite sides of the row of cells.

A Man Who Watches Holes in Street Watches Humanity Also.

From the Chicago News.

John McCormick, 177 Ontario street, probably has the oddest night job in Chicage. It is John's duty to prevent people from stealing the holes that the gas company digs in the street, for the boss of the gang under which John works says that while the big town is asleep night wanderers will pick up and carry away anything they happen to see.

When the gas company delves in the ground to unearth a section of pipe and night finds the work incomplete, a red fence is run around the openings and a lot of red lights are hung on the fence.

Recently when the pipes in North Ashland avenue were being recalked John was called ot duty at the corner of Belle Plaine avenue. There he constructed a windbreak after ideas of his own. Two trees furnished the background, a wide plank was closely fitted between the two trunks. Then a wing of planks was constructed at each side. In front he collected a big pile of broken boards that had been taken from the foundation of the wooden pavement and this furnished the fuel for an all night roaring fire. From a seat improvised in the queer looking stall, John may look down Ashland avenue and keep a double row of red lights within his gaze.

From 6 o'clock to 6 o'clock, through all the long hours of the night, the faithful watchman may be discerned, either sitting at his fire or walking in the littered street, to see that no light fingered gentry have lifted the excavations or run away with the red fence or lanterns. Scores of people talk to him as they pass to their homes; early in the evenings the boys gather and sit around his fire, now and then putting on a fresh fagot to make it blaze and light the rugged form sitting between the wings. Then the old watchman lights his pipe and tells the boyish crowd grouped around him of the days when he was a coal heaver and of the great commerce carrying leviathans of the lakes that he helped to provide with fuel for a long trip. He relates other 'longshore tales, some of them harking back to the days when human hands, instead of machinery now in use, were engaged to load and unload ships from many points. Tale after tale the old watcher relates, until the crowd is broken by mothers calling their youngsters to bed.

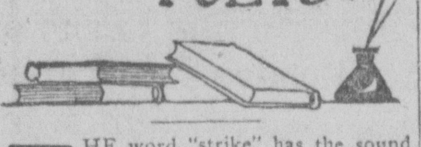
THE FIRST BREADWINNER POETS.



THE word "strike" has the sound of an up to date coinage, yet it is as old as our earliest labor troubles. It was part of Chaucer's "Well of English Undefiled," and if not in common use by that poet it was only because his were courtly chronicles—they had to do with the lives of priest and king.

The first outbreak definitely catalogued as revolt of labor appears in England in the Fourteenth century. The terrible plague known as the "black death" devastated Europe, swooped upon Britain, and after its ravages there followed a rise in the prices paid to hirelings—"because," says a chronicler of the time, "the cattle strayed through the fields and corn and there was none who could drive them."

The law of supply and demand did, for the first time in English history conscientiously apply itself to human hands, and the price of their work rose accordingly. Harvests rotted in the fields, ground was left untilled because of the "extravagant demands" on the one hand and the "moneyed oppression" on the other.

This was a time favorable to the "landless men"—laborers wandering out of work. They found themselves masters of the labor market and the itinerant laborer or artisan easily turned bandit, enforcing his lawless demands upon masters whose own "villeins" had for the most part been killed off by the plague.

To combat this evil many laws were enacted by the crown, stipulating not only the price of wages, but ordaining that all able bodied laborers, men and women, must serve another—whoever had the price, whether he, the workman, had the need of money or not. If the laborer sought another parish, if he attempted to leave the soil, if he rebelled at employer or wage, he was subject to fine or imprisonment.

"In the town," says Greene, "where this system of forced labor was applied with even more rigor than in the country, strikes and combinations became frequent."

Fines and forfeiture not availing—for the yeomen even then were made of stern stuff—they were branded with red hot irons.

This was the time of Chaucer, but it is not in the Canterbury Tales that we get a picture of the labor troubles of the Fourteenth century. It is rather in the poetry of William Longland that we look for description of the first breadwinner's revolt.

On the eve of the great struggle between wealth and labor Longland stands alone in his fairness to both. In a famous apologue he paints the ruler (in this case, John of Gaunt) as the cat who, greedy though she might be for both, yet keeps the rats, the rich, from the mice, the multitude.

Laborers, Longland tells us, that "have no land to live on but their homes, disdained to live on penny ale or bacon, but demanded fresh flesh or fish against the chilling of their maw."

Elsewhere he gives us a picture of a farm of that day—"I have no penny pullets for to buy, nor neither geese nor pigs, but two green cheeses, a few curds and cream, and an oaten cake, and two loaves of beans, and bran baken for my children. I have no salt bacon, nor no cooked meat collops for to make, but I have parsley and leeks, and many cabbage plants, and eke a cow and calf and a cart mare."

To this laborer, newly inspired with the hopes that were to make England a race of freemen, he concludes, "I warn ye, workmen, win while ye may, for hunger hitherward hasteth him fast."

The cause of the oppressed had another advocate in John Ball, the "mad priest of Kent," and it was from his lips that England heard the first declaration of the rights of man.

The quaint words of this poet-parson caught public attention and the whole system of the middle ages received a death blow in his popular rhymes. Their rude jingle began the literature of political and social controversy which was to develop later into cartoon and pamphlet.

In this rough verse is a demand for plain justice, an appeal to the simple, elemental morals. Ball himself was one of the many poor parsons of that day, followers of Wycliffe They took the place of the wealthier clergy whose extortion made them easy targets for an outraged yeomanry.

Attended by a motley train of trakers and chafferers, scriveners and plowmen, Jack Ball and his ilk, dressed in russet homespun and barefoot, went about singing:

Jack Miller he hath grounden small, small,
The King's Son (of Heaven) he shall pay for all, all.

or again,

Falseness and guile have reigned too long,
True love is away that was so good,
And clerks for wealth, work woe.

Their plea was for a rude sort of communism, and was first directed against the rich ecclesiastics. However, it came soon to include all the proprietary classes, until from lip to lip ran the question (in the Nineteenth century still unanswered), ,

When Adam delved and Eve span,
Who was then, the gentleman?

English Travel Gypsy Fashion.

From the Cleveland Plaindealer.

Gypsies? Gypsies, nothing. "English travelers," these. They're in camp just now up the Cuyahoga river, near Willow station. A few more days—and a few more horses, and they begin their gladsome summer jaunt around the country.

They're all related, all these English travelers. Cousins, they call themselves. The head of the family is king. Each family travels by itself, unless for a few miles they fall in by accident with other travelers, and merge their caravans for a few days, or hours. The camp near Cleveland consists of three families, all of whom owe allegiance to a common head—for the heads of the smaller groups are his two sons and his daughter's husband. Jeffrey is the family name. The Jeffreys have been traveling for generations. In the patois of these nature loving people, everything centers around that one word, "travel," because it is nine-tenths of their dictionary.

The old man traveled in England before he came to America. He was born on the road in England, the child of a family that knew only to travel from one part of England to another. It pleases them to differentiate very sharply between themselves and the conventional "gypsies." There is a difference. English travelers are clean, honest, manly and intelligent. They live well, and travel because they love to. Their wagons are ornately got up, upholstered within and painted gorgeously without. Their traveling paraphernalia is the same as that of the ordinary gypsies. The main difference is with the people.

"Old horses?" repeated the youngest son of the family, James Jeffrey. "Always. We prefer 'em. Mean more money than good ones. Also less worry. If one dies no tears are shed. But we buy our horses. Yes, buy them cheap. We know how to buy horses. It's born in us, I reckon. And then, we know how to improve them, how to cure the faults which their first owners' carelessness caused, and make them salable. We never lack for money. And we never steal."

Natural Inference.

A CLUB OF HERO WORSHIPPERS.

An English Actor's Feminine Admirers Form an Association.

LONDON, April 8.—Every popular and good looking actor in these days has a bevy of feminine admirers who go into raptures over his every performance, pester him with requests for signed photographs and more or less openly make love to him. From which result occasional divorce court proceedings. But Lewis Waller, who plays the part of the picturesque hero in "A White Man," the English version of Royle's drama of Western life, "The Squaw Man," has achieved the distinction, without seeking it, of bringing into existence a unique organization of stage hero worshippers. What makes it unique is the fact that every member is pledged never to speak to the object of her adoration, never to ask him for free seats and never to hug the stage door to catch a glimpse of him as he leaves the theater. Any violation of these rules is punished with expulsion. They may lose their heads over him, but they must keep a tight grip on their hearts.

The women who have passed this self denying ordinance have formed themselves into a club, which has some fifty members and bears the mystic title, "K. O. W." These letters stand for "Keen Order of Wallerites." The keen ones all wear badges displaying an oval photograph of the actor manager on one side and a quartered shield on the other containing devices emblematic of the plays in which he has made his biggest hits. On Monday night—the one night in the week when most of them are not to be found at the Lyric feasting their eyes upon him—they meet to discuss the merits of their favorite. It speaks volumes for his merits that, although the club has been in existence six months, the "talkfest" still goes on.

Waller is a James K. Hackett style of actor and delights his audiences by always "winning out" whatever may be the odds against him. As the hero of Royle's stirring play he is making as big a success here as William Faversham is doing in America. It is likely to run for the rest of the season.

Cleveland's Woman Druggist Quits.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cleveland lost its only woman pharmacist when Miss Hildore A. Bloomstine proprietor of a cheery little store at 7514 Cedar avenue, S. E., retired and sold her store a few days ago.

"I still believe the drug bsuiness is a proper sphere for women, however," says Miss Bloomstine. "I have had to leave it because my health isn't as good as it ought to be and the late hours and responsibility have been hard on me."

Miss Bloomstine had a fully equipped store. With the assistance of her sister, Mrs. Mary Howard, she dispensed prescriptions, soda water, stationery, stamps and information, according to recognized customs. Her soda water fountain was a popular place, but the cares of the business grew too great for her.

"I still hope to practice my profession as a pharmacist, though," she said. "It is a comparatively new field for women, but a good field, I think. I wouldn't want to discourage any woman from studying for the work."

A $40,000 Furniture Sale in Our New Store!

What This New Walnut St. Store Means to You

You are a frequent buyer of merchandise. That is so, in the very nature of things. Three things at least are of importance to you when you needs must buy, viz:

First—You want to know where is the largest and best assortment of goods to be found.

Second—You want to know that these goods are dependable goods.

Third—You want to know that the goods are reasonable in price.

Our New Walnut Street Store gives the needed room in which to show and sell many goods which heretofore we had to carry in stockrooms for want of selling space, thus tremendously enlarging our assortment of merchandise exposed for sale.

The New Walnut Street Store gives such good light you can see with your own eyes that the goods are first class, dependable goods.

The New Walnut Street Store and its great Basement have the facilities which we did not formerly possess, to plainly show the people of Kansas City what wonderful savings this store joined to our Big Main Street Store really could effect for those who shop at this progressive, cash establishment.

So now, when we invite you to inspect our New Walnut Street Store, it is with a modest pride in the fact that in the work of store building we have really achieved for you these vitally necessary things in store facilities.

Not only have we added for your use and convenience the acres of floor space in the Walnut street store, but the facilities of the Main street store have been very greatly increased by being given greater room as a result of numerous departments having moved to the Walnut street section. IT IS YOUR GREAT SHOPPING MART. COME AND USE IT.

The third floor of our new Walnut Street Store is almost wholly taken up with our new enlarged Furniture Department. Starting to-morrow morning at 8:00 o'clock, we shall begin the sale of this $40,000 stock at the kind of prices that will make you appreciate what we mean when we say LOWEST KNOWN COST in Kansas City—the kind of prices that have made this Furniture Department outgrow its old space and caused us to give it double the space it ever had before.

IN THE HEART OF THINGS

REVERIE AND RUMINATION

Amongst these trees, upon this river's bank only a few years ago, the North American redskin held undisputed sway. Now his race is practically extinct, a part of the covered up history over which sweeps the flood of the centuries.

To-day our proud white race, with its vast and intricate machinery of civilization, has domination.

The savage redskin lived by the chase and through his prowess, in the waters, in the forests and upon the plains. He did not devastate the forests, depopulate the plains and the rivers and rob the soil of its virgin richness. His predecessors on back down the centuries unknown—untold—came upon the scene, had their day and disappeared, as did his sturdy race. They each and all had their religions, their superstitions, which did not save them from perishing from the face of the earth.

To-day the white race, with all its arrogant plunder of Nature's vast resources, is having its day upon earth. Its religions, its superstitions, its science, its inventions cannot save it. Extinction and oblivion await it only a little way ahead.

Ah! the great impenetrable mystery of it all! And our little brief lives are so important to us, so serious, so earnest, so vital, and why? When it's over then what? Why should we worry or care? Is it not of far greater importance that we live each day of our lives as if that were the only day we had on earth? Live it to the fullest of joy and of usefulness in serving loved ones—in serving the companions who are with us on this old world stage now and who will go hence as we shall soon go hence?

Health, love, prosperity, happiness and joy being the highest achievements of the race, can we spend our brief existence more nobly than by assuring those blessings to ourselves, our loved ones and our good companions in this short life? PAST, PRESENT and FUTURE must answer that there can be no higher ambition.

ACROSS THE ALPS BY CANAL BOAT

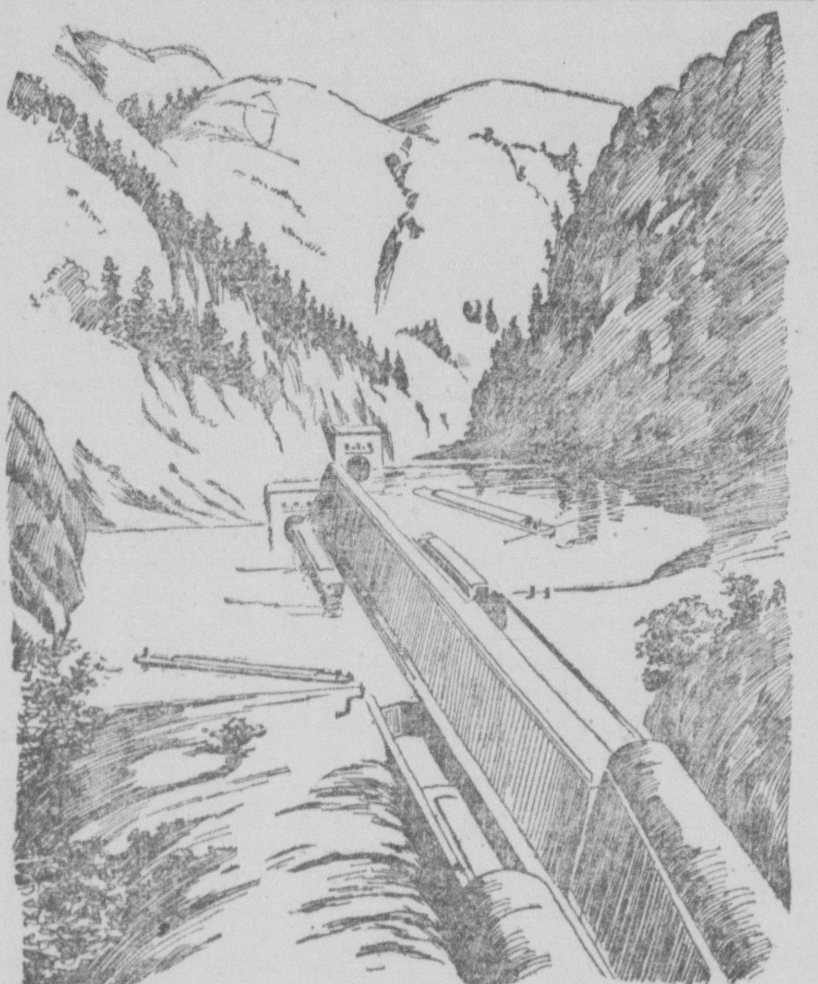
SOME kings do good things for their people.

When the present king of Italy, short-legged, awkward, garlic smelling, sought a wife almost in vain, the smiling world did not know he would turn out the far-seeing leader of a waking race—even in a business sense. Victor Emanuel III. is putting the last touches on an engineering enterprise that he believes will revolutionize European freights in favor of Italians. It is the world's freight dream of an inclined canal. The great difficulty always has been that the water would flow out. It will take canal boats over the great Alps from Genoa to the Rhine, by Lake Constance. The canal construction will be done with amazing rapidity. The amount of water needed will be comparatively small. There will be no freezing in winter, no leakage in summer. And the power for all this freight work will be gratis, natural hydraulics, the old device of the simple canal lock. The Italian engineer, Peter Caminada, whose only work heretofore has been done in South America, called the king's attention to the plan.



A RESERVOIR ON THE MOUNTAIN CLIMBING CANAL.

"A freight canal over the Alps!" says Senator Colombo, a friend of the king. "It would be insufficient to handle the traffic necessary to make it pay; its construction would be endless in time, expense and engineering difficulty; and the mechanical moving of the boats would alone be too costly—but for Peter Caminada's idea of genius. It is tubular."

HOW THE TRICK IS TURNED.

With the one word, tubular, difficulties disappear. No necessity to follow horizontal planes, impossible over the Alps. On the contrary, the cement tubes can be laid at any desired inclination over all the varying accidents of surface. There is no excessive diameter which would render ordinary canal-tunnels impossibly difficult and expensive. Indeed, freedom from the horizontal will reduce the tunneling for short cuts.

"Imagine a cylindrical tube filled with water and held vertically," says Senator Colombo. "The water plane will be circular. Slant the tube, and the water plane, while remaining horizontal, assumes an elliptical form—the more elliptical the more the tube itself slants toward the horizontal. Now, if you let out the water from the bottom of such slanting tube, anybody that floats on its elliptical water-plane will descend with it, following two simultaneous movements, downward and forward."

You have only to slant a glass part full of water to see the elliptical plane and get the idea.

"If, in the same way, you fill an empty slanting tube, the water plane will mount it, making the greater horizontal progress the more the tube itself lies toward the horizontal," continues the Italian senator. From this simple idea Peter Caminada got his tubular canal lock plan. Caminada says:

"The rising or descending water constitutes the plane. On it the canal boats rise and descend, in their natural element, without need of special appliances. Two slightly slanting tube sections are coupled, parallel. One serves for the rising boats, the other for the descending boats; and they have in common the up-stream and down-stream crossing reservoirs, while other supply reservoirs may be at different levels.

LITTLE WATER IS NEEDED.

"One of the tube sections is full. Its parallel tube section is empty. At the top of the full section enters a canal boat ready to descend. Into the botom of the empty one enters a canal boat ready to mount. The twin sections, having their different locks, communicate appropriately. By opening the first connection water from the full section enters the empty section and the two boats rise and descend approaching each other, each in its own tube, until the level of the water is the same in each. Then the water communication is cut off."

"Yes, then what?" everyone asks.

"Then, for the down-going boat, the remainder of the water is let out of the bottom of its tube section," answers Peter Caminada. "It is not lost water. It feeds the tube section lower down. While for the rising boat, its half-full tube section is completely filled with like waste water from above. This arrangement permits the simultaneous movement up and down of two canal boats at an expense of water equal to half the contents of one tube section."

As the boats are always passing through tube sections, a voyage will be as if through long, dim lighted sewers, out into delightful cases of greenery and scenery, snug little lakes, locked in by crags and peaks—the crossing and supplying reservoirs.

For bizarre novelty, men will take trips for the strange sensation of going through the interminable tubes. The boats will not be moving over a flat water surface, as in Paris sewers. Suppose you are going up the Alps from the Italian side. You enter a tube section. When the lock has closed behind you, what do you perceive in front? Water to float on? No. You feel that your boat lies on water. You see a long ellipse-end in front of you—and beyond it a stretch of dry tunnel.

And just that and nothing else. You feel an onward, upward movement. The tube walls pass by you. You are rising on the rising water plane, that's all, until you at last come out into the bright oasis of one of the supplying reservoirs.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE GOING DOWN.

And the down trip! Ahead of you the roof will seem to slant down slowly till it meets the water level. Will you feel as if you must bump into black, lowering roof as you move on? No, because you do not feel that you are moving over water. You're not moving over water. The walls slide past you. Behind, in the dim light you see an elliptical swirl of water, a roof that rises continually—and a dry floor emerging strangely!

It is not probable that anyone will take the trip twice for pleasure, but the object of the Alps canal is business. Its construction, according to Caminada, will be so comparatively quick and cheap as to astonish the world. All canal digging proper is avoided.

"The material of the tubes will be some kind of concrete," says Senator Colombo. "And the only turning over of ground will be that necessary to their laying. As the diameter of the tubes will be small—only great enough to pass one canal boat, the consumption of water will be small. As the tubes will be continually emptying themselves, all freezing in winter will be avoided. For the same cause all danger of infiltration and erosion will be obviated, while the comparative thickness and complete homogeneousness of the tubes will keep them in a natural state of repair, almost without cost."

The canal route is from Genoa over the Little Appenines, then across plains and easy canal country up to Milan and Lake Como. The Alps will be attacked by the Maloja pass, far easier than the Simplon.

"The Alps canal can be completely laid in two years, with its reservoirs and locks, all ready," says the engineer, Caminada.

"And the water?" some one asked him.

"We have all we need and more," he said. "We know exactly where it is to come from."

And there stands the king of Italy behind him, silent, short-legged, garlic-smelling, but inscrutably the master-mind of present-hour Italy. He has already counted up the cost of the canal. Now he is counting up the profits Italy will make by dragging the freights of half Europe to and through the canal.

"COUSIN BILL" SAVED HIM.

A Prisoner Chose the County Prosecutor as His Lawyer.

In the early '70s Senator William H. Sears, whose death occurred at Macon, Mo., recently, was a new fledged lawyer, with a natural optimistic opinon of his importance. When a Democratic victory swept him into the office of prosecuting attorney he felt that he was right on the top round of the ladder reaching to the hall of fame. Judge John W. Henry was on the bench at Macon at that time, and he was surrounded by an unusually strong bar. The judge was in the very prime of manhood and blessed with the keenest sense of humor. One day a tall, gaunt corn cracker, with his pants tucked in his boots and his coat at home in the barn, was brought in, for stealing corn.

Judge Henry looked at the picturesque prisoner with mingled amusement and pity. The man didn't seem to be of the criminal class, but only an ignorant fellow raised in the backwoods, with scant knowledge of the difference between right and wrong. The judge felt inclined to help the man out a bit.

"Mr. Bogardus," said the judge, "you have heard the indictment read; what do you say?"

"Well, mister, it's just this way," said the prisoner, holding a trembling hand in front of his mouth; "Bob tole me——"

"Never mind what Bob told you. Did you steal that corn"

"I didn't steal nobody's corn, sir. When I was a-raising that crop——"

"Have you got a lawyer?"

The poor fellow looked around the room helplessly, until his eyes lit on Senator Sears, who was the prosecutor, and at whom he pointed a long forefinger, as he said:

"Thar's Cousin Bill over thar; guess he'll do."

"Bill Sears?"

"Yep—it's him."

"But he is the prosecutor," said Judge Henry. "Say—is Bill Sears your cousin?"

"Yep."

Judge Henry turned to Mr. Sears, who affirmed the prisoner's statement.

"And so Bill Sears is you cousin!" exclaimed the judge. "And you are willing to admit that in front of all these people. Well, if that is so, prisoner at the bar, you have suffered enough. I believe I will let you off this time. But, see here. Next time you raise corn you want to raise your own; don't raise it out of your neighbor's bins in the night time. If you do and are up here again, even your relationship to 'Cousin Bill' won't save you."

That was the last time Mr. Bogardus ever was in the hands of the law. For years after that, when some hard looking specimen was up before the court, minus a lawyer, some young "smarty" would be certain to rise and suggest "that Cousin Bill be appointed to defend."

Indian Barbarity.

From Judge.

"Hiram's boy, Jeptha, I see, is goin' ter be a sculptor. Queer thing fer a feller to want ter go inter. Wouldn't like it myself. Still, I'd rather sculp than ter git sculped."

IS PHRENOLOGY A FAKE?

THIS SCIENTIST SAYS THERE IS NOTHING IN CRANIAL BUMPS.

The Size of the Brain, the Eyes and the Action of the Facial Muscles the Only Indexes to Mentality, Declares Dr. Hrdlicka.

That the "weak chin," "unintellectual forehad," "eloquent mouth" and "patrician nose;" the "bumps" of "domesticity," "secretiveness," "observation," and all of the other various and sundry distinguishing marks of the human head and face are misnomers, without the least significance as indexes to mentality or character, is declared by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, in charge of the laboratory of physical anthropology, United States National museum. Dr. Hrdlicka's conclusions are based upon extensive scientific work which he has been carrying on, particularly during the past five years.

"Do you find any truth at all in the science of phrenology?" the anthropologist was asked.

"None whatever," he replied "All of the widespread ideas about human character showing in the configuration of the head and face have their origin in the early years of the last century. The earliest pioneers in phrenology did some actual good to science. They stimulated the research in the localization of the brain functions, resulting in the discovery that definite parts of the brain controlled certain groups of muscles, such as those of the thumb, arm, leg, etc. But here their usefulness ended. Before gaining more complete knowledge from actual observation they extended phrenology along the lines of pure unwarranted theory and claimed that mental activities, as well as the muscles, had definite brain centers which developed in proportion as their respective functions were exercised. Then they took the further step and taught that a special development of any mental faculty was accompanied by a protrusion of the skull over the brain center serving to this particular faculty. And then came easily the final step—belief in ability to diagnose mental qualities by these 'bumps,' and the practice of 'phrenology' or such diagnostication. Students using purely scientific methods have discovered that such functions as hearing and seeing occupy certain areas of the brain which are large and not clearly circumscribed, and that there is a definite lobe of the brain concerned with speech. But here the differentiation of the brain, so far as mental activities are concerned, seems to end, and no amount of study has thus far been able to isolate our mental functions, which—except so far as they depend on sense impressions—seem to be manifestations of the gray matter of the cerebrum—or 'greater brain'—at large."

"BUMPS" NOT INDEXES TO CHARACTER.

"Of what significance, then, are the various 'bumps' on the skull?"

"The various elevatons of the skull are features more or less common to all people, but showing more in some than in others. They have nothing whatever to do with mentality or with any function of the brain. Some are due merely to differences in muscular development. There cannot possibly be a shadow of reality in any diagnostication of mental qualities based on the shape of protuberances of the skull. Those who claim they are able to do so, are deluded, or which is quite the rule, are charlatans pure and simple, living on the credulity of those who do not know better."

"Does not a head high above the ear indicate superior brain capacity?"

"Not at all. When an infant is kept upon its back a long time its back head becomes compressed, with the result that its whole head becomes higher, broader and shorter. Interference with the development of the head in one direction is compensated for by growth in another. The very high head of Sir Walter Scott, if not due to some patahological cause, was doubtless the result of compensation for some shortening of his head.

"How about the 'retreating forehead?' It is commonly supposed to indicate low mental caliber."

"In many cases it is due merely to unusual development of the bony ridges over the eyebrows. These ridges are influenced in development by what are known as the 'frontal sinuses'—hollow spaces in the bone of the forehead above the root of the nose. These are never pronounced in woman, who on this account, very rarely has a forehead as sloping as that of some men."

ABOUT THE RECEDING CHIN.

"The receding chin, too, is widely regarded as a sign of mental weakness. What about that?"

"There is, strange as it may sound, really no such thing as a receding chin in any adult lower jaw among human beings. What is ordinarily termed a receding chin applies to the living only and is in each case merely apparent, due either to projecting teeth, to fullness of the lips, or the soft tissues below them, or especially to the position of the lower jaw, its obliquity, which differs much, principally due to teeth in different persons."

"Isn't the high-bridged nose—the so-called 'patrician nose'—an indication of advanced evolution?"

"No. The modifications of the nose are, so far as we know, meaningless—merely hereditary modifications running in families, localities and races. The white race as a whole is characterized by a narrow nose and the negro—at the other extreme—by a broad one. The Roman, aquiline and retrousse noses, for example, are in all probability merely individual variations multiplied by heredity in some localities."

"And the Greek nose?"

"It was the classic sculptor's ideal and not typical of the ancient Greek. You scarcely ever see it to-day, and it was probably as scarce in the days when the Hellenic people flourished.

"The only indexes to mentality to be found in the head and face of man are the size of the brain, the behavior of the eyes and the action of the muscles which contribute to facial expression."

THEY SCRAMBLE FOR SEATS.

British M. P.'s Packed Like Sardines in House of Commons.

Considerable surprise has been expressed in London at the recent proposal of Representative Boutelle of Illinois to remove the desks now provided for the members of the House of Representatives in the United States Congress and replace them with benches as in the English House of Commons. The general opinion here seems to be that, from the standpoint of the members themselves, the American arrangement is vastly superior to the British. The palatial freedom of the legislators of the United States has been long envied by the lawgivers of Great Britain, who have always complained of the sardine method of packing politicians which obtain at Westminister.

It is understood that the American body is suffering from a lack of space and some change is absolutely necessary in the near future. As a matter of fact, the House of Commons is suffering from the very same complaint. It has been facing this problem for many, many years and perhaps it will cheer Mr. Boutelle and his associates, who are troubled by the growing numbers of the body to which they belong, to know that despite this overcrowding the English body has managed to scrape along very well.

By no process of squeezing or condensing could the House of Commons hope to provide seating room for the 670 members who compose it. To be exact the limit of its seating capacity is just about two-thirds of its membership. Except, however, on very rare occasions its seating arrangements are seldom taxed to their utmost.

At the present time the crowding of the house is worse than at any time previous because of the huge majority of the Liberal government. The house is divided into two equal parts—one for the government and the other for the opposition. It has for some years past been the rule of the Irish members, whether they supported opposition or government, to take their places on the benches of the former. This has balanced matters a little.

In the House of Representatives each member has his particular desk and he alone has a right to sit at it, but in the House of Commons no member is entitled to a seat—with the exception of ministers or ex-ministers—unless he has been present at prayers. Prayers do not begin until 2 o'clock, however, and on days when there is apt to be a big crush many members are unwilling to wait until that advanced hour of the day to make sure of their seats. That is the case on the opening day of a session when there are sure to be many who are excluded because of a lack of room. At the opening of Parliament this year several members arrived at 1 a. m., although the ceremonies were not slated to begin until early afternoon.

Of course, in a case like that a member is not expected to remain all morning in the seat he has secured. The general practice is to leave one's hat behind and go one's way until about noon time. The hat is recognized in Parliamentary manners as giving a member a sufficient claim to a seat, as a portmanteau does in a railway carriage or in a steamboat. Some of the members even go so far as to keep two hats—one of them always in his locker in the House. Sometimes when a member is not able to get down early himself he can ask a friend to place his hat on a seat. That, however, is hardly sanctioned by Parliamentary etiquette, but it is frequently resorted to by elderly members who do not feel equal to getting up in the small hours of the morning.

A familiar sight to be seen in the vicinity of the Houses of Parliament is a bareheaded member walking from the big pile of buildings that front the river Thames to his lodgings, having left his hat on the bench he desired to occupy that evening. Parnell, the famous Irishman, was one of those in the habit of doing this, and Labouchere, the editor of Truth, was frequently to be seen walking to the apartments he occupied near the House, with a small smoking cap perched on the top of his head.

The seats of the House of Commons are not very satisfactory after one gets them. They are sadly in need of repairs and are very uncomfortable, especially after one has sat on them all night. In this respect, however, they are far superior to those of the House of Lords. The springs of the latter are said to be worn out, but with the House of Commons, which handles the purse strings of the nation, in its present humor there does not seem to be much chance of bettering the comfort of "Mi Lords."

Partly Making Good.

From Judge.

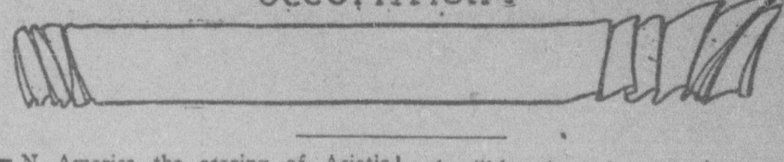
Suburbanite (Monday morning)—What do you think of that, Mary? A letter from the cook I hired Saturday, canceling her engagement.

His Wife—The mean thing! What reason did she give?

Suburbanite—She says she has decided to cut out the kerosene circuit for the present, but if we'll move to town she'll give us a trial.

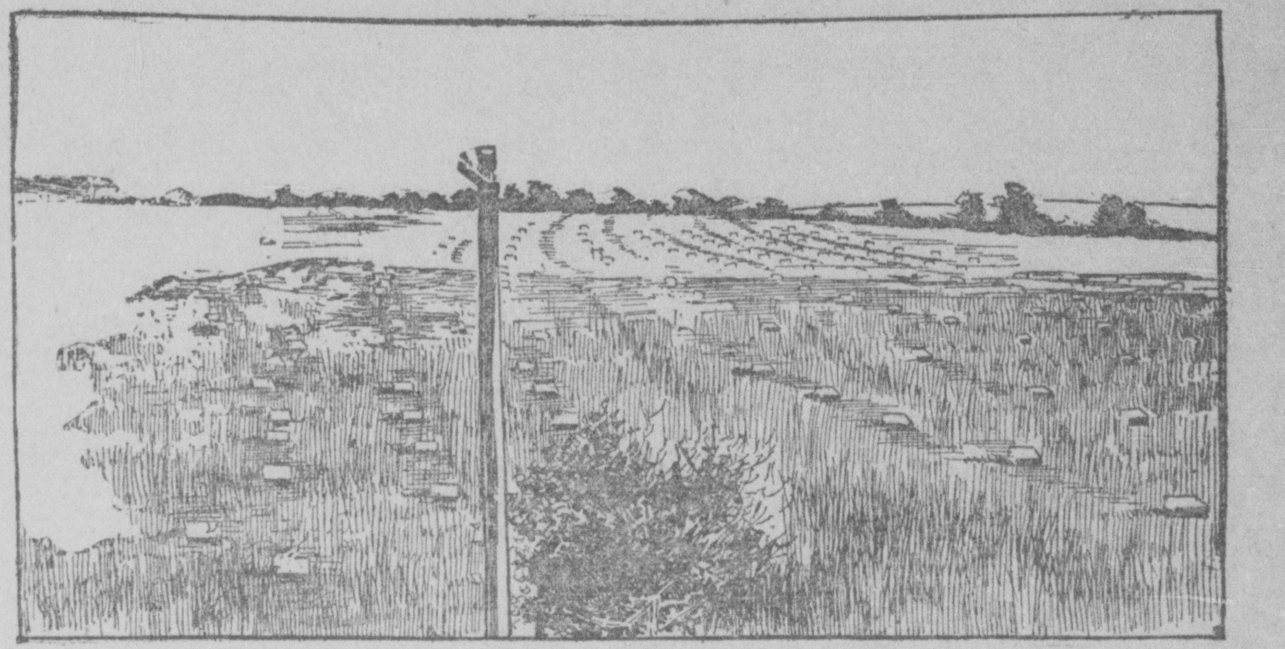
PHEASANT REARING IN AMERICA.

THE BREEDING OF THESE HANDSOME BIRDS IS PROVING A PLEASANT AND PROFITABLE OCCUPATION.



IN America the rearing of Asiatic pheasants is practically unknown when compared to the extensive manner it has for centuries been carried on in the old country. Until the last decade our native game has supplied America's wants, but cheap firearms and repeating automatic guns have so increased the number of hunters and decreased the amount of game that the prairie chicken, sharp tailed grouse, ruffed grouse and bob-white are practically extinct, as compared with their abundance in former years.

Strange to say, most of the sportsmen and the gun clubs that have taken a serious interest in the welfare of our fauna, instead of trying to solve the problem of successfully propagating the native game birds, have spent most of their money in introducing and liberating foreign game birds.



A BROODING GROUND FOR PHEASANTS.

The greatest success so far attained has been in Washington and Oregon, where eighteen Chinese pheasants were liberated about 1882, and at present are very abundant, although large numbers of them are annually killed by hunters.

The so-called English ring-neck pheasant was introduced into the Genesee valley of New York several years ago and under present protection they are multiplying and spreading rapidly. Many owners of private game preserves have successfully stocked their lands with pheasants.

This sudden demand for game birds for restocking purposes has caused many pheasantries to be established throughout the country. The largest of these is the Kendrick pheasantry at Denver, Col. Its owner, W. F. Kendrick, is one of those liberal hearted citizens who some ten years ago began raising pheasants for his own pleasure and the benefit of the citizens of his state.

FREED 6,000 BIRDS LAST YEAR.

Aside from maintaining a number of well filled aviaries for exhibition purposes at City Park zoo, Mr. Kendrick has liberated large numbers of pheasants. Last year he set 15,000 eggs and freed about 6,000 birds, and this year he expects to set between 20,000 and 30,000 eggs, and will liberate probably two-thirds of his summer's hatch.

A RING-NECKED PHEASANT.

"When I first started my pheasantry I knew no more about it than a practical experience in rearing chickens had taught me," said Mr. Kendrick. "All the literature I could gather on the subject told how delicate the little pheasants were and what close attention and extreme care in feeding they required. Wishing to begin right, I imported an English game keeper, who was supposed to have had wide experience in the work. He was full of all kinds of nonsensical ideas. For example, one was that if the pheasant chicks were fed the same amount of food on a warm day that they were given on a cold day they would die.

"I had bad luck for some time, and finally got disgusted with the fellow and discharged him, putting in charge a perfectly green, but intelligent man, and we commenced work again on a common sense basis. The result is that we have come to the conclusion that most of the pheasantries coddle their birds too much, and that raising pheasants is not much harder than raising chickens, and not nearly as difficult as rearing turkeys.

"The species which we make a specialty of raising is the pure Chinese ring-neck pheasant, but the species that we have include the Chinese Lady Amherst, Reeves, golden, silver and virsi-color.

'Pheasants are very prolific. A hen ring-neck will lay about sixty eggs in a season, a Lady Amherst and a golden will average twenty-four and a Reeves and a silver pheasant between thirty and forty eggs. The laying season out here begins about the last of March and from then until the middle of August we are kept busy picking up the eggs that are found scattered over the ground in the different inclosures, for in close confinement pheasants rarely lay their eggs in a nest. As fast as a supply is gathered, we rush them off to our country hatching and brooding grounds.

"After many experiments, we have found that the common barnyard hen is the best means of hatching the eggs, and makes the best foster mother to brood the little chicks until they can take care of themselves. Bantam hens are also good. but they cannot cover a large setting of eggs.

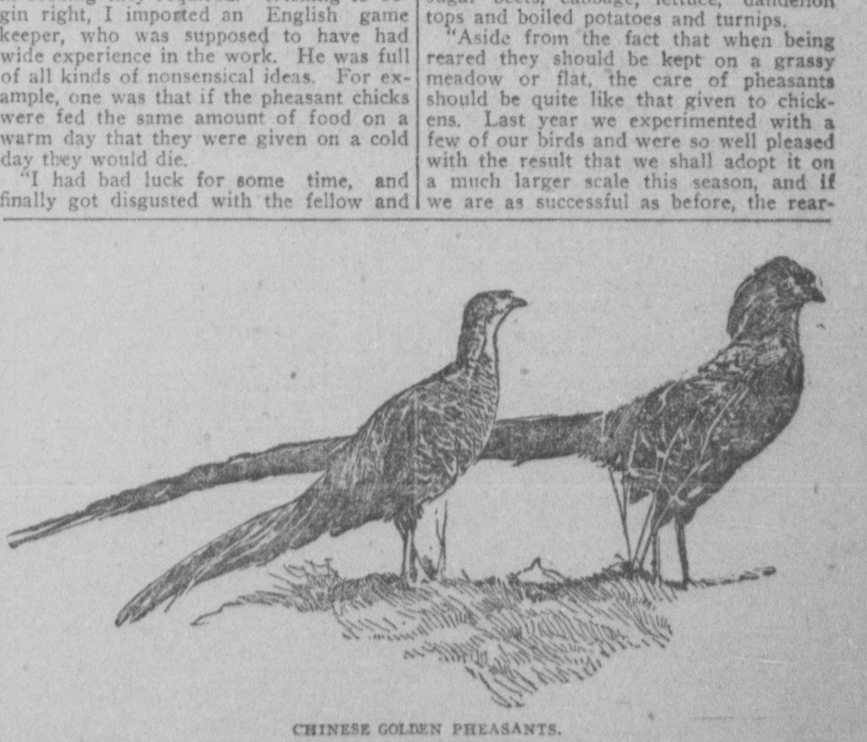
"We have adopted the plan of not letting the hens hatch the eggs, but as soon as the little chicks peck through the shell we hustle the whole setting into an incubator and let the pheasant chicks stay there until they have come out and are strong enough to run about. This lessens the danger of their being trampled by the hens when they are weak and helpless. In the meantime her henship is presented with a set of china eggs to keep her occupied until we can smuggle the chicks back to her.

"As far as possible we follow nature. For instance the nesting and brooding coops are all located in the meadows and the nests are placed on the ground, where the eggs get the moisture they require. The nesting material is some fine substance in which the chicks cannot tangle their feet or get strangled; fine hay or fine straw is best.

The coops are placed about twenty feet apart and as you look over the breeding grounds it reminds you of a miniature white city. Some of the coops are surrounded by a pen twelve inches high, in which the chicks are kept prisoners for the first four days. This is necessary because experience has taught us that young pheasants, like yong partridge, will run away and become lost if given their liberty as soon as hatched. They do not seem to understand the language of their foster mother, but after the lapse of three or four days they learn her call notes and obey, returning to her for food and to be brooded at night. We do not, as a rule, liberate the hens with their broods.

"During the first twenty-four hours we do not feed the chicks. For the first four days they are fed plain table custard mixed with chick food. Then we gradually break them in on a more substantial diet; eggs that have been dropped into boiling water and allowed to cool in it, then strained through a piece of common wire mosquito netting and mixed with patent pheasant food, bread crumbs, corn meal and crumbled cornbread. After a week of such feeding we change again, this time gradually diminishing the amount of boiled egg and adding raw food, such as fine corn meal, crushed grains, and finally the best of raw Hamburg steak. We keep them on this food until they are old and strong enough to be given the regular food fed to the adult birds—buckwheat, wheat, cracked corn, kaffir corn, raw pumpkin, squash, sugar beets, cabbage, lettuce, dandelion tops and boiled potatoes and turnips.

"Aside from the fact that when being reared they should be kept on a grassy meadow or flat, the care of pheasants should be quite like that given to chickens. Last year we experimented with a few of our birds and were so well pleased with the result that we shall adopt it on a much larger scale this season, and if we are as successful as before, the rearing of pheasants will be no more difficult than rearing chickens.



CHINESE GOLDEN PHEASANTS.

"Pheasants, particularly the Chinese ring-neck, are very hardy birds and in their native countries some species range up into the extremely high mountains. Those that I have liberated here are multiplying by the thousand and are doing finely. I believe that they can easily be acclimatized in any suitable locality in the United States or Southern Canada. The business of rearing them is clean and very fascinating, and could be made profitable for men or women."

DINNER FROCK FOR DEBUTANTE.

Box Plaited Tunic Effects for the Girl With a Slender Figure.

From Vogue.

Ring dotted net dinner gown for a slender figure, made with a box plaited princess tunic effect that is carried in straps over a cross tucked net bodice, a band of embroidered net lace finishes the neck. The hem of tunic shows hand run tucks, and the flounce beneath has two groups of tucks.

DINNER GOWN OF RING DOTTED NET.

Street Costumes.

From Vogue.

Forenoon costumes permit far greater varieties of style, as well as scope, in making. Short skirts remain a settled fact in both transparent voiles or wool fabrics, as well as in washable materials, which more often are sent to the cleaners instead of the tub. Except for July and August days of scorching heat, cottons and linens will have to give way to pongees and rajahs, which are more to the fore than ever, both in robe styles and in the plain unfigured variety. The former are made up with short border skirts and furnished with all-over waists, either of lace or lingerie, with coat to match in the unfigured pongees or rajah. The coats have a narrow V-opening in front, and below three covered buttons follow for fastening, while from the third button the coat fronts are slanted off abruptly. A narrow turned-over collar of the robe patterned silk finishes the neck. It is seen also as inset for the narrow flat cuffs to the long sleeves, and a touch of the same defines the flaps of the side pockets, on the fronts, half way down the jacket skirt. The figure lines of this short coat depend upon the seams, which start from the shoulders, back and front. This same model answers for linens and twills.

To Clean Silk Gloves.

From the May Delineator.

Washing silk gloves rots them rapidly, especially at the finger ends, yet nothing is less excusable than soiled white or other light silk gloves, because it is so easy to wash them.

To prevent this rapid destruction of the finger ends the gloves should be hung to dry with the tips up. This can be accomplished only by pinning each finger out on a cloth and then hanging up the cloth with the arms of the gloves down. This lets water run into the portions of the gloves which receive the least wear, dries the tips most quickly and prevents the destructive action of water on the silk.

Lavender Scent for Rooms.

From the May Delineator.

Do you know that a few drops of oil of lavender in a silver bowl or ornamental dish of some kind half filled with very hot water, and set in the dining-room just before dinner is served gives a delightful and intangible freshness to the atmosphere? Hostesses may use this in the parlors and dressing-rooms when arranging the house for entertaining. The suggestion is especially advantageous to those occupying small apartments which are sometimes "stuffy."

PARISIAN CLOAK CO.
1108-1110 MAIN STREET
After Easter Novelty Outfits

In this authoritative style collection you will find the most sought for of the exclusive ideas, the best that can possibly be procured and at reasonable prices consistent with the character of the apparel. These beautiful creations bring out every new line that will make them more becoming and out of the ordinary.

The striped suit illustrated below is made of shaded gray and black stripe English suiting. The collar and cuffs are inlaid with black satin with a tiny piping of gray around the edge. The coat is lined with gray satin, making the effect of the whole very soft and harmonious. The skirt is cut circular, with habit back, and fastens in front, showing buttons and worked buttonholes all the way up. The cut of the skirt and the new effect shown in the collar and high neck of the jacket are the distinctive points about this suit; $60.

Fine London serge in navy blue forms the material of the suit illustrated at the right. The coat is cut on the lines seen in so many of the imported models. It has a tiny piping of black satin all the way around and even where the close fitting sleeve is joined to the armhole. Wide buttonholes bound with satin and ball buttons of satin, together with two satin straps set in the back and front, at each side, give to this charming model a dressy yet distinctly refined effect.

Novelty Suits, $55 to $1.25

This is a rare collection, showing a great variety of new ideas in novelty designs and in the plain Tailored Suits. All are oddly cut, some trimmed with lace, yet strictly tailored and not too fancy.

The materials are the fashionable foreign fabrics, in plain and fancy weaves; also satin voiles, tussore and serges in all colors, $55 to $125.

TAILORED SUITS, $35, $40 and $45—A large and varied line at each price. Many fascinating styles in the embroidered effects; others extremely plain. There are short, medium and long coat styles, softly tailored to give the smart, limp effect.

The materials are Rajah silk, tussore, plain worsted and striped materials and striped worsteds. They come in all colors in light, medium and dark shades, $35, $40, $45.

$25 TAILORED SUITS—Too much cannot be said of our extensive showing of $25 Suits. Women who wish to dress well, but inexpensively, will have no trouble in finding just the style that will please them in this collection.

These come in all the fashionable materials, plain serges, two toned stripes, shadow stripes and men's suitings in fancy fabrics—Rajah silks, etc., all colors, $25.

OUR CELEBRATED STYLES in Tailored Suits, $25. New showing of these celebrated styles for this week. You must see these suits and examine them carefully to appreciate thier value, $25.

Lingerie Dresses, $13.50, $16.50, $25 and $30.

The materials are of the sheerest and the laces the most attractive. Come in white, light blue, pink and mauve.

Second Floor.

Persian Novelty Stripe, $60.00.

Novelty Coat, $25.00.

A very similar model is to be had in Rajah silk at $27.50.

Another vedy stylish model is a plain tailored three-quarter length coat, mannish in finish and effect, cut in beautiful lines that give style may hipless appearance. This style may be had in black broadcloth or tan covert. Price $32.50.

Third Floor.

London Serge Suit, $70.00.
Second Floor.

Queen Quality SHOES

$4, $3.50, $3. $2.50

LARGE operations and wholesale handlings reduce costs. Flour by the barrel costs less than by the paper bag. This explains why "Queen Quality" Oxfords can be bought for $2.50 to $4.00 a pair—it's very much the biggest women's shoe business in the world.

The White System of Crown and Bridgework

There is no necessity of any one having badly broken down and missing teeth or wearing a bridge or plate that is not satisfactory for by the White System of Crown and Bridge work they can be replaced in such a way that you will be greatly pleased and your teeth will be a pleasure to you instead of a source of annoyance.

A bridge of this kind in your mouth will feel just as the natural teeth did, for they take exactly the same space. You can also bite any hard substance without fear of breaking them.

We do not have to grind down three or four good sound teeth simply to get an attachment for a bridge, for this system is entirely different from the ordinary bridge-work.

A NEW HOME FOR BUFFALO

A NATIONAL PRESERVE ON THE FLATHEAD INDIAN RESERVATION.

Through the Efforts of the American Bison Society Congress Has Set Aside 12,800 Acres as a Range for the Animals.

Out in the hills of Montana the problem of preserving the buffalo may be solved. The American Bison society, which has been active in its efforts to preserve these animals, recently selected a tract of 18,000 acres in the Flathead Indian reservation, capable of supporting about 2,000 buffaloes. The society, however, was not in a position to purchase the land, so the United States government has come to the rescue and set aside 12,800 acres there for the purpose. This tract, when fenced, will become the home of the largest herd of bison in existence.

THE LAST OF THE SPECIES.

The American bison has become so scarce that every animal in captivity is recorded and the few wild buffalo can be estimated almost to an individual. Following is a table of the pure-blooded animals and their habitat:

A VIEW OF THE FLATHEAD COUNTRY, SHOWING THE TOPOGRAPHY OF THE NEW BUFFALO RANGE.

Captive in the United States	506	610	203	1116	969
Captive in Canada	214	262	98	476	41
Total in America	720	872	301	1592	1010
Captive in Europe	54	76	22	130	109
Total in captivity	774	948	323	1722	1119
Wild Bison in the United States, estimated	...	...	...	25	....
Wild Bison in Canada, estimated	...	...	...	800	....

The plan of the society is to secure as large a herd as possible for the new reserve and then guard it sufficiently to preserve it and permit it to increase while allowing the bison the range of almost absolute freedom.

The range must be fenced to prevent the bison from wandering to private property. A caretaker will be provided to prevent anyone injuring the animals.

THE RESERVATION AN IDEAL HOME.

The range selected is a perfect one for buffalo. The grass grows eighteen inches high in the valleys and a foot high on the hillsides. The Jocko river runs through the range and the high, dry, cool climate is ideal for the animals. Elk, antelope, several kinds of deer and Rocky mountain sheep also will be preserved on the range. High and rocky hills on part of the reserve afford good range for the sheep and shelter for the bison when high winds blow. President Roosevelt wrote recently of the disappearance of the buffalo from the plains and of the efforts of the society to preserve them from utter extinction:

> I feel real and great interest in the work being done by the American Bison society to preserve the buffalo—the biggest of the American big game, probably on the whole the most distinctive game animal of this continent, and certainly the animal which played the greatest part in the lives of the Indians, and which most deeply impressed the imagination of all the old hunters and early settlers. It would be a real misfortune to permit the species to become extinct, and I hope that all good citizens will aid the society in its efforts for its preservation.

Let Us Support the Diamond Market.

From Life.

Our friends who have not yet bought their spring diamonds are hereby reminded not to put off this important duty too long. The diamond market needs their support if prices are to be maintained. The South African mining companies are doing their best to keep prices up and to that end have shut down their mines. But their interest is not the only one concerned. The jewelers who have considerable stocks of diamonds on their hands are vitally interested that the value of their sparkling stones should not suffer permanent depreciation. Such in diminished measure is the plight of every one of us. If diamonds go off seriously in value, our private collections will make a much less satisfactory showing when we are sold up than we had hoped. It seems a matter of mere common prudence that we should bestir ourselves and lay in whatever diamonds we need while they are still worth something.

Diamonds are not like eggs, which appeal to the vulgar, and have a very broad market and can be kept for many years in cold storage and still be good to sell. Eggs and such products will take care of themselves, and if they do finally become unsalable the market is all the better for it. But all that makes diamonds valuable is that we like the looks of them. Now is the time to show our appreciation. If we do not stand by them they cannot be expected to stand by us. We hope that even our burglar friends will recognize it as their duty to maintain prices, for in the matter of diamonds the market is the whole thing.

WAR? NOT WITHOUT OUR BEEF.

The Shortage of the Canned Article a Peace Argument in Europe.

It has been predicted by an English military expert that there will not be a great war for a year or two at least. And the reason he gives for this opinion is that there is a shortage of American canned beef. Armies, he says, cannot fight unless they are fed, and in these days they must be fed on American canned beef, because there is no other food obtainable in sufficiently large quantities, and placed in such a way that it can be easily transported and kept in eatable condition for an indefinite period under the varying conditions of warfare.

Within the last few weeks one Chicago firm alone has shipped from London back to the United States more than 5 million pounds of canned beef, and it would have shipped more had the supplies been available in England.

"We are not looking for business now," said W. F. Burrows, English manager of a big American house. "We have all we can do to supply our regular trade, and we must look after that first. The British war office advertised the other day for tenders for a large supply of canned beef. I instructed our people here not to bid, and I understand that the other Chicago houses have issued similar instructions. I don't think the British government will get the beef. The French war office and Russian government are also in the market looking for canned beef and it cannot be had. Even our own government is in difficulties. The Pacific fleet is looking for canned beef at San Francisco and cannot find it.

"The fact is that the demand for beef in America has outgrown the supply and it seems likely that it will continue to do so. We can get so much better prices for fresh meat now that it does not pay to can it. The population of America is increasing faster than any population ever increased before and the supply of cattle is not increasing. In fact, there may have been a slight increase, but that factor alone would not account for the shortage of canned beef. We are selling as much beef as ever, but we are selling it at high prices as fresh beef.

"It pays us now to ship our canned beef back to America, because we can get so much better prices for it there. I don't know where the governments would turn for beef if there were a war to-morrow. Chicago could not supply them and the production of Argentina is not yet large enough to be relied on. Besides the beef packed there in the summer months has not the keeping qualities that are absolutely necessary. The British colonies are packing only enough beef for their own consumption and for their trade with the mother country and they have not the supplies of cattle to expand their production suddenly."

FOR THE PARIS "HOPEFULS."

French News Stands Sell "Nick Carter" and "Buffalo Bill."

The messenger boy of Paris is enough like his American cousin to be a twin brother. The chief point of dissimilarity, the cape which he often wears instead of a coat, is forgotten in the two facts which establish the close relationship beyond a question—the utter absence of speed in his movements and the character of his literature. Human nature is the same the world over and strikingly so when Young America and Young France are considered.

Adorning the fronts of all the kiosks in the boulevards and at all the news stands are pictures which arouse tender memories in the heart of every American who sees them. The pictures are the frontispieces of three popular "libraries," "Texas Jack, le Terreur des Indians," "Nick Carter, le Grand Detective Americain," and "Buffalo Bill, l'Ennemi Cache."

As if the well known features of the storied detective were insufficient to establish his identity, this inscription, in English, is printed on the front of one series: "Nick Carter and the Pay Car, or Wiping Out a Dangerous Gang of Thieves." Assurance is given on the Buffalo Bill "library" that it is the "Seule edition originale authorisee par le Col. W. F. Cody, dit Buffalo Bill," which means that "le Col. W. F. Cody, dit Buffalo Bill," "stands for" what is printed about him in these works, but in no others.

Except that they are printed in French the papers are an exact duplicate of those which, for years, have caused American schoolboys to "play hookey" and occasioned long delays in the delivery of "rush" messages. In the pictures Monsieur Carter is shown felling a half dozen bandits with the same ease and grace as plain "Nick" employs in accomplishing the same feat in the English editions.

The messenger boys are not the only patrons of the dealers in these famous "libraries." Homesick Americans who can't speak a word of French buy them to study the pictures. The pictures carry them back home, to childhood's happy days and the little red schoolhouse on the hill.

Lady Mary's London Letter.

LONDON, April 19.—There has been a flutter of excitement in Mayfair during the past week because of a persistent rumor that Mrs. Ogden Goelet would take Devonshire house in Piccadilly, the town house of the Duke of Devonshire, during the coming season. As a matter of fact, the new duke and his wife would be very glad to let it, as they will not entertain very much for many months to come and can have no possible use for the great house. Moreover, the rent to be derived would come in very handy to keep the new peer in pocket money, for despite the fact that he succeeded to one of the largest estates in England the enormous death duties he will be called upon to pay in the very near future will be a severe drain even on his well-lined purse. Also he will have to hand to the dowager duchess a very large sum. I hear that he is going to close indefinitely Chatsworth, his beautiful place in Derbyshire, Bolton Abbey, and his seat at Eastbourne. But even then he will not want for a considerable number of residences.

Society would welcome Mrs. Goelet as a London hostess. We all remember with pleasure her entertainments when she was here last summer. Claridge's was the scene of most of these affairs. There is no doubt that with a house of her own she would blossom out as one of the largest and most popular hostesses of the season. We should all like her to put a little "ginger" into her daughter, the Duchess of Roxburghe, who has been a great disappointment to those of us who expected her to make a big splurge when she took Stratford house, the town residence of Lord Colebrook, about a year ago. Everybody who has met the mother of the duchess says that when it comes to spending money freely to give other people a good time—which is supposed to be the chief function of rich American women here—she is worth half a dozen of her daughter.

I don't know what English society is going to do this year unless you Americans come to our rescue. The old story of "no money" is heard on all sides and the big English hostesses of past years are going to be very little in evidence. This is said to be due to the political unrest which invariably acts as a depressant on the social world, but no less an authority than King Edward himself has put it down to downright meanness on the part of the native women. Not very long ago His Majesty lectured very severely two of the leaders of English society and ended up by telling them that "it was their duty to make things 'hum' socially." Then he added: "Were it not for American women we should have practically no London season—a disgraceful state of affairs in a city which is as rich as ours.'

Susceptible girls in the United States had better watch out, for I hear that in the very near future you are to have a visit from Lord Curzon. The distinguished ex-Viceroy of India appears to be wrapped up in the family of his late wife, and never seems content unless he has the companionship of Lady Suffolk or Mrs. Colin-Campbell, his two American sisters-in-law. He is devoted to Mrs. Leiter and it is to pay her a visit that he is shortly to cross the pond with his three little daughters and his two sisters-in-law. Mrs. Leiter is said to reciprocate the fondness of her son-in-law and I understand is determined that he shall remain a widower. So the girl who contemplates falling in love with the handsome peer had better not communicate her plans to the widow of the late Chicago millionaire.

Lady Suffolk is Lord Curzon's chief adviser in all the changes that are being made at Hackwood Park, the magnificent seat he recently purchased in Hampshire. He has spared neither money nor trouble and already has expended something like $300,000 in improvements.

The original name of this place was Hawking park, which it owed to the fact that it was a famous place for that sport in feudal days. Lady Suffolk is most anxious that her brother-in-law should revive it. You probably will remember that the Duchess of Marlborough, another American woman, also was very keen upon re-introducing hawking when she first arrived at Blenheim palace. One of the most effective pictures ever made of her shows her in the woods of Blenheim with the hawks about her.

Queen Alexandra and her sister, the empress dowager of Russia, who were the first of the crowned heads of Europe to receive the magnificent catalogues which J. Pierpont Morgan has had prepared of his collection of miniatures, books and bric-a-brac at his residence at Prince's Gate, London, are delighted with them. They were presented on the occasion of the visit of the two royal sisters to the London home of the American millionaire a few weeks ago. The queen was amazed when it was handed to her.

"Do you really mean me to take this beautiful thing away with me?" she asked her host.

"I had it specially designed and painted for you," answered Mr. Morgan, gallantly.

The Empress Marie was equally charmed with hers and by way of expressing her appreciation of the gift gave Mr. Morgan a very hearty invitation to visit her at St. Petersburg. The kaiser also has received a copy from Mr. Morgan. His Majesty has forwarded an autograph letter acknowledging the gift, for the kaiser is extremely partial to rich Americans and lets no chance slip of getting on good terms with them.

The books, which are bound in vellum, are said to have cost Mr. Morgan a lot of money. They are profusely illustrated and give a short description of the almost endless list of treasures that make the Prince's Gate house one of the most wonderful homes of art in the whole world. Contrary to the general impression, each of the catalogues is unique in itself. The illustrations are different and each contains a water color sketch of the person for whom it is intended.

The "new man" is a modern product begotten out of the exigencies of social life and evolved by the society women of London. He is as totally different from the rest of his sex as was the "new woman" of a decade or more ago from hers. This person thinks it is the paramount duty of women to entertain him. He takes all and he gives nothing in return save the glory of his presence, which he considers pays very handsomely for all the hospitality he enjoys. At present the "new man" is rampant in our midst. He is ready to dine with each of his women friends a dozen times during the season, but he would not waste a shilling on flowers for any one of them.

Hostesses who mean to do a good deal of dinner giving feel they must have men. British women are bored to desperation by their own sex. "Hen parties" are to them the last word in stupidity. This really explains in a nutshell the supremacy of the "new man," who thinks he is conferring an honor by accepting an invitation.

A well-known hostess said to me the other day: "I believe the day is at hand when we will have to pay impecunious youths for their society. It will be another case of 'soldiers in the park' when the British housemaid forks out a recognized remuneration to the 'red coat' who goes a-walking with her on a Sunday in Hyde park." LADY MARY.

A MEMORIAL TO BETSY ROSS.

American Mechanics to Mark Grave of First Flag Maker With Monument.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Meeting in Mount Moriah cemetery Sunday afternoon, at the neglected grave of Betsy Ross, who designed the American flag and whose body rests obscurely under a moss covered mound in a plot near the old cemetery entrance at Sixty-third street and Woodland avenue, unmarked save by a small dingy stone, a committee of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics planned the erection on that site of one of the most elaborate patriotic monuments in the country.

George W. Sturmer of this city, chairman of the committee and president of Mount Moriah council No. 546, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, which initiated the movement, said that the proposed monument would cost not less than $100,000.

Comparatively few persons could find the grave of Betsy Ross, whose name is popularly associated, so far as locality is concerned, with the historic "flag house" on Arch street, near Second.

Her name, as inscribed on the little tombstone, is that of Elizabeth Claypoole. Her husband, John Claypoole, who died on August 3, 1817, aged 65 years, is interred in the same grave and his name is the first one on the old stone. Under it and almost indistinguishable a few feet away is the now meaningless name of Elizabeth Claypoole, or the Betsy Ross of patriotic story and song, who, according to the inscription, died on January 30, 1836, aged 84 years. A third body, that of James Campion, a relative, who died two weeks after Betsy Ross, is also in the little grave, his name at the bottom of the tombstone adding to the confusion of visitors bent upon historic research.

In a plot of ground twenty-five by seventy-five feet, surrounding this singular burial place, the patriotic orders are to build an imposing mausoleum of granite, marble and bronze.

President Sturmer stated that well known architects were already engaged in drawing plans and that features of these plans, as recommended by the committee, would be a vault, to contain Betsy Ross's body, an exact counterpart at the base of the monument of the room in which she made the first American flag and exhibited it to George Washington, and marble columns with statuary representative of American soldiers and sailors.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

EDNA D. ALLEN

WITHOUT dandruff the hair must grow luxuriantly, except in chronic baldness, which is incurable. Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a germ or microbe. To cure dandruff, this germ—a tiny vegetable growth—must be destroyed and kept out of the scalp by Newbro's Herpicide.

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

A woman to be pretty must have pretty hair. Beautiful locks have a subtle charm, for the poet says, "fair tresses man's imperial race ensnare." The unpoetic and intensely real dandruff microbe makes the hair dull, brittle and lusterless with later dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. Newbro's Herpicide destroys this enemy of beauty and enables the hair to resume its natural luster and abundance. Almost marvelous results sometimes follow the continued use of Herpicide. Overcomes excessive oiliness and makes the hair light and fluffy. It contains no grease or dye. Stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Discriminating ladies who have used Newbro's Herpicide speak of it in the highest terms, for its almost magical effect upon the scalp, and also for its excellence as a regular hair dressing. It is delightfully fragrant and refreshing.

"I Have found Newbro's Herpicide excellent for the hair. The first application stops itching of the scalp and it leaves the hair soft and silky."

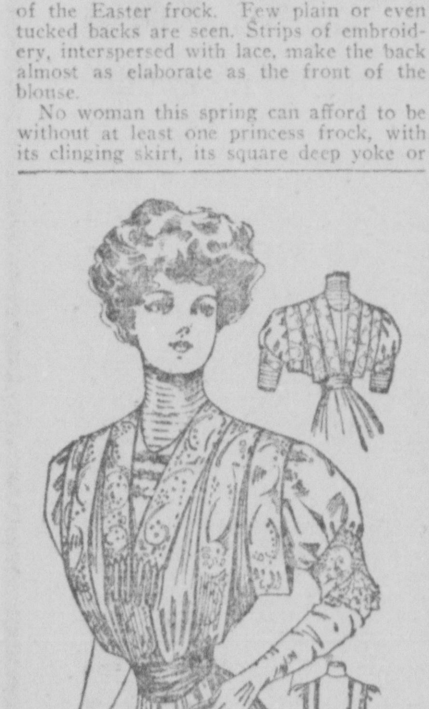
LONG LINES OF EASTER FROCKS

Unquestionably the most striking feature of the Easter frock will be its long, straight lines. You'll find them in the weave, the pattern, the cut and the trimming. While the American woman declines to accept for general usage the new sheath skirt with its clinging, flat drapery over the hips, she has compromised and adopted the modified empire gown, with its short-waisted back if not front. This means that a gown which is a cross between the Greek drapery and true empire effect will be used, while the princess is more popular than ever.

In the misses' gown shown this week will be seen one of the best modes for the youthful and middle-aged figure alike. It is the princess frock with deep square yoke and shaped panel in front and shortened waist line in the back. It also shows the influence of striped weaves in giving height and an excellent method of applying self-trimming or braid.

Both of the blouses, the one combined with the skirt and the independent drawing, show up-to-date methods of applying trimming, the use of fringe and tassels and most especially the eaborate application of trimming on the backs of the bodices. This is one distinctive feature of the Easter frock. Few plain or even tucked backs are seen. Strips of embroidery, interspersed with lace, make the back almost as elaborate as the front of the blouse.

No woman this spring can afford to be without at least one princess frock, with its clinging skirt, its square deep yoke or chemisette of lace and its over-blouse of gorgeous embroidery or silk with braiding.



EMBROIDERED MESSALINE BLOUSE.

Other striking features of the Easter parade will be the large number of loose coats, the enormous quantity of flowers employed on hats, while floral designs will rule in vestings, trimmings and border designs, and parasols, if the weather be balmy will be abloom with all sorts of floral patterns.

SILK THE SMARTEST FABRIC.

This is the greatest silk season in years, and voile, which led all fabrcs last year, has given place to silky weaves. The smartest silk for suits is a rough weave known as mirage, because it has the misty, watery look that a mirage possesses. The correct method of making up this silk is in a two-piece costume, a princess gown, with deep yoke of lace or tucked neck, strapped with bias bands of the silk braided with silk soutache, which also appears around the hem of the skirt, and a loose jacket, Madame Butterfly or Louis shape, heavily braided.

Next to the rough silk in popularity come satin finished messalines and foulards, but neither of these can be made into suits. They make beautiful princess or Empire costumes with which is worn a harmonious jacket, preferably a loose one in either plain silk or lace. These lace coats can be bought ready made in a wide range of laces, coarse and fine, light and heavy. They are offered in both black and white, the former being much better for general wear. Also there are beautiful jackets in soft silk, heavily braided. A stunning combination shows a black and white foulard with tucker and undersleeves of princess lace, a jacket of black Chantilly made over white silk and a picture hat of white straw trimmed with black tips and velvet ribbon.

Many of these new silks have borders in conventional or floral designs, but the skillful home dressmaker can simulate the woven border with applied trimming or with folds of contrasting silk.

JACKETS WITH CHIC LITTLE VESTS.

All the smartest jackets have vests of trimming so applied as to suggest the vest, and these are very gay made of wonderful pompadour flowers and the ever-popular filet net in black, white or colors, embroidered in flowers of the most brilliant hues.

Copenhagen blue leads in colorings, and is becoming very scarce. It is a trifle more gray than gendarme or peacock blue, but less faded in hue than the once famous Alice blue. It combines particularly well with golden brown, tan, etc. The light weight herringbone weaves in Copenhagen blue are especially effective, one of the stripes being plain and the other satin finished. A spring suit of this worn with a big straw hat in natural or rich tan color, trimmed with blue velvet ribbon, and flowers or plumes, is the smartest sort of makeup.

GLOVES FOR DRESSY WEAR.

For very dressy wear, with any costume which is not inharmonious, chamois colored gloves and Oxford ties are worn. The ties show real chamois skin for the vamps and black patent leather uppers. The buckles may be of chamois skin or the black leather. The gloves are of either chamois or undressed suede kid. Such ties will be worn at receptions, in carriages, etc., but they are not suited for ordinary street wear, though shoemen say they clean amazingly well.

The very latest neckwear is so large as to suggest the Elizabethan ruff. The very latest tie for dressy wear, to replace the jabot, is of finest silk mull of mousseline, fully eight inches wide, with deeply embroidered ends, and it is tied in four loops and two wide spreading ends, so arranged as to suggest a waterfall under the chin. The small bow is now used only with embroidered linen collar with tailored shirt waists. The big bow, the enormous neckpiece, is the thing with the new spring jacket.

POTTERY IS EASILY MADE.

Few Tools Are Necessary and No Unusual Skill Is Required.

From the May Delineator.

When one thinks of the numerous possibilities for adding beautiful decorative pieces of pottery to the home in the way of lamp bowls, candlesticks, dishes for flowers or fruit and all kinds of decorative jardinieres it seems well worth while to learn how to make these at home.

Now that plasta, composite clay or plasterine can be btained already prepared, requiring only the addition of water, the making of pottery comes within the scope of the most unenlightened worker. These compositions can be obtained in cream color, terra cotta or in olive green. A few simple potters' tools—a board, rolling pin and water—are the only requisites. The material is moistened with water and is kneaded on a board to give it plasticity. It is then rolled with a rolling pin.

In order to make a small bowl, take a lump of clay and work the knuckles into it until it assumes the form of a bird's nest. This will save a good deal of shaping when building up the sides. Do not attempt to add too large a piece at first or it will break off, especially if the sides are high. Work the small bits of clay very carefully into the sides.

When the pottery made from plasta is perfectly dry it is sent to a kiln to fire. If the green, white or terra cotta are not just the colors desired, the vessels can be colored with ordinary tube oil colors moistened with turpentine and a wax finish given to them afterwards. This is really a very practical and easy method of getting what is known as a mat glaze.

GOOD FORM AT WEDDINGS

POINTS OF ETIQUETTE FOR THE CEREMONY AT HOME AND CHURCH.

Acknowledgment of Invitation and Time of Sending Gifts to the Bride—Correct Dress of Guests—Wedding Reception and the Formal Breakfast.

Wedding invitations are generally received about two weeks before the date set for the ceremony. Whether they require a reply depends entirely upon the wording of the invitation.

If you have been invited to the church ceremony only, no reply, either regrets or acceptance, is demanded. If, in addition to the invitation for the church, you receive a card announcing that the wedding breakfast will be served either at the home of the bride's parents or at some hotel or fashionable restaurant, this means that you are invited to be one of the wedding breakfast party, and then your acceptance or regrets must be sent immediately. If it is to be a large home wedding with a buffet breakfast to follow, no acknowledgment is necessary; but if it is a more exclusive affair with a limited number of guests to sit down to the breakfast, quite generally the letters "R. S. V. P.," or the phrase, "The favor of a reply is requested," will appear in one corner of the card or invitation, in which case a prompt reply is obligatory.

Also, if the wedding is to take place at the country home of the bride or in the suburbs, and a special train or car is chartered for guests, mention of which is made on the invitation, then you must either send regrets or acceptance, so your hosts will know what accommodations to provide.

Wedding gifts are sent to the bride any time after the invitations are received, up to the very day of the wedding. All silver, linen, etc., intended for presents, whether these come from friends of the bride or the groom, must be marked with the bride's maiden initial or monogram. No gifts are sent to the groom, even by his personal friends. When the groom's parents give the young couple a home or furniture or silver or a check, it is given to them jointly, not to the groom alone.

If no acknowledgment of the wedding invitation is required, as described above, your presence at the function is sufficient to show your appreciation of the invitation. If you cannot attend, either post in ample time or send by hand on the day of the ceremony, two of your calling cards in a single envelope addressed to the parents of the bride or the married sister and her husband, in whose name the invitations are sent out.

If the wedding is private and announcement cards are sent out afterward, you must acknowledge these by posting to the newly married couple your own calling card with "best wishes" or "hearty congratulations" written thereon.

The correct dress of the male guest at a noon or afternoon wedding is black frock coat, striped trousers, fancy or white waistcoat, gray suede gloves, silk puff tie and high hat. White gloves are never worn by a man until after nightfall. Full evening clothes must be worn to an evening wedding.

Women guests wear to either a church or house wedding by day an elaborate reception gown, generally velvet, silk or exquisite cloth, never anything severely tailored. White gloves and fine shoes must also be worn.

A guest at a church wedding never leaves his or her seat until the wedding party has passed out. At a house wedding, guests do not hurry forward to congratulate the newly-wedded couple until members of the family and relatives have done so.

When the wedding ceremony at the church is followed by a reception at the house, guests go directly from the church to the house, where all is presumably in readiness for their arrival. Only sufficient time is allowed for the bridal party to fall in line.

The guests fall into line in passing the bridal party. You congratulate the groom and wish the bride happiness. As the bride's mother is the hostess on this occasion, each guest should seek her out for a word of appreciation before departing. Friends of the groom who do not know the bride's family may ask for an introduction.

At the usual wedding reception it is not necessary to remain long. After the bride and groom have been congratulated the bride's mother has been seen, a few friends chatted with, and a visit has been made to the dining room where the buffet breakfast is served by waiters, the guest is free to depart.

When a formal wedding breakfast is served and guests are seated with the bridal party at a central table, then no guest will leave inside of fifteen minutes after the party has left the dining room.

Usually, at a convenient point near the door, wedding cake in small white boxes is arranged for distribution. There is nothing ruder than for a guest to pick up several of these boxes as souvenirs for friends not invited to the function.

The wedding guest must call on the bride and groom directly on the latter's return from the honeymoon, usually on dates set by the newly married couple on their joint cards. And it is only common courtesy to entertain the newly married couple within a reasonable time, if you accepted the invitation to their wedding.

Beef En Casserole.

Wipe and trim neatly a good sized piece of the rump or round without bone. Sear until brown in a hot frying pan without allowing it to burn. In the bottom of your casserole dish build a nest of diced potatoes, sliced onions, stripped carrot, turnips cut in small balls and any cold peas or beans you may have on hand. If fond of herbs, scatter through this a little finely powdered mixed herbs. Season with pepper and salt. On this nest lay your seared meat. In a separate pan, mix a large cup of stock or boiling water with one of tomatoes, stew until thoroughly mixed, strain and thicken with a tablespoon of flour and butter rubbed smooth, pour over your meat and vegetables. Cover with the earthenware lid and set in a moderate oven to cook for four hours.

All casserole preparations are served from the dish in which they are cooked. This is set on a large plate or platter and brought to the table, cover and all. No napkin or decoration of any sort is wrapped around the dish.

From Vogue.

A Parisian table decoration for an early spring luncheon is all in delicate blues and white. The exquisite lace cloth is lined with shimmering blue satin. Crowning the center of the table is a quaint antique vase, Greek in design, of fragile white porcelain with a border of gold lattice work. This is heaped with white grapes. Fruits are fast supplanting flowers for the central ornament of a table. Surrounding the vase at a short distance is a garland made of tiny bouquets of pale blue violets—having for their background their dark green leaves. Radiating from this toward the four corners of the table are shallow crystal dishes filled with delicate orchids and here again is found a note of blue to harmonize with the others. The porcelain used should be in keeping with the rest. White with a little gold band is very attractive as well as refined.

REMEDIES FOR TIRED FEET

A CHIROPODIST ADVISES WOMEN TO SIT IN SUNLIGHT WITH BARE FEET.

Bathe in Lukewarm Water Every Day and Foot Tub Bath in Hot Water Once a Week—A Painless Way of Removing Callous Spots.

Winter winds and snows are things of the past, and with them have disappeared thick-soled walking boots, arctics and heavy hosiery. We must now prepare for the dainty footwear worn with Easter frocks and fetching spring toggery. In the care of the feet, as with other parts of the body, it is the simple home remedy applied every day—not spasmodically—that counts for a sure cure in the long run.

A very common fault in caring for the feet is cutting the toenails off too short. Nails are grown on the toes—as they are on the fingers—for the purpose of protection. They should not be cut down at the side of the toe, but straight across. The feet are entitled to much better care than they generally get. They should be bathed every day in lukewarm water, and once a week should be well soaked in a foot-tub of hot water, into which has been thrown a piece of common washing soda the size of a small egg. This tends to keep the pores open, the skin soft, and will help to draw out any inflamation.

POWDER FOR DUSTING THE FEET.

Every morning dust the feet with the following powder, just before you put on your stockings:

Pulverized alum, 5 grams; napthol, 5 grams; borax, 10 grams; starch, 10 grams; salicylic acid, 3 grams; violet talcum powder, 60 grams. This powder is very healing and tends to overcome any excessive perspiration.

Callous spots are often painful, and many people make the grave mistake of thinking they are corns, and cutting them unmercifully with a dull razor. Try friction first. Soak your feet in the soda water mentioned above, then rub the callous spots vigorously with a piece of pumice stone. (Much of the callous will come away.) In more obstinate cases, soak a piece of absorbent cotton in crude petroleum and bind on the callous over night. In the morning rub with the pumice stone.

CHANGE SHOES FREQUENTLY.

Frequently changing the shoes and stockings will keep the feet in good condition. There is no economy in one pair of shoes. When you come in from a long, tiresome trip, take off your stiff boots and put on a pair of soft slippers. If possible, change the stockings as well. For feet that are inclined to swell from long standing or other causes, great benefit will be found in a very hot foot bath into which has been thrown two tablespoons of the following powder: One ounce of alum, two ounces of rock salt; two ounces of borax.

Let the feet remain in this bath until the water is quite cool, then dry them and put on soft low slippers. A very good counter effect of long standing is to sit in a high chair so that the toes will just touch the floor and occasionally stretch the feet out with considerable pressure.

Many women are troubled with a dry, scaly skin on their feet. In such cases there is no better cure than that simplest of home remedies—just plain vaseline. This should be massaged into the feet every night before retiring. During this treatment use old bed linen, for the grease makes rather a bad stain on the sheets at times. A well known chiropodist in a large city tells me that sunning the feet is a species of "cure-all." She advises women to sit in the sunlight in their bedroom with their feet bare, allowing the sun and air to get to them. She said to me: "Suppose your face never came in contact with the sunlight and pure air—how would it look, and how would it feel?" Her argument was good, and I think it is worth trying.

Notes of the Fashion Magazines.

The April number of the Woman's Home Companion contains several notable articles, and is, in addition, a thoroughly artistic and beautiful issue. Kellogg Durland contributes his second article on "Women of the Russian Revolt;" Jane Addams writes a thoughtful and appealing article on "The Working Woman and the Ballot;" Dr. Edward Everett Hale gives a helpful talk on "The Meaning of Home," and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps continues her serial story, "Though Life Us Do Part." There are also some excellent short stories. This April issue is beautiful in its Easter cover and in many fine pictorial features by Hermann C. Wall, Florence Scovel Shinn, Ellen Macauley and others.

The special spring fashion numbers of Vogue, the fashion magazine, give advance models of correct style by Paris and New York dressmakers, and are handsomely and accurately illustrated. The number of April 9 presents the newest creations of French modistes in a breezy, chatty letter from Paris. An article on "Portrait Painters of To-day" is contributed by John W. Alexander. It is accompanied by a beautiful reproduction of a portrait of Miss Dorothy Roosevelt.

Delineator fashions, standard as they are, by no means monopolize all the space in the May number of that publication. There are other subjects of almost equally vital interest in the number. One of these is entitled "The Making of an American Beauty," by Martha Gale Gates, and treats of such a being from her babyhood till her debut, showing how she is trained to fulfill her destiny as a social leader. The house that won the Delineator $500 prize is described. A honeymoon on a houseboat is again described by John L. Mathews, who retells his experience floating down the Mississippi to New Orleans.

The Circle in its Easter number makes announcement of good things to come and provides a good assortment of general articles, bright stories and helpful small circles devoted to special subjects. There are "The Mothers' Circle," "The Home Circle," "The Circle of Dress" and other department circles. Among the special articles are "Wild Animals That Have Nerves," by William T. Hornaday; "From My Rosary of Easters," by Clara Morris; "Politics—To-Day and Yesterday," by Alexander K. McClure and others.

BEAUTIFUL DRAPERY EFFECTS.

Gowns Made by French Dressmakers Require a Perfect Figure.

From the American Register, London.

To fashionable dressmakers who keep closely in touch with the Parisian fashions, a new season's revelation never comes with surprise nowadays.

The story has always been told in advance, and the openings but underscore certain phrases and illustrate interesting features.

Of the more gorgeous confections there is much to be said. The most effectively successful of these models are less ornate than those of last season.

Where elaboration is needed there it is applied with careless prodigality, but Parisians are to-day worshipping at the shrine of the line, and the rarest art of the famous dressmakers is exercised in the obtaining of novel and beautiful drapery effects, in the moulding of the frock to the figure and the relief of this sheath silhouette by the most artistic and graceful of flowing lines or slight "mouvements."

For the woman of perfect figure these new models are ideal. Not within our memory have there been so many frocks of artistic value, frocks that will make the most of a graceful figure and that express the perfection of elegance without even a hint of over-elaboration. But on the ordinary figure many of these models, even when made by expert hands, will lose their point. Even the lay figures in most of the shops cannot be persuaded to wear them with an air. A line out of drawing spoils the picture.

The little drapery movements in the skirts of the high-class models are a fascinating study. There are bold movements, flowing tunics, which, while clinging round the hips, ripple into artistic folds below, but there are, too, many delightful little devices for the breaking up of severe outlines.

ROYAL WORCESTER
ADJUSTO CORSETS
FOR FIGURES VARYING FROM PLUMP TO OVER STOUT
The ADJUSTO is like all other Royal Worcester Corsets—skillfully designed to fashionably shape and support the figure—but has the added valuable feature, abdominal adjusting bands, which can be adjusted by the wearer without removing the corset. By tightening these bands after the ADJUSTO is fitted to the form, the abdomen is lifted up, held in firmly and drawn towards the hips.
At the same time superfluous flesh of hips and back is reduced, flattened and distributed equally, creating the new flat hip effect.
The ADJUSTO will permanently retain its original shape, and is very serviceable, as it is made of durable materials, and reinforced with superior quality stays.

SUNDAY, APRIL 19.

AN EASTER SERMON.

To millions of souls in the Christian church Easter brings the vision of immortality. In the services to-day throughout Christendom the story of the Resurrection will be read and men and women will take courage from the great words of St. Paul:

> But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. * * * So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.

The truth of this utterance cannot be proved by scientific methods. It is the assertion of the prophet, not of the historian. Yet it carries conviction even to a doubting age. No longer is it possible to assume that mere idle tales can influence the whole course of civilization. Some experience this little band of simple folk had in Judea that gave them power to transform the world. They lived in a primitive age in which the world was a world of wonders. To them there were no laws of nature. They may not have been able to distinguish between the inward vision of truth and outward manifestations. Yet evidently there was made clear to them the figure of their Master, "clad," as a German scholar has said, "in all the strength and splendor in which they had known it upon earth, yet now transfigured and freed from the chances and changes of our mortal life."

It was this insight into the undying character of the Founder of Christianity that gave to the disciples their assurance that death was henceforth swallowed up in victory. It is this belief that the meaning of ideals is the only reality and that it endures in all this flux of worlds, that confirms in this Twentieth century the faith of the early Christians.

Death is a fact to be recognized even on Easter morning. Our earthly house of this tabernacle shall be dissolved. But the building of God, the house not made with hands—all our ideal strivings, our worth, our value, our significance—remains eternal in the heavens. It is only a glimmering of this truth that men catch from time to time. They see in a glass darkly. The veil of sense rests thickly over the eternal things. But faith and hope and love can pierce the veil and reveal the supernal beauties beyond.

It was such an experience that the disciples had after that first Easter day. To them was vouchsafed the vision of the endless life which is renewed day by day in the ideals and aspirations of men who know that all these strivings cannot be in vain.

MODERATE AND VIOLENT REFORM.

To oppose reform that is moderate is stupid. The interests that fight everything which is against their extreme selfishness are particularly short sighted. People undoubtedly have a tendency to "tire of reform," and those whose interests are against reform assume that they can "wear out" the forward movement. But they can't. If they should succeed in retarding the square deal in this nation they would only retard it, and in the long run the reaction from reaction would carry the people to further progress than if their first moderate demands were acceded to.

The square deal movement is not antagonistic to any valid interest. On the contrary, its spirit is to do what Charles Ferguson of the Municipal University would call "nucleating the forces." If any force refuses to be adjusted to its proper relation to other forces—it will be adjusted anyway, and possibly injured somewhat in the process.

It may be repeated that to invite violent reform by a cross headed opposition to moderate reform is stupid. If a condition is wrong it does not appeal to sober sense to preach that it is right, or, at least, that it had better not be remedied. Especially does the doctrine fall flat when it is preached by interests that benefit from the existing wrong. It is so far from optimistic to insist upon content or acquiescence with everything that is that such insistence is really responsible for most of the menacing discontent in the social order. Opposition to reform by sleek gentlemen of the allegorical side whiskers is precisely the doctrine of despair nourished by anaemic citizens of the red flag. "What are you going to do about it?" ask the allegorical gentlemen. "I'm going to throw a bomb about it," says the red flag individual. One type has about as much sense as the other. Both are out of proportion and out of tune.

To face the facts and be constructively optimistic by insisting that bad facts shall be improved is the programme for those who are not apostles of despair of either sort—either cheerfully morbid stand patters or gloomily morbid haters of society.

A NON-ELECTIVE PARTY LEADER.

The British premiership is an example of a great political office that almost invariably goes to the right man without any direct expression of the voters—at times one is tempted to say because there is no such expression. No electoral mandate made Mr. Asquith the successor to Campbell-Bannerman. But it was taken for granted that the succession would take place and the retiring prime minister's recommendation that the Chancellor of the Exchequer succeed him was a mere formality.

The office of first minister of the crown—still, it is believed, unrecognized by British law—has a fortunate origin and tradition behind it. It originated because the first of the Georges were more interested in Hanover than in England and so left the British government in charge of the great Whig families to whom they owed the crown. By a process of natural selection the direction of affairs was intrusted by these families first to Sir Robert Walpole, the most competent parliamentarian of his times. That was the origin of the custom of committing the supervision of the government to the cabinet minister who had proved himself best qualified for the task. To the voters was left the determining of policy and the choice of members of the House of Commons. But there their control ended. It was for the Commons to say whose leadership the members would accept.

The choice nominally rests with the crown. Occasionally, indeed, when no unmistakable leader has appeared, the sovereign exercises a real selection among the few men recognized as at the head of the party in power. Thus when Mr. Gladstone resigned office for the last time the queen made Lord Rosebery prime minister, although Mr. Gladstone himself would have suggested Lord Spencer, if his advice had been asked. At the end of the last Beaconsfield administration the queen tried to induce Lord Hartington to form a cabinet, and failing in him sent for Lord Granville. But both these men knew and the country knew that Gladstone was the party's leader and that it would be impossible to conduct a government in which he was not chief. So the queen finally capitulated and asked him to take charge.

In general, however, the selection has been made without friction because some particular man has so developed the qualities of leadership that he is recognized without formality as the proper head of the government. There are obvious advantages in this method of selecting the manager of a national administration.

"THE CURSE OF MONEY."

Mr. Frank J. Gould, the publication of whose domestic unhappiness has added to the more or less sensational gossip in which the family of the late Jay Gould has become involved, did not go into particulars, but he bluntly declared that his trouble was "the curse of money." "If I had been a poor chap," he said, "I might have escaped it all." And so he might. And yet there is no fundamental reason why young Mr. Gould, having been born rich, was doomed to matrimonial misery or any other form of unhappiness that might not have befallen him if he had been obliged to earn his living. It will be admitted, however, that the peace and happiness of the very rich, as a class, are in peculiar jeopardy. Witness the entanglements and disagreements and the scandals that have affected many of the wealthy families of this country, more especially in New York, Pittsburg and Philadelphia.

The miserable rich are probably not looking for sympathy or advice from the comfortable poor or the happy possessors of fair incomes. But the secret of worldly content must be found among those who have definite occupations, be they poor or rich or between these extremes. It is an axiom that the thing possessed without effort brings less enjoyment than the thing attained by work and purpose. Thus a fortune unearned usually brings less happiness than a fortune honestly acquired. But even the unearned fortune may be made to serve a great purpose in its possessor's scheme of happiness—if he has a scheme, and that is practically the whole matter. It is the aimlessness, the idleness, of the rich that brings discontent and its attendant ills. And along with the internal disorders that arise from lack of worthy purpose, is a constantly increasing public resentment toward vast fortunes.

This public attitude is not hard to understand. There is more and more insistance on the question, "How did he get it?" and for the very simple reason that most of the very big fortunes have been made by "jobbing" the people. In one way or another they largely represent tribute, legal or illegal, but essentially immoral, essentially dangerous to the equilibrium of wealth and the social order. The people do not resent honest wealth if it is employed to a purpose—if its beneficiaries do not use it merely for the financing of lavish and spectacular idleness, for the opulent display of a wholly assumed superiority. Weath that is not possessed with a sense of responsibility, that is not employed in some one of the many directions that open opportunities for accomplishment other than that of mere accumulation is less to be desired than mere competence. A multi-millionaire whose chief aim is to drive the best four-in-hand that money will buy or to give the most lavish dinners that can be prepared is not inviting admiration or happiness. If he cares for either, he must do something worth while—worth while to the public as well as to himself. Such a purpose and effort necessarily bring him in touch with the big currents of humanity—a necessary contiguity if a life is to be made worth the living.

THE BISHOP AS A MISSIONARY.

From the Extension Magazine.

Bishop Hogan of Kansas City, years ago, as a young priest, had many missionary experiences in the sparsely settled parts of Missouri.

Away back in the '60s, when Jefferson City was the terminus of the Missouri Pacific railroad, Bishop Hogan was a young priest in charge of St. Michael's church at St. Louis. Imbued with the missionary spirit, Father Hogan prevailed upon Archbishop Kenrick to relieve him of parochial duty in order to bring the Gospel of the Living God into the wilds of the state. It is worth recalling the fact that the late Archbishop Feehan of Chicago succeeded Father Hogan as pastor of St. Michael's church.

Starting out on the mission, Father Hogan reached Center Point, after an arduous trip by rail, river, and stage route, and here, perhaps for the first time in North Missouri, the Holy Sacrifice of the mass was offered by the zealous young priest in the only building in the town—a one-story, two-room shed, with floor and roof of cotton wood boards, but without plastering or the least protection against the elements. Father Hogan converted one of the dingy rooms into a chapel, and the other did duty as combined study and living quarters, while meals were obtained from neighboring farmhouses. A few laborers composed the congregation, and a crowd from the backwoods would turn out on Sunday to "see the priest," but illy concealing their surprise at their failure in beholding the horns and the other paraphernalia then popularly supposed to belong to every well regulated Catholic priest. Occasionally one of these people would invite Father Hogan to dinner, and Bishop Hogan tells of one case where the banquet consisted of squash and watermelon, spread out on the puncheon floor of the cabin, and served in generous portions with the aid of a convenient scythe.

"Etiquette in vogue in the wilds of Missouri, in those days," said Bishop Hogan, "did not call for knives or forks."

"Upon one occasion," said Bishop Hogan, "having recited my office and said my beads, my attention was called to the fact that a fresh crowd of 'visitors' had taken possession of the underground 'story' and their antics led me to believe that they looked upon the occupant of the upper 'story' as an invader. Soon a more than usual racket of biting, squealing and grunting became painfully evident, and this, added to the all but unbearable odor of the place, completely unnerved me for the moment. Yet I might have possibly held the fort and been victor in the end, had not a new and novel attack been made upon me. The master hog of the place, a huge fellow, adjusting his itchy back to the floor underneath my feet, his bristles sticking up defiantly through the cracks, gave me and my little chapel such a rocking and shaking that I began to think the end of the world was nigh, at least for me. Realizing that the 'abomination of desolation' was in the place, I fled to the woods close by. How I spent the wearisome night, I do not know. In the morning, however, with renewed courage, meekly and humbly I went to the poor railroad laborers and told them my pitiful story. They then built a log shanty for me, some twelve feet square and eight feet high, built it of unhewn timber, leaving openings for a door and for one window. A bedstead, a table and two chairs, made of undressed plank from a neighboring sawmill, completed my household furniture, and here I read mass, taught catechism and performed the other daily routine of my priestly office."

Thus was laid the foundation for what is now the dioceses of Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., Bishop Hogan having first been made bishop of the latter place, and eventually transferred to Kansas City.

GARDEN PHILOSOPHY.

From Harper's Weekly.

Every one who owns a spot of earth pines in the natural course of events for a large garden, and who attains such blessedness must bear the brunt of it since he, at any rate, has what he wanted. But the owners of very small gardens may solace themselves by doing all the work of their gardens in person, and that is a great gain in itself, ridding one, as it does, of the freting contact of other personalities and opinions. Then there is the intimacy of a small garden, a boon not easily overrated. One may indeed gain masses of color and large effect by planting by the thousand, but in planting by the half hundred or the dozen one establishes a personal friendship with each separate plant; one knows the faces of the pansies, the exact height of the delphiniums, and the bushiness of the phlox. In a very short time, indeed, may such a relation be established in a tiny garend as resulted in the poet's finer sense of things:

"The Red Rose cries, 'She is near!she is near!'
And the White Rose weeps, 'She is late!'
The Larkspur listens, 'I hear! I hear!'
And the Lily whispers, 'I wait.'"

It was doubtless merely the exigencies of alliteration that led the larkspur to listen in that case, for in the main he is an active and aspiring plant, reminding one, as he overtops the gentle Madonna lilies and waves over bushy phloxes, somewhat of an assertive rising democracy still proud of its peasant's blouse. And how like life, after all, is a garden, and what excellent discipline and training it is for general existence! Gardening, indeed, often leaves youth impatient, unwilling to have such obvious morals pointed at it, and keeping ever somewhere hidden in the depths of its abounding vitality a tiny, secret hope of the miraculous, a faint expectation that the order of the universe will, after all, reverse its course and come about somehow in favor of the personal hopes. It was in the very youth of the world that the kings of Mexico were wont, at their coronation, to swear to keep all the laws of the land, and make the sun continue his daily course. It is somewhat hoary and sober lessons that a garden teaches; what ye sow, that ye shall reap; and the wisdom, the canniness of life, is to hitch your wagon and all your efforts to a star, for in the wake of the courses of the universe you shall go willy nilly, and it is much better to go with hearty assent, making the best of the matter, whether it be good or evil. Then, again, the garden, like life, is never "all we have hoped and willed and dreamed of good." Here, too, we must postpone fulfillment into the dim future, and look forward to next year and next for the completion of happiness. It is never this year, but next, that the hollyhocks will be properly grouped and thick enough, that the foxglove will have attained the proper height, and the dark blue columbines be near the white lilies and the cerulean columbines on the side of the spotted ones. Indeed, a hardy garden border is a perennial game of chess, where year by year we move and replant to attain better combinations of color, more perfect gradations of height. The garden is the eternal approximation; it keeps us up and doing, ever pursuing the still fleeting ideal.

One American Countess Is Happy.

From the New York Press.

At least one happy international marriage is that of the Countess de Buissert, who has just reached this country from Belgium to spend three months with her mother, Mrs. John P. Story, in Washington. The countess was Caroline Story, and before her marriage, a few years ago, she was known as well in New York and Philadelphia society as in the capital. Miss Story was an intimate friend of Alice Roosevelt in the days before the President's daughter became Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Many masculine hearts were made to flutter by the beauty and grace of Miss Story, and it came as a surprise to the majority of them when she bestowed her hand upon the Count Conrad de Buissert, at that time first secretary to the Belgian legation. The count now is in Tangier, and the countess has been entertaining old girl friends with exciting stories of her experiences in the recent Moroccan troubles. The countess saw an encounter between French and Arabs when she was on a trip with her husband. Of course, the couple was safely within the French lines.

Ascension Lilies.

Zona Gale, "The Loves of Pelleas and Ettarre."

Ascension lilies were everywhere in our shabby drawing room. They crowded two tables and filled a corner and rose, slim and white, atop a Sheraton cabinet. Everyone had sent Pelleas and me a sheaf of the flowers * * * and we entered our drawing room after breakfast on Easter morning to be all but greeted with a winding of the white trumpets. The sun smote them and they were a kind of candle, their light secretly diffused, premonitory of spring, of some resurrection of light as a new element.

CONCERNING the CAT-FISH.

THE catfish. Now I wonder who named the catfish after a cat and why he did so. If there is any one thing in animate nature that would not be suggestive of a name for such a thing as the catfish it is the cat. The two have nothing at all in common. Neither has any particular attribute of the other. They are unlike in looks, manners, habits, vocal and dumb expression. There is nothing feline, slinking or uncertain about the catfish. It is plain, even ugly, to look upon. It grabs what it wants and swallows it down for the sole purpose of satisfying its inner self and goes on about its business. The cat is prim, dainty, caring much about its looks, while the catfish is matter of fact, would wear stained overalls if it were human and does not care a cent about its looks. If it did it would be perpetually mortified. The catfish is steady and regular in its habits and attends strictly to its own individual business of living. The cat is irregular, inconstant, uncertain, feline and always mixing in and interfering with the affairs of other cats. To crown every difference, the catfish is good for mankind to eat, while best authority says the cat is not.

The only thing that possibly could be suggestive of the cat in the catfish is that the one is as different from the other as it is possible for two things to be.

There is a tradition that the catfish was so named because the flexible "feelers" that grow from its frontispiece look something like the so-called whiskers on a cat's face. It is a mighty far cry to any resemblance. The catfish feelers look just as much like the face whiskers on a dog, a rat, a squirrel or a horse as those on a cat. Facially there are persons I have seen that look a good deal more like a catfish than does a cat. In truth, however, the catfish resembles nothing else on or within the earth but its own self, and it ought to have an independent, nonprejudice-making name of its own.

Probably the first man who ever caught a catfish and cooked and ate it—he was either a very recklessly brave man or a hungry one, or both—was surprised to find it so good to eat despite its looks and gave it a name so that none else would want to eat catfish and he would have a never-ending plenty for himself. Any such design long ago failed so far as we of Central Missouri are concerned. Certainly with its looks and its name there are grounds for suspicion among the ignorant. The catfish is not the only thing good to eat that does not look that way. It ranks in looks with the lobster, the soft-shell crab, the diamond-back terrapin, the shrimp and the eel. There are some of us who have eaten catfish and also all those other things and we rank the properly prepared catfish as a toothsome edible with anything, however ugly or however handsome it may be.

Down in Central Missouri the unhandsome catfish is the standard, the staple and the stand-by among the food fishes. The people there, especially the native-born, know where, when and how to catch catfish, how to dress them and how to cook them. And when you find anyone scornful of catfish you can put it surely down that such a one is to be pitied for the ignorance and prejudice that keeps him from knowing and unenjoying so fine a thing.

To Missourians of the middle counties all catfish are divided into two kinds—frying size and too-big-to-fry-whole. First, as to the frying size, that run from a long finger length to a foot or a little more and from a few ounces to a pound in weight. The yellow mudcats of the creeks are the nonpareils for the frying pan. The catfish of the ponds or dead water is never equal in quality to those of the streams.

It is not every kind of day, any weather or any stage or kind of water that one can catch the yellow mudcat in sufficient numbers to reasonably fill a frying pan. One must wait for wet weather, slow warm rains, a season of drizzle and moisture that makes the roads soft, raises the creeks to a stage midway between low water and bank full, muddies the water, makes the going underfoot soggy, slippery and tiresome and the woods damp and drippy. Then take your five-cent fish line and your nickel's worth of additional small hooks to replace possible snagged and broken ones; go down back of the barn, turn over a big rock or a log and dig from the loose, damp soil some fishing worms. Put the worms with some dirt in a can, like you used to when a boy, and then go down through the thick wet woods to where the creek runs.

There you are sure to find a hole where there is a rack heap of freshet driven logs and tangled and twisted brush. In the water below and above and under the yellow catfish lie in wait for things coming down stream. Above the rack heap is a scum of light debris held back by the obstruction and in that is your place to thrown in. Cut a pole from the growth on the bank. There is plenty of material there and no use to cut a pole sooner, for 'totin' a long sapling through thick woods and brush is vexatious and destructive of that placidity of mind so essential in real "fishin'." See that the point of the hook is covered up with worm, spit on the bait and cast in just above the scum. The slight current takes the cork down to a stand in the thick of it. Rest easy. Fix your pole firm on the bank, light your pipe and sit down on a log. The art of catching sizable, yellow mudcats is to keep calm, unworrying and unexcited. Soon out of sight dives that cork; the line stretches taut, the pole bends. Don't get fractious even now. Lay hold of that pole, heave firmly and hoist your yellow, flopping and mildly astonished fish well up on the bank. He has taken worm, hook and as much line as he can swallow into his farthest "innards," and you've got to "project around" considerably with your thumb and forefinger far down to recover your tackle.

String the captive on a willow or buck bush fork, one prong two feet long, the other six inches. Do not cut your fork before you have caught a fish. It is a hoodoo of the worst kind. Put your fish in shallow water with the stringer well anchored to the bank with a big rock or heavy chunk of wood. Readjust your bait or put on a new worm, cast in the same place again, and in about five minutes out you hoist another fish. You keep on doing this. It sounds monotonous, but there is a mighty joyful thrill and a delicious calm excitement to this "fishin'." Keep this thing up three or four hours, and you have some fifteen to twenty fat, golden yellow, frying size fellows, and have caught perhaps a score more too small to fry which you throw back if you have been well raised.

If you have been out in the afternoon get back in time to have those fish for supper. You have a good mess for half a dozen people. The right kind of a cook will put a pinch of salt inside each fish and lay them in clear, fresh water until time for frying. Then she (the best cooks are of that sex) will roll each fish in corn meal until it is well coated, put them in a frying pan with plenty of pure lard, let them splutter, spat, pop and crackle, turning each fish over two or three times with a fork, until the meal coating is well browned. Then those fish are ready for the table. And there is no more toothsome, delicately flavored morsel anywhere than a mouthful of the well cooked white meat of them.

Catfish above frying size are caught in streams that have attained the dignity of a place on maps, with set lines, seines or by jugging. The processes are too many, varied and elaborate for mention here. To avoid weariness, mud, hard work, blistered hands and much occasion for profanity, buy the size fish you want from one of the fishermen down at the boat landing on the big river. There are always such fishermen about the old towns on the Missouri river. If you want to eat fish at its best get a catfish—channel or plain big cat, not a "shovel-nose"—of from five to ten pounds weight. Have it dressed and placed over night in salty water. In the morning after breakfast, say between 8 and 9 o'clock, have the cook stove at good heat for baking, and keep it that way. Take a baking pan big enough to hold the fish, warm the pan so it will melt a tablespoonful of butter. Put the whole fish in the pan. Sprinkle it with a tablespoonful of flour. Put in the pan a teacupful of clear water. Put the whole in the oven and let it bake slowly with steady, unvarying heat during the three to four hours until noon dinner time. While the baking is progressing, keep watch over it, and every now and then when the top of the fish looks dry, with big spoon or ladle pour over the fish the liquid in the pan bottom. Add occasionally a pinch of salt and pepper. When ready to serve, as it will be by dinner time, lay the baked fish on a big dish. Cut two or three lemons in slices and place these around on the dish edge. While these lemon slices are ornamental, if you do not take two or three of them to squeeze over your fish portion you have been poorly educated. Put the pan liquid in a bowl to itself and let the head of the table, the master of these solemn ceremonies, add a spoonful or two of it to each diner's portion as served.

Great gravy!

Long live the Missouri catfish. May he never die save by hook or cook.

ROLLINS BINGHAM.

Going Through the Straits in a Warship.

Lieutenant Commander Philip Andrews, Executive Officer U. S. S. Kansas, Special Correspondent for Harper's Weekly.

While I am sure that no one in the fleet had felt that our passage through the straits would present any great difficulty, the reality seemed little short of ridiculous when we considered the grave forebodings and the dismal doubts entertained and expressed as to the safe passage of the ships. Of course the winter season in that latitude, either south or north, is stormy and bitter, and snowstorms and heavy rain or hail then make the navigation difficult, because it is difficult to see. But in the summer it does not seem much of a navigation problem for a modern ship, and in the winter it is certainly no worse than many other places—Bering sea, for instance—to which the navy has long been accustomed. In the old days of small ships with limited engine power it was probably a hazardous trip, and many were the wrecks which gladdened the hearts of the savages on the shores of the straits. The old naval officers who spoke oracularly of our trip through the straits undoubtedly gained their experience of them in small ships; and lay writers in our own and the foreign press have probably consulted the sailing directions or ancient books of travel and adventure. The Straits of Magellan, and the weather there, have not changed in the least, but ships have. The fleet encountered this supposed ordeal as it has everything else so far—uneventfully. We went right along at the usual 400 yards distance, and with no variation from the strict requirements of any other day.

It is two hundred miles from Sandy Point to Cape Pillar, the west end of the straits. We covered that distance in twenty hours. I read somewhere that the last sailing vessel to go through made it in eighty-six days!

The Retort Courteous.

From the Saturday Evening Post.

A young man in a hurry went through the left side of a pair of swinging doors in the Senate wing of the capitol at Washington last session and almost knocked over the late Senator Pettus of Alabama, who was about to push through the right side.

The young man apologized profusely. "I am very sorry—I didn't know I was—I am in a great hurry."

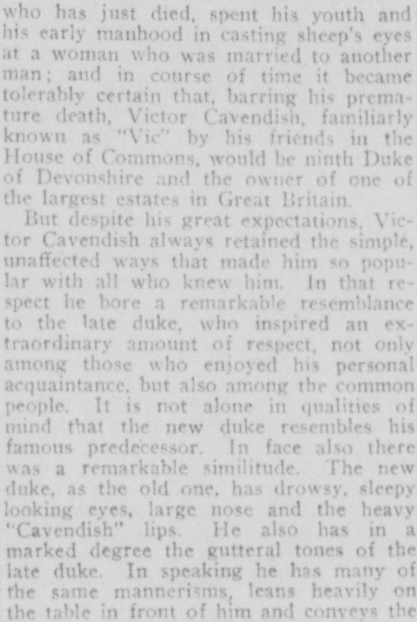
"That's all right, son," said the venerable Pettus. "But let me give you a piece of advice about going through doors like these. Always go through on the right side, and turn to the right. Then, if you meet anybody coming through and bump into him you needn't apologize. He'll be a durned fool, and it won't be necessary. Good morning."

NO AIRS ABOUT THIS DUKE.

Devonshire, Once Poor, Unaffected by Title and Riches.

In the new Duke of Devonshire, who has just succeeded his uncle to the British title and the vast possessions that go with it, the House of Commons has lost one of its most respected members. Although lacking the usual incentives for hard work, as for many years it was certain that he would succeed to the Devonshire dukedom, he always "sweated" conscientiously for his party during the nineteen years he represented West Derbyshire in the lower house. The new duke is expected to win an enviable place for himself in the hereditary upper chamber by his solid qualities of mind and heart.

One could hardly say that the present duke was born with a silver spoon in his mouth; but fate soon made up for the deficiency. As a matter of fact, he was born the eldest child of the third son of the seventh duke and there seemed only the remotest prospects of his ever succeeding to the great title which his grandfather bore. Death, however, removed those that intervened. The eighth duke, who has just died, spent his youth and his early manhood in casting sheep's eyes at a woman who was married to another man; and in course of time it became tolerably certain that, barring his premature death, Victor Cavendish, familiarly known as "Vic" by his friends in the House of Commons, would be ninth Duke of Devonshire and the owner of one of the largest estates in Great Britain.



THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.

But despite his great expectations, Victor Cavendish always retained the simple, unaffected ways that made him so popular with all who knew him. In that respect he bore a remarkable resemblance to the late duke, who inspired an extraordinary amount of respect, not only among those who enjoyed his personal acquaintance, but also among the common people. It is not alone in qualities of mind that the new duke resembles his famous predecessor. In face also there was a remarkable similitude. The new duke, as the old one, has drowsy, sleepy looking eyes, large nose and the heavy "Cavendish" lips. He also has in a marked degree the gutteral tones of the late duke. In speaking he has many of the same mannerisms, leans heavily on the table in front of him and conveys the impression of being "horribly bored."

Besides being the holder of one of the proudest titles in the British peerage, the new Duke of Devonshire is allied by marriage with another of the great families of the land. He married the elder daughter of the Marquis of Lansdowne, leader of the Conservative party in the House of Lords. Curiously enough, the London house of the Marquis of Lansdowne, famous the whole world over as the resting place of one of the finest collections of statuary in existence, abuts on the rear of Devonshire house, the London residence of the duke.

The position of a British duke is not always an enviable one. To be "dead broke" and the holder of great titles is one of the sorriest plights that can be imagined. But it is safe to say that such an experience will never trouble the new Duke of Devonshire. For with the title goes the ownership of about 200,000 acres and an annual income of a little short of a million dollars.

(From Stainer's Oratorio, "Crucifixion.")

Fling wide the gates! for the Savior waits
To tread in His royal way;
He has come from above, in his power and love
To die on this Passion day.
His cross is the sign of a love divine.
He bears His load on the sorrowful road
And bends 'neath the burden low.

How sweet is the grace of His sacred face
And lovely beyond compare,
Though weary and worn, with the merciless scorn
Of a world He has come to spare.
The burden of wrong that earth bears along,
Past evil, and evil to be;
All sins of man since the world began,
They have laid, dear Lord, on Thee.

Then on to the end, my God and my Friend,
With Thy banner lifted high!
Thou art come from above, in Thy power and love
To endure and suffer and die!

SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE.

To-day we have journeyed far,
My heart and I;
Came home at dusk 'neath a star
Hung keen and high.

The morn was a blade of steel—
Scabbard of white—
Bonnie and brave to feel
In burnished light.

As we footed the open road
We sang the sun:
Love was the debt we owed
The day begun.

The hills were abrupt and blue—
Castles of kings,
To be won and wandered through
For precious things.

Noon and the long afternoon—
Gladness and hope—
And a shadow that walked too soon
The westward slope.

So is the wild world won
By them who roam;
But best of the day that is done—
The door of home.

A murder trial now in progress in St. Charles, Mo., has an odd interstate feature. Daniel Dempsey, village marshal of Grafton, Ill., is accused of killing one Claude Allemang. It appears that Dempsey followed Allemang from Grafton across the river into St. Charles county and had him arrested. The prisoner agreed to return without requisition papers, and after starting back tried to escape, whereupon Dempsey shot him. It is contended that Dempsey had no authority to shoot Allemang, being an Illinois officer in Missouri territory. On the other hand, it is maintained by Dempsey that Allemang lived until he reached Grafton, Ill. The question at issue is, in which state the dead man's heart stopped beating.

The London Saturday Journal, in describing the weird rites at a Chinese funeral, remarks that in the usual topsy turvy way of the Orient the Chinaman enjoys himself even at obsequies. The Journal adds: "The coffiin is placed beside the grave and food placed upon it. A white rooster, alive or dead, is usually there, to lure the spirit of the man who has died abroad back to the home of his fathers. Whisky and tea and a bowl of rice with chopsticks are there, so that the corpse may not starve in the next world. Gin and tea are then sprinkled over the coffin, and the bottles thrown away. The mourners stand around laughing, enjoying the fun. The coffin is lowered, candles are lit, a suit of paper clothes is burned, and some paper money. Thus the corpse is assured of clothes in the next world, and pocket money to put in them."

A COMMON VIOLET.

BY FLOY CAMPBELL.

"I NEVER pluck a violet any more for the purpose of classifying it," said the botanist, regretfully. "The family has been so closely studied and has so many subdivisions now that it takes a large and expensive equipment of books to place a specimen with certainty. Only a specialist, and a fairly wealthy one, can afford to study violets as they should be studied."

I looked at the modest little flower in my hand with new respect. Think of its having arrived at that proud eminence where, like royalty, wealth and especial qualifications are necessary to him who would really know it! Who would believe that this humble blossom, familiar to children, common to every hill and valley, was yet beyond the reach of the ordinary student of botany? And then I was glad that for me, as for the rest of the laity, the old broad division sufficed—into blue violets, white violets, yellow violets and wild pansies.

THE YELLOW VIOLET.

Blue and white violets are alike in their growth, the flowers and leaves springing on separate stems from the root. But the yellow violet, like the wild pansy, or viola tricolor, has the blossom branching from a common stem with the leaves. All are lovely and to be sought with ardor, but the loveliest is the oldest—the blue flower that has the unique honor of having one of the colors of the spectrum named after it.

It is this flower, too, that is the subject of most of the legends that have gathered about the violet since the days of Greece. Shakespeare alludes to the old tradition that the plant was raised from the body of Io by the agency of Diana.

Lay her i' the earth,
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
May violets spring.

The Greek name was Ion, and one legend says that the violet was first created as a feast for Io when she was transformed into a heifer by Jupiter. Another legend says it was so called after some nymphs of Ionia, who first presented these flowers to the father of the gods.

Be that as it may, the flower was a favorite of the beauty-loving Greeks. It was the badge of Athens, and the orators, when they wished to win the attention of the people, were wont to address them as "Athenians crowned with violets." So high was the flower in their esteem that one of the prizes of the public games was a "Golden Violet."

The weaving of chaplets was a recognized profession in Greece and the story has come down to us of how Glycera, the most celebrated chaplet weaver of her time, challenged Pausias the painter to surpass in painting the perfection of her art. These chaplets of flowers were commonly used at the feasts, being handed about after the supper and immediately before the Symposium. The violet was one of the most popular flowers used for the purpose and readers of Plato will remember how Alcibiades appeared at the Symposium at Agathon's house "crowned with a massive garland of ivy and violets, and having his head flowing with ribbons."

In the few remaining fragments of Sappho's poetry there are two references to the violet. She says:

"I think I have a goodly portion with the violet-weaving Muses."

"Violet-weaving, pure, soft-smiling Sappho,"

Homer and Virgil also refer to it frequently.

From the days of its Greek popularity dates the custom of strewing the violet in the pathway of the bride at a wedding. By the time of Chaucer it had come to have its own symbolic meaning, too, of faithfulness, from which comes our phrase, "true blue." A lame old verse of the Sixteenth century goes:

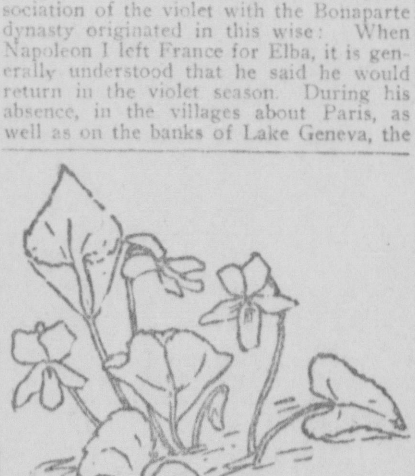
Violet is for faithfulnesse,
Which in me shaul abide;
Hoping likewise that from your heart
You will not let it slide.

Rural happiness was symbolized by the yellow violet, and innocence by the white. By some of the most celebrated French poets, as well as by our own, this flower has been dwelt upon in its representative character. One of the former has made it "the emblem of a heart that sheds its secret influence by good deeds and modest acts performed aside."

No flower is mentioned oftener, or with more delight by Shakespeare than the

Violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath.

In Paris somewhat less than a century ago the flower acquired a new and peculiar political significance, and to wear it was to proclaim one's self of the Liberal party. It has been believed that the association of the violet with the Bonaparte dynasty originated in this wise: When Napoleon I left France for Elba, it is generally understood that he said he would return in the violet season. During his absence, in the villages about Paris, as well as on the banks of Lake Geneva, the violet was the secret symbol by which the people denoted their chief, and recognized each other. They wore rings of violet color, with the device "Elle reparaitra au printemps" (it will appear in the spring), and watch ribbons and other ornaments of a violet hue were in great demand.



THE BLUE VIOLET.

Napoleon was toasted by the name of general or Corporal Violet among his adherents from the time of his quitting France until his return. When anyone was asked the question, "Do you love the violet?" if the answer was "Yes," the inference was that the person addressed was not a confederate. But if the response was "Eh, bien!" (O, greatly, the questioner recognized a brother conspirator, and completed his sentence, "It will appear again in the spring."

When Napoleon re-entered the Tuileries on March 20, 1815, after his escape from Elba, the palace was decorated with the flower of the season, the violet, in token of welcome. From that time it continued to be the Napoleon flower; so much so that after Waterloo, and the replacement of Louis XVIII on the throne, violets became seditious to wear—dangerous to sport in one's buttonhole. The White Terror waged implacable war against the purple violet. The later empire could hardly avoid reviving the traditions of the past, and with them the violet. "It was a most poetic fancy that linked this flower with the name of Napoleon. Springing in obscurity, and retaining its perfume in death, it was a wonderful emblem of him who rose from the valleys of Corsica to the throne of the Golden Lilies, and whose name has been a spell of power long after he ceased to breath the air of earth." In "L'Aiglon" it will be remembered how prominent is the part played by the great bunches of violets that are sent to the young Napoleon.

Farewell to thee, France! but when liberty rallies
Once more in thy regions, remember me then—
The violet still grows in the depths of thy valleys;
Though withered, thy tears will unfold it again.

The French have one kind of white violet they call "Violette de Feviere," or February violet, "from the white blossoms opening about the second of that month, when maidens dressed in white walked in procession at the feast of the Purification." There is also a March violet, so called from the time of flowering. In France and Italy this flower (Viola odorata), which we generally call "sweet violet," is known as Violette de Mars, and Viola Marzia.

The pansy, or viola tricolor, is represented in this part of the country among the wild flowers, by a little blossom of pure blue and white—a tiny thing, exquisite as a jewel. This flower, too, has its well known symbolism. Its name is from the French word pensees, "thoughts," and in the floral language means "think of me." Shakespeare has put into the mouth of Ophelia the English phrase we all quote:

And there's pansies—that's for thoughts.

THE WILD PANSY, OR VIOLA TRICOLOR.

Heartsease is another of the lovely names given to this sister of the violet. Bunyan has some pleasant and playful remarks after the fashion of his time on that name. It will be remembered that when Christiana and her children had entered the valley of Humiliation, they heard a lad singing,

He that is down need fear no fall,
He that is low no pride;
He that is humble ever shall
Have God to be his guide.

Then said the guide, "Do you hear him? I will dare say this boy leads a merrier life and wears more of that herb called heart's ease in his bosom than he that is clad in silk and velvet."

Truly, he that is humble shall be exalted. Here is our little flower, emblem of simple modesty, the commonest and loveliest spot of color on the spring hillsides. Yet it is so hard to know that the botanist feels himself ignorant of it; of lineage so old, that Homer and Sappho have sung of it; of such prowess that it has been the insignia of one of the mightiest warriors of all the ages—a common violet.

The Young Woman and the City.

James L. Ford in "Success Magazine."

The young woman who comes to New York in the same spirit that took Dick Whittington to London, the same spirit in which young men have been pouring into the great centers of the world from time immemorial, labors under many disadvantages, not the least of which is the fact that in nine cases out of ten she has not been brought up to earn her living; for New York is no place for the idle young woman who has no thorough knowledge of anything, though it offers infinite possibilities to those who have integrity and industry and have been at pains to fit themselves for the struggle for existence.

But the custom of having the daughters as well as the sons of a moderately well to do family go out into the world in search of a livelihood is of such recent origin that parents and elders have not yet learned to take it as a matter of course; and I have no doubt that at this very moment thousands of mothers, aunts and grandmothers are wearing their hearts out with anxiety over the pet of the family, who, having absorbed some of the modern spirit at the college to which she was sent to study botany, moral philosophy, and the folklore of Greenland, has calmly announced her intention of going to New York to gain her bread, perhaps in company with a college mate whose views of life are similar to her own.

The LORE and LEGENDS of EASTER.

THE universal festival of Easter, commemorating the resurrection of the Savior, derives its Teutonic name from the festival of the goddess of the old heathen Saxons, Eastre, Ostara or Oster, who seems to have been the personification of the East, of the morning, of spring. The month of April was dedicated to her and was called Eastermonath among the Saxons and Angles and is still known in Germany as Ostermonat. The worship of Easter was universal in Germany, and it was carried to England by the Saxons, and still survives in some obscure customs in feasts to celebrate the return of spring. The worship of Easter was especially one of rejoicing. She was ever a beneficent goddess. When the Christian church appeared upon the scene, it endeavored to give a Christian meaning to such pagan rites as could not be stamped out. The worship of Easter was one of these. It might be changed, but not uprooted, and so the fathers of the church decided to bend it to their own uses. Happily this was an instance where the bending was particularly easy. Nature herself typifies the great resurrection.

An important part of the feast of Easter was the building of bonfires and so this rite became in the hands of the Christians the great "paschal tapers," with which the churches were lighted on Easter eve. Some of these tapers weighed 300 pounds. In the reaction from the Austerities of Lent the people gave themselves up to enjoyment, popular sports and dances. To these were added farcical exhibitions, in which, in some places, even the clergy joined, reciting from the pulpit humorous stories and legends for the purpose of exciting the risus paschalis or "Easter smile." Monks and clerics engaged in games in the churches and in England the winners received tansy cakes as prizes. Feasts were also served in the churches. In the Sixteenth century the reformers raised their voices against the excesses which resulted from these exhibitions and practices and they were forbidden.

In the ancient church the celebration of Easter lasted eight days. After the Eleventh century, however, it was limited to three, in later times to two and finally to one day.

The first authoritative decree concerning the observance of Easter was made by the Council of Nicaea in Bythnia, A. D. 325. The anniversary of the Resurrection naturally had been observed at the recurrence of the feast of the Passover, which was the day of the full moon next after the vernal equinox, according to Jewish reckoning. Some held that Easter should be observed on that very day, while others contended that the celebration should be deferred to Sunday, the day of the week specially consecrated to the Resurrection. The Council of Nicaea branded as heretics all who held to the first opinion and emphasized it by decreeing that even when the day of the full moon fell on a Sunday, that day should not be observed, but the Sunday following. The council did not formulate any rule for determining the vernal equinox, nor that of the full moon following, but later March 21 was arbitrarily fixed as the date of the equinox, although it sometimes comes a little earlier or later than that date. The result is that Easter may be as early as March 22 and as late as April 25.

One of the oldest Easter superstitions is that which makes the sun participate in the general rejoicing by dancing in the heavens. Sir John Suckling wrote in the "Bride:"

But O, she dances such a way
No sun upon an Easter day
Is half so fine a sight.

This idea of the sun dancing may be easily traced back to the heathen customs when the spectators themselves danced at the festival in honor of the sun after the vernal equinox.

In the province of Connaught in the west of Ireland, the inhabitants all rise at dawn to see the sun dance on Easter morning. The afternoon is given over to dancing which is usually done on the public road. The music for the dance is furnished by a blind piper and the prize is a large cake, which is on view all day.

If the wind is in the east on Easter day it is regarded in some places as a wise plan to draw water and wash in it, as by this means one will avoid the various ill effects from the east wind throughout the remaining months of the year.

Much importance is also attached to rain falling on Easter day. According to an old proverb,

In Turkey Easter is ushered in with the firing of cannon. A ram is then seized, a pasha cuts its throat, a Jew hastily throws it over his shoulder and hurries away with it to the nearest mosque. If it is alive when it arrives the year will be a good one, but if it is dead the year will be a bad one.

On Easter eve the people in all parts of Italy play upon musical instruments and sing before the shrines of the Virgin Mother of Christ, with the idea of assuaging her grief for the death of her beloved son.

The peasantry of Sweden believe that Easter eve is an occasion upon which supernatural influences prevail, that all devils and witches are then abroad and that all fairies hold high carnival. All this changes with the dawn of Easter morning, for then no evil spirit dares to stir abroad. It also is a Swedish superstition that all horses and mules fall on their knees on Easter morning.

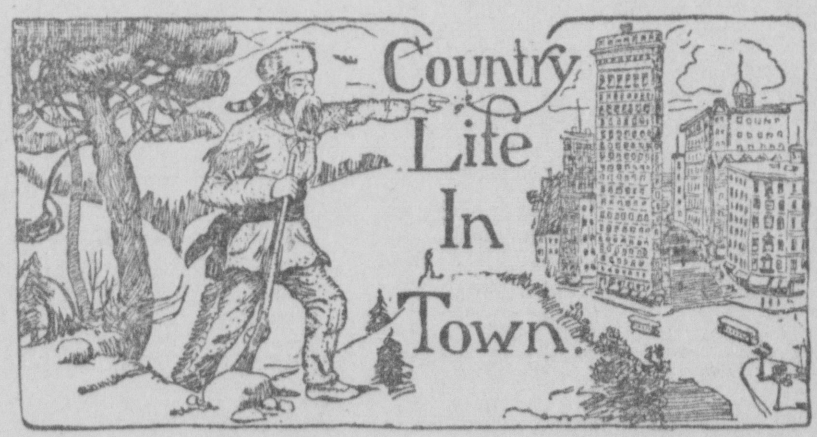
In Devonshire and Dorsetshire, England, tansy puddings and white cakes continue to be carried around and left at the houses of the well-to-do as Easter offerings. These cakes are from five to seven inches in diameter and one-eighth inch thick and gratuities are expected in return. Tansy is supposed to have been the "bitter herb" used by the Jews at the Feast of Passover, but the Christians cleverly disguised its bitterness with sugar and spices. The ancient idea is to-day embodied in the mint sauce which generally accompanies spring lamb to modern tables.

An old English name for Easter is "God's Sunday." In the Middle Ages troth plighted on Easter Sunday was regarded as peculiarly sacred, and it was customary for lovers to there exchange poetical addresses somewhat after the style of Valentines. The following rendered into modern spelling is by Athelstane Wade, a folk poet of the time of Richard I, and is regarded as one of the best specimens of its kind:

'Tis God's Sunday, precious one,
That binds your heart in love to me;
Let us, then, all folly shun,
Be true, my sweet, as I of thee.
Troth plighted on Christ's rising day,
Is holy, good and true;
Let come to me whatever may,
In life or death I'll cling to you.

In George Horton's "In Argolis" the Greek celebration of Easter is thus described:

> The long fast ends at midnight when the priest at the conclusion of the services raises his hand in benediction and proclaims "Christ is Risen!" At that moment 2½ million Greeks slip their hands into their pockets and break a hard boiled egg, after which they light candles and hurry away to their homes. Great care is taken lest the candle be extinguished en route, for this is considered a bad omen, forecasting the death of some member of the family during the year. If it is still burning after home is reached the hanging lamp in front of the family eikon is lighted from its flame. This latter must burn forty days without being relighted to insure good luck for the year. * * * Such roasting of lambs as we had in Poros on Sunday! In all the gardens, before the cafes, in the yards of private homes, festive groups were gathered. The air was surfeited with the smell of roasted meat and every Greek we encountered greeted us with "Christos aneste" (Christ is risen), to which the reply is "Alethos aneste" (truly, He hath risen).
>
> We roasted our lamb under the shade of a full blown lemon tree and to show a proper Christian spirit we invited the servants, together with the gardener and his father, to partake with us. The old man attired in holiday costume—clean fustanellas and a new red fez—turned the spit. From 10 in the morning until 1 he sat upon a low stool, slowly turning the fragrant carcass. No amount of hungry importunities could induce him to lift it one instant before his judgment pronounced it perfect. Hour after hour he sat there, anointing the meat with lemon dipped in lard, pulling a bone now and then to see if the flesh were yet tender. * * * After the lamb had been eaten, the old man carefully scraped and cleaned the right shoulder blade, asking with much solemnity if the animal had passed the night in the house. "What a shame!" he exclaimed, on being answered in the negative, "because I know how to read the bone; but if the lamb didn't pass a night in the house, what would be the use? How could it have learned the secrets of the family?" We besought him to read it anyway; with much evident compunction, as of one who feels that he is making light of a serious and sacred matter, he complied. Holding the triangular scapula between his eyes and the sun, he gazed at it long and earnestly. The result was highly satisfactory. A long piece of gristle at the end promised money during the next twelve months, and a clear, oblong, transparent place without spot or blemish argued tranquility, freedom from sickness or death and general prosperity. * * * We hanged Judas Iscariot to-day. Having expressed our joy over the resurrection by gorging ourselves with roast lamb and bitter wine, by firing guns, rockets and torpedoes, and by lighting bonfires, we gave vent to our remaining enthusiasm in one grand vent of mock vengeance directed against the unfortunate mortal destined from the foundation of the world to figure as a cat's paw in the plan of salvation. The burning took place in front of the little church of the Virgin, situated in the highest part of the city. * * * Poor Judas whirled about in the air as the bullets peppered him, and suddenly he burst into flames—a proper thing for the betrayer of Christ to do, especially if his body has been stuffed with powder and Roman candles. * * * When a Greek feels particularly happy, or wishes to express his enthusiasm, he produces an old musket or pistol and discharges it. Resurrection day in Greece resembles the Fourth of July in the United States. Woundings and deaths are frequent; the only wonder is they are not more so.



I AM a feller of forests old,
A conqueror of the wild;
For I am Nature's child.
I am a child of the wind and rain;
A pioneer of the woods and plain.
I love the sweep of the wind-blown sky,
And the white clouds sailing by.

The forests I fell are the Jimpson weed,
And the tangled curly dock;
While the back yard lot I trim with speed,
And pick up the bricks and rock.
I turn a furrow through virgin soil,
Spading the ground with honest toil.
O, an outdoor life so wild and free
Is the only life for me!

I am a lover of open air;
A friend of the rain washed sky—
See, I've a patch of it right up there,
Vis-i-ble to the eye!
When the smoke comes not from the chimney stack,
Making the sky and the whole world black,
I stand and gaze at the heavens high,
Through my patch of wind-blown sky.

This free life, near unto Nature's heart,
Is joy for a hardy man;
This wooing the mood of the solitude,
Is a very excellent plan.
I love the rigor of panting toil;
This gaining one's bread from the stubborn soil,
So every evening when I get home,
I scratch in the back yard loam.

IN KANSAS CITY'S CATACOMBS.

Beneath Many Pavements Are Hives of Busy Workers.

Catacombs suggest only Rome and the early Christian martyrs, daylight masses surrounded by grisly relics of the departed, the vast subterranean caverns of the Roman capital to which the light of day never penetrates.

Yet Kansas City has its catacombs, even if not comparable to Rome's in extent or fame. The local catacombs are different in construction and in use. No offices for the dead are held in them. They are very much alive. To the imaginative it is a striking thought that one cannot go along any of the downtown business streets without stepping upon sidewalks which cover hives of industry.

Hid by the flagging used by thousands of pedestrians, men and women work for their living. Under all the big office building sidewalks and not a few of the walks facing business houses in the retail district there are two floors upon which business is conducted as though the buildings towered over them.

The sidewalks abutting the newer skyscrapers on Walnut street and Grand avenue are mere lids to basements and subbasements. On the lower floors, the machinery of the buildings are placed, or the space is given over to other economies.

Even the streets of cities like Kansas City must be given over to the pressing need for room. Aside from their uses for sewers, piping systems for wires, heat and power, gas and steam, several are bored for tunnels, among which that between the Willis Wood theater and the Baltimore hotel is best known because of frequent use by the general public. A tunnel of equal size and much longer was bored years ago between the county jail and the county courthouse.

The sidewalks on Petticoat lane cover excavations thirty feet deep. Intercommunication between buildings facing the lane exists because of these prosaic catacombs and the retail business of the city is vastly facilitated through their use. But thousands of woman shoppers go chatting on their several ways unconscious of the fact that under their heels scores of workers are going unconcernedly about their tasks, their places of labor lighted by hundreds of electric bulbs.

WHO SHOULD HOLD THE BABY?

Here Is a New Problem in Street Car Etiquette.

"That fellow doesn't know the first thing about the etiquette of the baby carriage," remarked one of a group of men at Thirty-first and Main streets the other day.

The comment was made to all in a general way. One of the group, the man with a frayed collar and a look of patient resignation, gazed anxiously at a couple about to board a car. The mother was sparring in a desperate sort of way with one of those new fangled baby carriages which shop salesmen can open and close in a minutes and the users in from five to thirty minutes.

"Don't see anything wrong with that," said the man with the frayed collar. "He's got to hold the baby, even if she does have to wrestle with the carriage. You don't think he ought to hold the baby and take care of the carriage, too, do you?"

"Well, there's one thing sure," rejoined the objector. "The man doesn't know a thing about baby carriage etiquette. What you want to do is this: If the baby weighs more than the carriage, it's the man's place to hold the baby; if the carriage weighs more, he should hand the baby to his wife."

"Oh, piffle," interpolated the man with the big, black cigar. "You're 'way off. What he ought to do is to hand the baby to his wife and the carriage to the conductor."

Parish Consists of One Farm.

From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

LONDON—There is a parish in Wales which consists of one farm. This fact came out during the hearing of evidence before the royal commission on the Church of Wales. Sir John Williams, who put questions as to the church of Llandilo-Abercown, in Carmarthenshire, which returned eight communicants, stated that he lived near the church, and the accommodation consisted of five benches, each three feet five inches long, one with three legs, and three without backs, while the wood of one was so rotten a great piece had fallen off. It was at this point Archdeacon Evans stated the curious fact given above.

March 25—Every requirement of comptroller met.
March 26—W. B. Ridgely notifies the President that he is to resign to come to Kansas City.
March 27—Directors and officers elected.
March 28—W. B. Ridgely starts for Kansas City; money transferred to the bank ready for business.

Without imposing conditions of any kind upon the depositors the National Bank of Commerce will reopen for business at 9:30 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The whitewash that was put on the big windows December 5, when the bank failed, has been removed. The fixtures in the temporary quarters have been polished. The books are ready. Men have been chosen for every desk and every cage. The vaults are filled with money ready for demand payments. Every detail has been arranged and to-morrow, three months and twenty-five days since its doors were closed by the comptroller of the currency, the bank will again take its place among the country's great financial institutions, and the comptroller himself, William Barrett Ridgely, is its president.

When the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York resumed business recently it owed depositors 25 million dollars, only 9 million of which was on hand when the doors were reopened. The remainder was tied up securely by certificate or note. The National Bank of Commerce will face the country to-morrow with 6 million dollars in cash and exchange with which to pay a deposit account of about 12 millions. Its credit restored, men of national prominence in charge, a strong, conservative directorate behind it, the bank will be ready for any eventuality after its viscissitudinous struggle of nearly four months.

THE ROSTER OF THE BANK.

President—W. B. Ridgely.
Vice President—G. T. Cutts.
Cashier—Edward Ridgely.
Directors—William B. Ridgely, Edward Ridgely, George T. Cutts, W. S. Woods, J. Z. Miller, Hughes Bryant, J. G. Peppard, R. A. Long, D. R. Francis, W. A. Pickering, Theodore Hemmelman, J. C. James, D. J. Dean, H. F. Hall, Hugh C. Ward, W. S. Dickey, J. J. Heim, Walter Jaccard, W. R. Clarke, O. C. Snider and J. J. Swofford.

The National Bank of Commerce was the largest national bank, in capital and deposits that ever failed in the United States, but its failing caused little excitement. For years, whenever flurries came in the money market, men and women said that if ever the Commerce suspended payments Walnut street would be packed with a panic stricken crowd from Eighth to Twelfth streets. But when, finally, the wolf came few persons were frightened. The doors were closed one morning by James T. Bradley, a national bank examiner; a notice was posted on the windows and a little crowd gathered. At no time in the first few days after the failure was the sidewalk blockaded. A few hundreds passed by and read the notice and went away. None of the customary scenes were present. There were no growling men and grumbling, weeping women, no evidences of distress. An impression was prevalent that a bank that could pay out nearly 19 million dollars to depositors in thirty days probably would be able to pay dollar for dollar some day. So people took courage and went about their usual business. Very few sold their deposits. Those who did are sorry.

This statement shows how the bank stood August 22 and also two days before it failed:

THE TALK OF REOPENING.

The Commerce hadn't been closed two days before the officers and directors were talking of reopening. Talk, they declared, had caused the failure and money could overcome it, finally. So they began work. An organization committee was formed to represent the stockholders. A committee went to Washington and asked the comptroller for his terms and then came home and complied with them. But it took time and hard work because while the bank had good collateral the country was holding its money, fearful of a panic, and the committee found it difficult to get cash, and cash the comptroller demanded. Probably the big task might never have been accomplished if W. S. Woods, the bank's president, hadn't come to the rescue. Day after day there were meetings with the St. Louis representatives, D. R. Francis, J. Sheppard Smith, Theodore Hemmelman, jr., and others, and time after time it was Dr. Woods who came to the front. It is safe now to say that this man has nearly 1½ millions in the reorganized bank. He put up $850,000 in cash and guaranteed in addition $398,000 in notes.

Before he would allow the bank to reopen the comptroller insisted that the directors ar stockholders must take out a cattle ranch and a coffee plantation in Mexico valued at $600,000, certain bonds and notes for $220,000 and other paper put in at $50,000. All of these items were taken by Dr. Woods alone for $870,000. A real estate syndicate was formed to take out all the real estate except the property at Tenth and Walnut streets at $400,000. In this syndicate Kansas City men put up all except $113,000 which came from the St. Louis crowd. The comptroller demanded also that the bank must take out ½ million dollars' worth of Commerce building bonds and W. A. Rule, former cashier, sold all of them at par. This made a total of 1¾ millions all of which, except $113,000, was put up by or provided through Kansas City.

STOCK AT $110 A SHARE.

In addition to this there was 1 million in new capital stock which sold for $110 a share producing $1,100,000, or a total of $2,870,000 new money for the bank. The old capital stock of 1 million dollars was unimpaired.

The bank resumes under the most favorable conditions. For sentimental reasons it was hoped the new sixteen-story building at Tenth and Walnut streets would be ready for the opening, but human energy was not equal to the demand. The workmen have not been able to get the banking rooms ready, and rather than have further delay the directors and officers decided to defy superstition and start again just where they quit. It will be for only two or three weeks, anyway, a time that might mean little to the bank, but much to the public, and after that the bank will move to its new home.

The history of the National Bank of Commerce began in 1865 with the organization of the Kansas City Savings association with a paid up capital of $10,000. It was the only bank in Kansas City that did not close its doors in the panic of 1873. The Bank of Commerce was organized in 1882 and took over the Kansas City Savings association, with Dr. W. S. Woods as president. Dr. Woods then was a member of the dry goods firm of Grimes, Woods, LaForce & Co.

CAPITAL $200,000 IN 1882.

The bank's capital in 1882 was $200,000. In 1887 this was increased to 1 million dollars and the name was changed to the National Bank of Commerce. The Kansas City Savings association began operations at the southwest corner of Fourth and Delaware streets. It was at Sixth and Delaware when it became the Bank of Commerce. In May, 1897, the bank absorbed the Metropolitan National bank and moved into its quarters in the New York Life building. The Midland National bank was taken over in July, 1897.

NO LOCKOUT IN OKLAHOMA.

The Story Denied in Official Circles of the New State Miners.

GUTHRIE, OK., March 28.—Peter Hanraty, state inspector of mines, and for years a working miner in the McAlester coal fields, denied to-day the accuracy of a newspaper assertion by J. Luther Langston, secretary of the Oklahoma Federation of Labor, that there would be a lockout in the coal mining region of the state, etc.

"Langston presumes to say," said Hanraty, "that the miners are willing to sign up a scale contract at last year's scale. I wish to say that neither Mr. Langston nor any other man is in possession of any knowledge on this question that would warrant such an announcement. The miners and operators generally meet previous to the expiration of the contract and in convention say what the future scale rate is to be. A convention for this purpose will convene in Kansas City March 30, and whether a scale will be signed at last year's rate or at any rate is problematical, and no one will be able to tell what will be done until the convention adjourns.

"I had a conversation over long distance telephone to-day with Fred W. Holt, secretary and treasurer of District No. 21, United Mines Workers of America, at Fort Smith. He assured me that no person had any authority for making such a statement. The strike that is talked of so much in the newspapers has not occurred, and in my opinion will not occur."

FEW HERE ASK FOR CHARITY.

Nearly All Appeals for Aid to the Salvation Army Are From Transients.

Few applications for relief are now being made by persons who live in Kansas City, according to Adjutant Robert Cairnes of the Salvation army.

"The demand for relief is just as great, but the majority of the calls come from men who are merely passing through the city," Adjutant Cairnes said yesterday. "We are aiding many of this migratory class who say they are out of employment, but a large number of men who live here have returned to work and are getting along better than they have for three or four months."

The People Must Control.

From the Outlook.

It may not be expedient for the people, through their agents in the government, to undertake themselves the operation of public service systems, though it is doubtful if even the most corrupt and inefficient municipal government could make a worse failure of a rapid transit business than the managers of the Metropolitan system of New York have done. But it is not only expedient but imperative that the people who make public service systems possible by granting the franchises and providing the patronage should control the conditions under which the franchise privileges shall be enjoyed.

A BURGLAR OR A PREMIER?

ONE LONDON DOCTOR SAYS HIS PATIENT MIGHT HAVE BEEN EITHER.

C. Williams, Known as the Most Noted Cracksman in England, Had a Remarkable Experience and Was Reformed by the Physician.

Half the scientific societies in England are discussing the strange case of the "burglar who might have been prime minister," had his talents been rightly directed. It was brought to their attention a few weeks ago at a scientific meeting by Dr. Albert Wilson, a leading London brain specialist.

Dr. Wilson has known this ex-burglar for some time and has helped him to reform, but until now he has kept him guarded for his own study. Now that he has drawn his conclusions he has arranged to "present" his burglar at a series of scientific gatherings as an evidence of his theory that in many cases crime is an irresistible impulse, born in a man, which can be cured only by expert medical treatment.

There is no doubt about the skill of Dr. Wilson's burglar. In his day he was the most noted cracksman in England. Dozens of burglaries were attributed to him by the police and now that he has abandoned his profession and become a respectable member of society the ex-burglar is quite willing to admit with a smile that the police were generally right. So clever was he, however, that he was captured only twice and each time he was betrayed; once by a woman and on the second occasion by a man whom he had befriended.

The ex-burglar is now known as C. Williams. That is not the name he was born with, but it is the name under which he made his reputation in his chosen profession, and it is the name he has chosen to bear for the rest of his life.

A REMARKABLE BRAIN, HE SAID.

Dr. Wilson, in describing him to the scientific meeting a few weeks ago, declared that he was a man of remarkable brain power and that if he had turned his attention to politics he might have become prime minister and would certainly have attained cabinet rank. Had he entered the church, Dr. Wilson declares, he might have become a bishop, and had he taken to soldiering he would have commanded armies. Williams is a slender, well-built man of about 50 with hair just turning gray. He is not one of those who took to burglary from necessity. He was the son of a man of large income and was well educated. All the professions were open to him, but he took to burglary because he loved the excitement of the life and he practiced it as assiduously as the soldier or the clergyman practices his calling and with the same enthusiasm. He brought to its aid all the resources of science and a trained mind.

Williams's first burglary was committed when he was a boy in Birmingham and the story of how he came to take the first step in crime is interesting. In some way he made the acquaintance of a handsome young woman, the widow of a police inspector, who was employed at a leading jeweler's shop. His imagination was fired by the jewelry and he persuaded the young woman to procure the key of the shop for him and one night while she kept watch, using her knowledge of police habits and methods to assist him, he entered the shop and carried away nearly $20,000 worth of jewelry. He gave the young woman a valuable diamond ring, and a year later it was recognized and the woman, to save herself, betrayed him to the police and he was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude.

HOW HE PROVED "INNOCENCE."

Williams once heard of a jeweler who kept a cash box in a safe in his bedroom and after carefully studying the house he waited until he saw the man and his family leave for an evening visit. He then gained admission to an empty house a few doors away, climbed out on the roof and ran along the gutters, concealed by the high coping, until he reached the roof over the bedroom where the money was. He then cut a hole in the roof and in the ceiling, lowered himself through it and secured the cash box containing $750. He returned the way that he had come, but as he was leaving the empty house he noticed that a shred of cloth was torn from his coat and he reasoned correctly that it had been left attached to the broken laths where he had cut the hole through the ceiling.

Instead of risking capture by returning to remove this piece of evidence against him he stowed the money securely in his clothing and hurried round to the nearest police station, where he met the station detective whose duty it would be to investigate the crime. He invited the man out for a drink and then accompanied him to another part of the town on an investigation he was making. On the way he drew the detective's attention to his coat, telling him that it was torn on a nail in his room.

When he left the detective he hurried to his room, drove a nail into a position to correspond with the story he had told the detective and arranged a few threads of cloth carefully on the end of it, but not enough to identify the pattern. Then he burnt the coat in the fire and dressed himself in two suits of underwear and an extra waistcoat. An hour or so later his friend, the detective, came hurrying to see him.

"Where is that torn coat of yours?" he asked.

HOW HE "FOOLED" THE POLICE.

The detective swore and then Williams drew his attention to the nail. The detective eagerly collected the threads sticking to it and compared them with a piece of cloth he took from his pocket.

"There has been a burglary up the street," he said, "and this cloth came from the burglar's coat. It looks uncommonly like your coat."

"Why, so it does," said Williams. "When did the burglary take place?"

The detective told him and Williams innocently remarked that it must have been just at the time they were together, and the detective after a moment's reflection agreed that this was so. His suspicions were now lulled, but Williams was not content. He never showed the slightest sign that he knew he was suspected, and when his friend was leaving he suggested that he should go with him and look at the scene of the burglary. When they entered the room he at once commented on the smallness of the hole in the ceiling. "He must have been a very little chap who got through there," said Williams.

"Oh, you could get through," said the detective, his suspicions returning. "Try it." Williams drew up a table and swung himself up, but he stuck fast in the hole, thanks to the extra clothing with which he had equipped himself, and the detective's last suspicions were set at rest.

WHEN HE WAS CAUGHT.

It was in the West end that he met his Waterloo. He had entered a house and had just pocketed several jewels when what he describes as a "nasty little yelping terrier" woke up and roused the house. Williams made a dash for the door, but contrary to all precedent a policeman met him at the foot of the steps. He drew his revolver, firing as he ran, and hit the policeman in the leg. He continued to fire wildly with the idea of frightening the police reinforcements which came up and one of his shots struck a postman who was passing and killed him.

Williams escaped and for six months the police scoured England from one end to the other for him. Then he was betrayed by a man he had befriended and who was tempted by the reward of $2,000 which was offered for his capture. He was tried and sentenced to imprisonment for his natural life.

It must be explained that there are two kinds of life sentences in England. The ordinary life sentence is always commuted after twenty years, but Williams is the only "natural lifer" who has ever emerged from the prison gates alive, and the story of how he accomplished his release is a tribute to his masterly ingenuity. He was sentenced in 1881, and for eighteen years he watched with unceasing patience for his opportunity to secure release. It came when he was transferred to Dartmoor prison and while he was employed on some work outside the prison he got a supply of a drug which is a powerful heart depressant, but which leaves little trace which can be detected by the doctors. As soon as he returned to his cell he took a dose of it and sent for the prison doctor who at once ordered his removal to the infirmary. Williams kept this up for two years in spite of the most careful watching by the prison authorities, and in the meantime he petitioned for a pardon on the ground of ill health.

Twice his petition was refused, but his health continued to cause alarm and the prison doctors said he could not live another year. At last he was informed that he had been pardoned and might "go home to die." He left the prison and in a few months he was as healthy as he had ever been.

The Confederacy's Choice for President Was Unanimous.

"You-all caint 'lect two Gawge Wash-in'tons and Marse Lincum done 'lected."

This expressed the Southern negro's conception of the first presidential election of the Confederate States of America. A few of the "poor whites" were almost as foggy in their ideas of what was expected of them, but the rest of the electors turned out and voted for Jefferson Davis and Alexander Stephens as a patriotic duty. John N. Southern, an attorney of Independence, Mo., voted for Jefferson Davis in the first presidential election of the Confederacy in November, 1861.

ONE OF THE BALLOTS USED IN THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION HELD IN THE CONFEDERATE STATES, WHEN JEFFERSON DAVIS HAD NO OPPOSITION FOR THE OFFICE OF CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

"It was a mighty solemn occasion for us," said Mr. Southern recently. "There was only one ticket in the field, the Southern Rights ticket, but we voted to show our patriotism and good citizenship. Planters drove over almost impassable roads or came on horseback across country when the highways were deep with mud and water. Everyone knew Mr. Davis would be elected even if only a few voted, but all day long the city merchants and the country planters lined up at the polls and cast straight tickets with much gravity. It was the only election I ever saw where there were no party workers hustling and no heads of tickets scratched. A few men inserted the name of a neighbor or dear friend as a courtesy vote, but even these changes were mighty scarce and were confined to the less important offices.

"Around the polls in many places bands played lively airs. We had not yet seized upon 'Dixie' all over the South as our national air, but several bands played 'Maryland, My Maryland,' and with every verse ending 'she'll come, she'll come' the crowd cheered.

"At one polling place further south than my own state of Tennessee, a number of descendants of French settlers sang the 'Marseillaise' in French and gave three good American cheers after it. The war then wasn't the terrible reality it became to them later. We thought the war would be over in a few months and voted Mr. Davis into the Presidential chair with confidence in his being able to fill his six-year term. We shared the sentiment of Mr. Davis when he wrote in his inaugural address:

> It is joyous, in the midst of perilous times, to look around upon a people united in heart, where one purpose of high resolve animates and actuates the whole, where the sacrifices to be made are not weighed in the balance against honor and right and liberty and equality. Obstacles may retard—they long cannot prevent—the progress of a movement sanctioned by its justice, and sustained by a virtuous people.

"Mr Davis had already been President since February 18. He had been elected by a convention of representatives of six states, but had not been voted on by the people. The states represented in the convention—which met in Montgomery, Ala., and elected Mr. Davis, were Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida.

"W. L. Aikin, an elector on the Tennessee ticket I voted, afterward became colonel of the Fifty-ninth Tennessee regiment, my own organization and that of Captain David Mastin of Kansas City."

JAPANESE STUDY WHALING.

From the Boston Post.

New Bedford—New Bedford whalers and whalemen received a farewell visit this week from Kaju Nakamura, the bright young Japanese, who first came to this city some eight years ago to study the whaling industry for the Japanese government.

The American whalers had been to Japanese waters for many years, and a trip that way meant a cruise in the Japan and Ochotsk seas after the valuable bone-bearing whales, the bowheads, which these later days are reckoned as worth $10,000 each.

The whalers would often recruit ship in the Japanese ports in the north part of the island, and some of the brighter of the government officials, when the nation got on its feet so that it could branch out into important industries, first thought of the whaling industry, and Nakamura was sent to this country to get points.

Nakamura, when he first came here, went to see Frank E. Brown, the bomb-gun and lance maker, and from Mr. Brown he secured much valuable advice. Mr. Brown is the only maker of the bomb lance in the world and his shop was a place where Nakamura made his headquarters while he studied the New Bedford whalers during the first year of his stay in this country.

He was a particularly bright pupil and he picked up much valuable information about the whaling industry. Soon Mr. Brown began to receive orders from the Japanese government for his whaling implements.

Formerly the Japanese had been trying whaling with the Norwegian method, fitting ou small vessels and going out and shooting the animals and taking a chance of getting them if they remained on top of water. After Nakamura's visit to this city the Japanese government changed its style of whaling and tried the American method of lancing the whale and fighting it to the death. This required more skill and the crews had to be trained in this new way of catching whales, but with the valuable information secured by Nakamura and others who were sent here by the Japanese, the necessary amount of information was secured and the style of whaling changed. The result was that the whalers fitted out in Japan now are doing well under the American ideas, and the returns show a great increase of whale products over the old Norwegian style.

It is reported that Nakamura is going back to his native country to manage a large whaling firm which will fit out steam whalers on the plan adopted by those who send steamers to the Arctic ocean, and that several fine steamers will be built for his firm.

THIS PIANO BOX IS THE HOME OF AN ECCENTRIC MISSOURIAN.

Probably the oddest habitation in Missouri is the piano-box home of Franz Mendel, an aged German resident of St. Louis county. This queer dwelling is the regulation upright piano box laid flat on the side which corresponds to the back of the piano and supported on large stones which raise it about ten inches from the ground. The entire outside of the "house" is covered with sheets of asbestos paper and the top or "roof" has an additional covering of tar paper. The slanting portion of the box is hinged to the straight section, forming a sort of horizontal door, and the joint thus made is covered with a double thickness of asbestos and tar paper to prevent any rain or snow from entering the box.

The interior walls are covered with stout wrapping paper, and the whole structure is absolutely impervious to dampness. A shelf runs across the side which would be the bottom of the piano and this shelf is well padded with quilts and blankets and forms a very comfortable bed for the occupant. Another and smaller shelf near the front serves as a cupboard for a stock of provisions. The stove, cooking utensils and water barrel are outside, and the place has the appearance of a temporary camp of some "knight of the road."

Mendel owns the land upon which the piano box stands and this tiny house is all the home he has. A four room cottage formerly stood on this land and the old man lived very comfortably before the accident which destroyed it.

Tramps broke into his cottage one night while Mendel was in St. Louis on a visit to his daughter and accidentally set fire to the place. When the owner returned the next morning he found his home in ashes. Being too poor to build another house and unwilling to live anywhere else he bought the piano box and set it up on the site of his former home, and has since lived in it as snug as a bug in a rug. His neighbors feared that he would suffer during the winter, but he declares that he has been as comfortable all the time as he ever was in the old cottage, and the only thing he lacks is room to walk about under shelter when it rains. In bad weather he is compelled to spend the time on his bunk or be exposed to the weather outside his queer house.

Mendel is 83 years old, but vigorous and active. He chops his own firewood, carries water every day from the brook about two hundred yards away, and does all the work around his "place" as well as a much younger man could do it.

His daughter has repeatedly tried to induce him to abandon his uncomfortable quarters and live with her, but he prefers the country and its discomforts to anything the city could offer him, he declares.

His unique house is one of the sights of the North and South road, and motorists and other travelers along that road often stop and call upon him and learn all about his remarkable way of living. He is always very courteous to visitors, but will accept nothing in the way of a present from them except an occasional cigar or pouch of tobacco.

The New Hospital Opens Monday

Dr. Eastman's Sanitarium Is Finally Completed. It Will Be Opened With a Large Public Reception To-Morrow. Diseases of Women Will Be the Specialty. General Hospitals Will Now Be Relieved.

The initial reception of the public at the Eastman Sanitarium for Women will occur to-morrow, Monday, April 20. The hours are from 1 to 6 and from 7 to 9. Not only physicians and the personal friends of Dr. B. L. Eastman are invited but the general public as well will be received and allowed to go through the entire building.

The Sanitarium is located at 1316 Harrison street. Considerable time has been given to remodeling the institution for hospital purposes, but finally it is completed, and when the reception time comes not a detail will be lacking.

The Eastman Sanitarium for Women is a brilliant addition to Kansas City's splendid institutions for the care of the sick. It supplies a special sanitarium, of which the city has felt the need many a year—one in which all the disagreeable features of a general hospital can be eliminated, while retaining everything in hospital methods which would add to the comfort and safety of patients and surround them with the sympathetic care and attentions of a home.

In the metropolises everywhere are fever hospitals, eye hospitals, general hospitals, sanataria for the nervous, etc., and if special institutions are necessary for good results in these less important cases, how infinitely greater is the need for a special sanitarium for women's diseases!

This is the age of specialism in all things, and its development marks the widening of the different fields of human activity. To-day no physician pretends to an accurate knowledge of all the different departments of medicine, and the successful practice of medicine and surgery is of necessity made up of individuals who have mastered a single field. When a man limits his work to one particular branch of science or business, giving all his time, his energy and his thought to that work, he must know more of his subject than the man who attempts to spread out over a dozen different things.

This is especially true of women's diseases, for the ills and ailments which affect this sex differ from all others in causation, development and requirements of treatment.

EXTERIOR AND INTERIOR VIEWS OF THE NEW SANITARIUM

The founding of this institution is the result of experience gained in fifteen years of practice, the last ten being devoted to women's diseases alone. During all these years the founding of this sanitarium has been continually in mind. In 1897 Dr. Eastman became associated in the management of the Medico-Chirurgical college, now a part of Kansas university, and was for some time its vice president. He had charge of the women's dispensary of the college and later became its Professor of Women's Diseases. In 1903 he was elected adjunct Professor of Diseases of Women in the University Medical college, and a year later became Professor of this branch, with entire charge of the dispensary and college work. His work there chiefly was teaching, lecturing, operating before the classes, with occasional operations at the city hospital. Dr. Eastman is a graduate of Northwestern university medical school of Chicago, with post-graduate courses at the leading colleges in London and Berlin.

The Eastman Sanitarium for Women is designed after the most advanced ideas known in the hospital, medical and surgical world. There are three floors. The first includes reception rooms, offices, consultation rooms, room for electrical appliances, dining room, kitchen, etc. The second floor is used for bedrooms and an operating room. The third floor contains sleeping apartments for nurses. The hospital is modern to a degree. The rooms are pleasant and large.

Dr. Eastman enters upon his new field encouraged by the good wishes of the medical fraternity and the many friends he has made during his practice in Kansas City. The future of his enterprise may be said to be assured. Its growth and success will be noted by everyone with delight.

CONTINUOUS Advertising is what makes your name familiar and identifies it with your business. Continuous—never turning your back to give the other fellow a chance when you're not looking. Take an advertisement like this:

BURKE'S BEDSPRINGS
Like Truth Will Rise Again.
Buoyant, Durable, Inexpensive.

Inserted in The Star, every morning, every evening and every Sunday for one year, that announcement would appear more than

Ninety Million Times

Your monthly bill would be $47.01 and everybody in town would think of "Burke's" every time they thought of bedsprings. But if you advertise only occasionally, or only evenings, or mornings or Sundays, somebody else may share in the benefit of your expenditure by chancing to be in when you are out. The householder whom you have been exhorting, once a day or once a week for months, and who at last needs bedsprings, may find instead of your announcement, one like this:

MURPHY'S MATTRESSES
Easy as a Clear Conscience.
Elastic, Indestructible, Cheap.

And Murphy might reap where Burke had sown. The thing is, to keep your lamp trimmed and burning. Every morning, every evening, every Sunday.

To extend the publicity field to cover the whole of Kansas City's commercial territory it is necessary only to add The Weekly Star. Morning, Evening, Sunday and Weekly, the little advertisement in one year would in all, be published a cost of $62.13 a month. Persistency wins

One Hundred and Ten Million Times

FRANKLYN FYLES CHATS ABOUT PLAYS & THE PEOPLE APPEARING IN THEM

NEW YORK, April 17.—If you haven't read "Don Quixote" since you were a boy or a girl, you may have forgotten the merely incidental loves of Cardenio and Lucinda, Fernando and Dorothea, and remember only the celebrated misadventures of the daft amateur knight and his squire, Sancho Panzo. At the outset of the new drama made from the old book for Edward H. Sothern, the two couples of lovers awake no recollections; but when Quixote rides in on horseback, and Sancho on donkey-back they are recognized as familiar acquaintances. The mare Rosanante, to be sure, is not lean and lame, as she used to be, but so mettled that she has to be led into the inn yard where the first quarter of the play has been located. The donkey, though, makes no bother. For a dependable actor on hoofs, the sire of mules is a dependable creature. He will stay where he is put, and move nothing else than his ears; but a horse is always restively disturbing. Even if Sothern were to borrow a mare from the Bergh agents for the role of Rosanante, probably she might uproot a tree by a balk, push the garden wall away, jostle the gatepost, and get more attention than the star rider. That was the way it went on the opening night; and unless Sothern uses every evening a beast ready to die the next morning, he will have to dope the healthy one or continue to have his entrance spoiled.

This dramatization of "Don Quixote" is no casual or cheap experiment; it is studied and costly; and it will add another carload of scenery and costumes to Sothern's touring train; for, while it won't continue long in any one place, it surely will be carried in his repertory. So much of Cervantes's book has been put into it that, although it starts at a quarter to 8, it doesn't stop until a quarter to midnight's 12. Even at that, the mad knight errant, who sets out to right wrongs by deeds of valor, is not seen in his charge on rushing armies of sheep, nor in his cutting off the heads of giants that are skins full of blood-red wine, and those exploits are related to the audience, being impossible of exhibition. Quixote's still more celebrated battle with windmills is not in the play at all, even hearsay, and in that omission has not Kester, maker of the play, missed a chance to triumph in theatric excitement? Sothern submits to much mussing up and tumbling around in the mock mishaps, and I can't think he would shrink at being lifted and dropped by a windmill's arm. For very highly artistic of design is the actor in this classical burlesque of romantic knighthood, and too deeply in earnest to dread physical bumps or aspects of indignity. During three acts he is fighting most of the time with tormentors, whom his crazed fancy turns into deadly foes; usually in these encounters he is buffeted roughly; and at the third drop of the curtain, exhausted by a combat with a bogus knight, hurt in body and tortured in mind, he is thrown into a wooden cage, lifted on his captor's shoulders and carried away, crouching on all fours like a beast, wrenching at the bars and making unhuman outcries.

In one way "Quixote" is a problem play; it raises the question whether to laugh at its hero or to weep; but Sothern wishes his audience to take him seriously and let all the laughing be done on the stage, where women and girls are as merry a chorus as any musical farce ever had, with levity that doesn't stop at dental grins, but is noisy with all the notes known to laughter, from chuckle to scream; and none of the pony ballets is more violent with dances than these supernumeraries are in helping the men to torment the lunatic. To me stage fun evolved from the distresses of lunacy is never else than sad. Sothern speaks Quixote's sage dissertations as though they were Hamlet's soliloquies, while in dignity and behavior under the most ludicrous circumstances he is is like himself as Malvolio. The only other Quixote even seen on the American stage was Irving's; and the tall, spare Englishman easily realized not only the "knight of the rueful countenance," but as well the "knight of the sad figure." Sothern repeats the phrase descriptive of the figure many times, although his shortness and thickness forbids him to look gaunt, and he omits the one about a woful countenance, although he paints his face into a portrait of woe.

You have often been sorry to see pictures in the books of, say, Dickens and Thackeray, that don't gee with your imagination of the characters; and I won't except even Cruikshank's illustrations of Dickens, of Genani's of Cervantes; but nothing remains in my dramatic memory more vividly satisfactory than Irving's Don Quixote patroling around the pump of the La Mancha inn to repel enemies of his fanciedly adorable lady love, Dulcinea del Tobosco—who, you may recall, is a country maiden unaware of him. The Sothern long play has in its first act this scene from the Irving short one, and it enables me to tell you that, where Irving turned himself by a little more than a change of clothes into the Spanish monomaniac, Sothern must spend an hour before each performance, painting, wigging and trickily clothing his width and shortness to look like narrowness and length. Sothern takes on, also, more of characterization than Irving did, for Irving's Quixote was no more than the caricature Cervantes created; but Sothern depicts clearly and strongly the mentality of a cultured gentleman with a fine mind disordered. The incidents chosen from the book for the play are the vigil at the pump, the fight in the inn, the combat with the Knight of the Silver Moon, the mock elevation of Sancho to a governorship, and the death of Quixote with sanity restored.

Sothern is his own stage director, and he does odd things in this play. He keeps it dim throughout. He doesn't let the sun shine by day in LaMancha nor the moon by night. He has a light thrown on his own face in a degree varying from a barely perceptible gleam to a mild illumination, but it is never bright even in his own visage, and as to the other folk, the women may as well be ugly as pretty, except when the spotlight hits them in missing the boss. Its operator is a sharpshooter, though, and seldom aims wide of the mark. Another singularity is that in the last act no one save Quixote and Sancho speaks above a whisper. The Don has been brought home bruised in body and broken in spirit. The delusion that he is a knight errant passes away in a dream, wherein vague shapes and incoherent voices return to him from his misadventures. These things are made visible and audible very weirdly, with the best craft of the modern stage. The fun is past. The chorus of laughers is gone. The dear old gentleman's dementia is over. So is his strength. The members of his household tiptoe into and out of the room, putter around him, talk to him and to one another; but all of it is whispered, only the make-believe knight and his squire speak out so as to be understood. A shaft of light pierces the darkness and falls on Quixote's wan face. Thus a death scene is made to haunt the beholder after he quits the theater.

Busy Izzy and Happy Hooligan. The names may strike you vaguely as familiar, for they have been printed big in posters these half dozen years. If you frequent the lower price theaters, you know that Izzy, who is busy, is a Jew, and that the Hooligan, who is happy, isn't an Irishman, but a typical American tramp. If it further chances that you keep aware of the show business, I need not tell you that Izzy and Hooligan are not coupled in popularity with the actors who impersonate them. That means a lesson for you if you have money to multiply by commercializing dramatic art. Joseph K. Emmet died wealthy because he had connected his name with a series of "Fritz" plays. Denman Thompson and Neil Burgess will die with their names on the welcome doormats of "The Old Homestead" and "The County Fair." But it is a hundred to one that you can't, off hand, name the actors of "Busy Izzy" and "Happy Hooligan;" and, after this season's new plays bearing those titles, I can't tell you who the authors are, as the programmes don't, and I have no inside information.

The point I am driving at is that these two farcical characters, of anonymous authorship, and not associated with any fame of their comedians, are making money for their owners in annual new versions. The fact is incidental that a George Sidney is Izzy now, and that an Eddie de Noyes is Hooligan; for last season they may have been a Smith and a Brown; next season they may be a Jones and a Robinson; for the characters are tpyed big, and the actors very small, in all the printing. Therefore, Sidney may be bounced, and De Noyes fired, without the loss of Izzy or Hooligan; for a day's search along Broadway would discover comedians able to keep the Jew and the tramp effectually alive.

It was a shrewd device in the exploitation of Gus and Max Rodgers to name their first play "The Rodgers Brothers in Wall Street," and change to another place for each subsequent season; for it wasn't possible to mention the comedians without their comedy or the comedy without its comedians. The Rodgerses are geniuses, however, at least to the extent of being hard to keep at work together; but the two firms who manage "Busy Izzy" and "Happy Hooligan" practice the same sort of self-advertising method without the distration of dealing with any erratic phases of genius. They entitle the plays for 1908 "Busy Izzy's Boodle" and "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World," and both are good examples of a current form of entertainment graded in between the upper extravaganza of musical comedy, or comic opera, and the lower extravaganza of the burlesque troupes.

Cultivators in this part of the theatrical farm are talking of an urgent need of seed of a novelty crop, but as yet there is no sign of a break away from the familiar growths. "Busy Izzy's Boodle" begins with the usual disclosure of its full force of femininity. Izzy's boodle is the cash assets of a bank and when the bank breaks ten girls start a run on it. They don't appear depressed by their loss, but sing and dance over it with a gaiety not often seen in financial panics. Opera glasses are not used much at the theaters where this play is presented, so rather pretty ten faces answer the purpose just about as well as positive beauty; and the precision of uniformity in their figures is remarkable. The agencies nowadays match up showgirls as exactly as the horse marts do four-in-hands.

"Where is your mother now?" a chorus lady was asked.

"She's with me in the 'Trol Lolla Troupe,'" was the reply.

"And your sister?"

"She, too."

"And your daughter?"

"She also. Our measurements are all the same, you know. We are the four Gibson girls of the layout."

In the Izzy layout of Gibsonese girls all of them may be from one family. There isn't a variation of half an inch in height, and the similarity of shape is like peas in a pod, or say, matches in a box, for these ten girls are of the tall, slim, straight type. In their entry they wear the long skirts and big hats of fashionable toilets for an afternoon outing, and they come into Izzy's bank with the toppy manner of smart belles at a reception. A second batch of six smaller depositors are more agitative. They wear short frocks, swish the skirts saucily and behave like the cavorting "pony" ballet, without which no extravaganza would be regarded as completely equipped. The ten fillies are led by the prima donna of the company. The pace for the six ponies is set by the soubrette.

Busy Izzy is no variant of the comic stage Israelite, and his companions include those familiars, the bigosh rural constable doing detective duty, the begorra Irish janitor butting in whenever the fun needs a jolt, and the bedamn office boy to make a contortive entrance or exit whenever the activity lags.

And the sliding stairway is there, too. You know it well—the stairs that change to a smooth surface, down which the victim toboggans with a bump at the bottom. Here it is on shipboard, and leads from a promenade deck up to a captain's bridge, where the play's oddest showing of a girl is made. She goes up there to view a gale, and as she gazes through a telescope at the tossing billows far away, all the men in the play gather on the deck below, one after another, to gaze up at her lingerie which, like seafoam, is flung up wildly by the blast. Ah, but the mechanisms of the modern stage do indeed work wonders for dramatic art.

Premonition of a change in farces of song and dance is not discernable in "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World." The author is not exposed. Perhaps there isn't any. Maybe it was made by assembling Eddie De Noyes's tramp, Dave Whitely's German and Joe J. Sullivan's Irishman, along with several other fixed and unalterable personations, telling them to go as they pleased at the first rehearsal, and thereafter framing up their stuff into an actable shape.

PHILADELPHIA TEXTILE SCHOOL

It Compares Favorably With the Textile Schools of England and Germany.

From the Philadelphia North American.

Full of interest to the investigator, as well as to the ordinary citizen, because of the prominent part it plays in making Philadelphia one of the great textile centers of the world, is the Philadelphia Textile school. Few of the residents of this city know much about it, and yet for more than twenty years it has been quietly doing its work of turning out trained workers for high and low positions in the mills, its way of adding to the prosperity of Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia Textile school, at Broad and Pine streets, as a department of the School of Industrial Art had its inception in the year 1884, with the organization of classes in general fabric design, weaving, etc., and has periodically added to its course of study such subjects as chemistry and dyeing, wool, worsted and cotton spinning, cloth finishing, knitting, and is keeping abreast of the times by the inclusion into its work of the most approved methods as they present themselves.

In the field of trade instruction the Philadelphia school has fifteen or twenty years' start over similar schools in this country. It numbers among its alumni and undergraduate body representatives from every state in the Union, European countries and even the Far East.

While the school aims at technical education in its broadest sense, its methods are not confined to a theoretical consideration of the manufacturing and other problems of the industry, but to a practical exemplification as well. It is said that the local school has the best equipped laboratories for demonstration, experiment and exercise in America, and compares favorably with the older technical schools of England, Germany and France.

Textile design, color, harmony and the very important features of industrial chemistry in conjunction with dyeing have their separate lecture rooms and laboratories, and in fact, every feature that could be conceived within the range of textile education is grouped in such a way that a three-year regular course, studiously pursued, should fit the student for the higher positions in the mill, dyehouse, weave room or sales office.

An evening department, with nominal fees, for the benefit of those who are employed during the day, endeavors by offering practically the same work to supply the wants of a class who would otherwise be deprived of its opportunities.

Because "atmospheric" environment is a helpful thing, the school will be moved nearer the Kensington district in the near future.

Identified with the school, in addition to a staff of specially qualified and thoroughly experienced instructors, is an advisory committee, composed of some of the most prominent manufacturers and merchants.

The president of the institution, Theodore C. Search, is well known in industrial and educational circles. The governor of the state and the mayor of the city are ex-officio members of its board of government.

This Week at the Theaters

A PLAY full of new ideas of thought, influence and power of personality is Augustus Thomas's drama, "The Witching Hour," which will be seen at the Willis Wood this week. It is a play to make playgoers think, but above all it is a thoroughly clever and stirring drama. Mr. Thomas wove the lives of three generations—their loves, their prejudices and their peculiarities—into this work which has for its chief figure a resolute, clear-brained gambler, Jack Brookfield, who not only reforms his own character but makes his dynamic power of thought work the redemption and betterment of all around him. William Morris is playing as Jack Brookfield and Amelia Gardner as the sorrowing mother. The engagement of "The Witching Hour" is for the six days beginning to-morrow night.

The Barker Stock company at the Shubert theater has a fine bill for this week in James Matthew Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton," a pleasant satire on the social ideas of the English aristocracy. By way of further attractiveness the company will have Henry Kolker in the part of the polished butler. Mr. Kolker was here last January as leading man for Bertha Kalich in "Marta of the Lowlands." Previous to his three seasons with Miss Kalich he was with the companies of Mary Mannering, Ada Rehan and other stars. In the Barrie satire Miss Neilson will have the role of Lady Mary, Wallace Worsley that of the Hon. Ernest Woolley, Reginald Travers the Earl of Loam, Ida Lewis the Countess of Brocklehurst and Aileen Flaven the ingenue part of Tweeney.

Della Fox holds the honor position on the bill at the Orpheum. Miss Fox has enjoyed an enviable position in the world of music many years, having starred with her own company, as well as having been associated with such comic opera favorites as De Wolf Hopper, Jefferson De Angelis and Lillian Russell. Her greatest success was with De Wolf Hopper in the days when "Wang" was new. Nellie Florede, assisted by six English maidens, will present a unique singing and dancing act, the effect of which will be heightened with electrical and mechanical devices. The Pantzer trio have an interesting acrobatic act entitled "A Gymnast's Parlor Entertainment." James Devlin and Mae Ellwood will appear in an amusing comedy playlet, "The Girl From Yonkers." Macart's trained monkeys are among the best in vaudeville. Bernie and Stella, singers and dancers; the original Bootblack quartet and pictures by the kinodrome complete the bill.

"Buster Brown," the musical comedy founded upon the cartoons of Outcault, will be the attraction at the Grand all of this week. Master Rice is this season's Buster, and Jack Bell still is playing as Tige, Buster's inseparable companion. New music has been added to the show since its last visit.

The Woodward Stock company opened a new season at the Auditorium last night in Arthur Wing Pinero's drama, "His House in Order," presented here last season by John Drew. "His House in Order" will be the bill for the remainder of the week. Next week the Woodward players will put on "The Bishop's Carriage," an adaptation from the book of the same name.

Lillian Mortimer's last drama, "Bunco In Arizona," with the author in the cast, will be at the Gilliss the seven days beginning this afternoon. "Bunco In Arizona" is supposed to picture certain phases of life in the territory after which the play was named. Indians are used in two of the scenes. Next week the Gilliss will have "The Cowpuncher," a melodrama by John A. Preston.

The Bohemian Burlesque company will come to the Century theater this afternoon in a two-act musical comedy, "The Summer Time," with a vaudeville bill as an extra feature.

The Trans-Atlantic Burlesquers are said to have a lively show for the week at the Majestic. Chief among the members of the company are Lizzie Freligh, the Kalinowski brothers, European acrobats; Norma Bell and her musical ponies; a trio consisting of William Sharkey, James Whitley and Frank Killion; Fitzgerald and Quinn, and the De Graff sisters.

STABLE PRICES FOR WHEAT

Rains in the West Remove the Only Menace to a Big Yield This Year, but Old Wheat Supplies Are Light—A Dull Trade in Corn.

Elements of strength developed in the wheat market last week that more than offset the depressing influence of favorable crop news and closing prices yesterday were slightly higher than a week ago. The two-months' drought in large parts of Kansas and Nebraska has been relieved in time to prevent serious damage to the wheat in those sections and the present prospects are for a winter wheat crop as large as was ever raised. Moreover, the spring wheat seeding is going on under favorable conditions. Therefore, for at least several weeks, no incentive to advance wheat prices will come from the wheat fields, except for the remote chance of too much rain in some sections.

Of course, the crop is not "made" yet, and in view of the probable near exhaustion of old wheat reserves before a new crop moves, many traders are inclined to the view that prices for July and September wheat are low enough for the present.

SMALL RECEIPTS OF WHEAT.

Renewed attention has been centered on last year's crop deficiencies by the statistics of the grain movement. Receipts at primary markets last week were only about a third as large as a year ago. The deficiency is especially notable in the Northwest, where the week's receipts were only 835 cars, compared with 3,440 cars a year ago, and 1,294 cars two years ago, though they were slightly larger than three years ago. A continuation of smal receipts will result in a rapid depletion of the stocks at market centers and furnish an effective bulwark against the depressing influence of the favorable crop prospects.

The visible supply statement to-morrow should show a decrease of over a million bushels, compared with an increase of 812,000 bushels a year ago. At the two Northwest cities stocks decreased 300,000 bushels last week; they increased 1,502,000 bushels a year ago. At Kansas City there was a decrease last week of about 200,000 bushels; a year ago the decrease was 83,000 bushels, and stocks then were about three times what they are now.

LESS WHEAT FROM ARGENTINA.

In Europe, as well as in this country, the question of available supplies of old wheat for the remainder of the year has come up again owing to the falling off in Argentina shipments. They were only 3,728,000 bushels last week, compared with 6,048,000 bushels in the preceding week, and 5,192,000 bushels a year ago. Since January 1 Argentina has shipped 80 million bushels of wheat, compared with 53 million bushels in the corresponding time last year. The excess of shipments up to date represents just about the full excess of the exportable surplus over that of last year, so that moderate shipments are to be expected from Argentina during the remainder of the season, though an occasional week of large shipments may be expected. The estimated world's shipments this week are about 7 million bushels, compared with 12,656,000 bushels a year ago. Of course, it is not to be forgotten that stocks of wheat in Europe and afloat are fairly liberal, exceeding last year's at this time by about 13 million bushels, affording a good margin to make up for deficient weekly shipments. But the European view, as reflected by Broomhall, is that importing countries will need all the wheat they are likely to get in the next three months. The margin between July prices here and in Europe is so wide now that some export business for forward shipment may be expected any time.

A FIGHTING CHANCE FOR BOTH SIDES.

In short, prices now seem to be on "fighting ground" with an interesting contest likely to be waged over the course of prices in the immediate future.

The indications are that there is a large concentrated holding of Chicago May wheat that is likely to cause discomfort to "shorts" in that delivery, though it is difficult to see what protection the holders of May wheat have against ultimate loss, with the July price at nearly 7 cents discount. Chicago has 7½ million bushels of wheat, which seems to be more than can be disposed of to millers before the new crop becomes available. The owners of wheat in Kansas City elevators are disposing of it at a rate that will clean up the entire supply before the end of June, and the Northwest stocks, also are not excessive.

HIGH CORN RESTRICTS TRADE.

The corn market has developed a drooping tendency in the last few days, owing to increasing offerings from the country. On Monday a new high price for the season was made for Chicago May corn—68¾c—but it was down 2c from that figure yesterday. Speculative trade was small. Reports early in the week were exceedingly light, but an increased movement to Chicago has started from Illinois. The Chicago stocks of corn are about 5½ million bushels—almost as large as a year ago. The high prices make the demand of a hand-to-mouth character. Apparently it will not take much of a sustained increase in receipts to cause some setback in prices.

The range of prices for the active grain futures last week and the close Saturday, with comparisons, are here shown:

LOCAL SECURITIES.

Demand for Good Bonds Continues—Fair Trade in Stocks.

Business in local securities has been faily large in the past week. The demand for high grade bonds continues active. A block of $50,000 of 5 per cent Joplin, Mo., bonds was bought by a Kansas City company and is on the market at about 103¾. Street Railway bonds are selling readily, but there is only an occasional trade in the stocks. Cement shares meet with fair demand. Some sales of Kansas Natural Gas stock at 45 and 46 were made and Central Coal and Coke stock continues to meet with some demand at firm prices. Interest in National Bank of Commerce stock has diminished after the recent activity in it. Sales were made at 130 to 133½. Ten shares of New England National bank stock sold at 315.

EUROPEAN WHEAT CONDITIONS.

Prospects Have Improved, but the Acreage Is Short.

"The advent of spring finds the important crops of Europe much more promising than was anticipated in view of the generally unsatisfactory conditions under which they were sown," says the foreign agent of the United States Agricultural department, under date of London, March 28.

"While the effect of the winter has still to receive full official investigation, the weight of evidence submitted by local experts, supplemented by such official reports as have appeared, points clearly to the conclusion that in the great grain-producing countries of Eastern Europe (including Hungary and Russia) where conditions at the completion of the autumn were most discouraging, a remarkable improvement in crop prospects has taken place.

"In Roumania, Bulgaria and Turkey the condition of the winter wheat crops is described as favorable; in Hungary as satisfactory, and in Russia as much better than anticipated, though still far from satisfactory. Winter wheat, relative to other crops, is by no means so important in Russia as in the other states named, and the undoubtedly inadequeate winter crop may be counterbalanced by increased sowings of spring wheat. Spain and Italy report winter crops satisfactory.

"The northwestern countries, on the contrary, are less fortunate. Excessive rain in Germany, Great Britain and France has caused disapointment, and the present outlook, while not uniformly unsatisfactory, is less favorable than was expected a month or two ago. The tendency has been in the direction of a general equalization of crop conditions throughout Europe, the under average conditions in Russia, especially in the case of wheat, being in a manner offset by over average in the crops of Spain, Roumania, Bulgaria and Turkey.

"It is becoming clearer that a serious contraction in the area under winter grain took place last fall. A recent official estimate shows that the acreage of winter wheat in Roumania is less than that of the preceding year by more than 9 per cent, a loss that cannot be made good by new sowings, since spring wheat is little grown in that country. Earlier official statements from Hungary and France show similar declines, so that in the three countries named, the aggregate reduction in the winter wheat acreage exceeds 1 million acres. In Russia and Bulgaria likewise there was, undoubtedly, a large decrease in the land sown to wheat last fall, but the extent has not yet been estimated. Turkey is the only country so far in which evidence points to the maintenance of the normal wheat area."

Memorial Window for Wellesley.

From the Boston Transcript.

WELLESLEY, MASS.—A decorative window soon to be unveiled in the east transept of the Houghton Memorial chapel was placed by the donors of the chapel, as a memorial to their mother, Mrs. William S. Houghton, a trustee of Wellesley college from 1880 to 1886. A memorial to Mr. Houghton, a trustee from 1880 to 1894, in the form of a bronze tablet, was placed soon after the dedication of the chapel in 1899. It has been decided to place in the new library rather than in the chapel, as was first proposed, the window in memory of E. N. Horsford, which will be the gift of the class of 1886.

Five Generations Living.

From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

LONDON—Five generations of the family of Mr. Pettit, boot dealer of Mexborough, are living, his own child being the youngest member. The great-great-grandmother is aged 90 and the child is 11 months old.

DULLNESS ON WALL STREET

INSIGNIFICANT CHANGES IN PRICES OF SECURITIES.

Investment Demand for Bonds Is Good, but Stocks Are Neglected—Promising Agricultural Outlook Encourages Security Holders.

NEW YORK, April 18.—This has been the dullest week that Wall street has experienced for many months. Trade in stocks is at such a low ebb that there was practically no objection to adjourning for two days on account of Good Friday, though there have been years when not even a single session of the stock exchange was omitted in observance of the day.. Excepting an active movement in some of the local traction stocks, of interest only to a limited number, there have been no important developments in the stock market. The average level of prices at the close Thursday was almost exactly the same as on last Saturday.

The waning interest in stocks seems to be due to the diversion of the investment demand for securities to the bond division of the market. The trade in bonds is steadily expanding and it is reaching some of the semi-speculative issues. The attitude of investors seems to be that there is too much uncertainty as to business conditions, and too big a shrinkage in current railroad earnings to make stocks atractive at the present level of prices, while prices of bonds are unlikely to be adversely affected by a prolongation of the period of diminished railroad earnings.

While there is little investment demand for stocks, neither is there any selling pressure on the market. Present owners seem contented to hold on. It is a Wall street axiom that when "trade gets dull on the breaks," the chances for profit are better on the buying than on the selling side.

LITTLE GAIN IN BUSINESS.

The optimist must still look to the future rather than to present conditions as a basis for his hopes. Business is not improving as much as was hoped. The steel industry is languishing with an output about half that of last year. Bank clearings, except in some favored sections of the West, show large shrinkage in general business. The foreign trade statement for March shows a decrease of 30 per cent in imports and a falling off of 12 per cent in exports. The idle freight cars in the country numbered 9,465 more on April 1 than on March 18, according to the statement of the American Railway association's committee on car efficiency. The reports of thirty-two railroads for the first week of April show an average decrease of 13 per cent in gross earnings. For the month of February the records of ninety-five roads show an average decrease of 11.31 per cent in gross earnings and a decrease of 23.77 per cent in net earnings.

Statistics such as these recall E. H. Harriman's recent statement that the business reaction has gone farther and continued longer than he expected.

PROMISING AGRICULTURAL OUTLOOK.

But many operators prefer to act on what the future promises rather than on the records of the past, or the doings of the present, and as the basis of prosperity in this country is the farms, there is a strong faith that the favorable agricultural conditions will soon give new impetus to general business. It is not questioned that the year has made an unusually promising start for the farmers. The winter wheat outlook is above an average, the spring planting has made an early start under favorable conditions. Prices of all farm products are remunerative. The commercial centers that are most dependent on the farmers are feeling the business depression much less than the cities in the manufacturing districts.

The Agricultural department's estimate of the value of last year's crops and of farm animals is 8,315 million dollars, compared with the census estimate of 5,434 millions in 1899.

There is no reason why this year's farm products shouldn't be as valuable as last year's. The figures are impressive. They show why there is good reason for faith that bountiful crops this year will accelerate the movement of business and impart increased value to securities.

SURPLUS RESERVES, 50 MILLIONS.

There is no sign of a let-up in the accumulation of bank reserves. The cash holdings increased 11¾ millions this week. Reserves are now almost 50 million dollars in excess of legal requirements. Loans increased $8,317,000. They are now 70 millions more than a year ago and the total cash holdings of the New York banks are 85 millions more than on the corresponding date last year. Rates of interest continue to sag. Collateral loans for sixty to ninety days are obtainable at 2½ to 3 per cent. The rates leave little or no margin to banks that are paying interest on deposits from interior banks. The low rates for money here are the chief reason for the exportation of 2 millions in gold to Paris this week. More gold is expected to go abroad, unless the Secretary of the Treasury calls in 50 millions of the government money now on deposit in the national banks.

This export movement of gold evidently is due to the excess of idle funds in the United States. It cannot be for settlement of trade balances because there has been an excess of 480 million dollars in exports over imports of merchandise in the past five months.

The two bank statements issued this week show wide discrepancies. The average figures show a gain of $11,730,000 in cash, compared with $9,937,000 gain as indicated by the statement of actual conditions yesterday. In the average statement loans increased $8,317,000 while the actual figures of yesterday show a decrease of $2,159,000; the average deposits increased 20 million dollars and the actual deposits yesterday were 7½ million dollars larger than a week ago.

Incident Closed.

Impulsively ardent the Kaiser
Just spouted on Hill like a gaiser.
He turned on his track
And took it all back
And now is perceptibly walser.

Elastic Size.

From the Baltimore American.

"What kind of a figure is Mrs. Dressy?"

"Well, if you go by the quantity of stuff it takes to make her dresses, she is quite tall; but when it comes to paying for them, she is very short."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

A Favorable Week for Winter Wheat and Spring Seeding.

Ideal weather for the growth of winter wheat and for the planting of spring grains prevailed all of last week throughout the country except in Western Kansas and Western Nebraska. Continued drought in these regions caused uneasiness up to Thursday, when rains began to fall, continuing Friday. The two months' dry period there has now been ended and without important impairment of the crop conditions. With occasional rains during the next two months Kansas will raise a larger wheat crop than ever before, and the total winter wheat yield of the country promises to be close to a record-breaker.

The Kansas state crop report published last week made the state winter wheat condition 91.4, with an area of 6,811,000 acres, indicating a probable yield exceeding 100 million bushels.

There are some important sections of Kansas that received only light precipitation last week, and will need more within a short time to prevent deterioration of the crop, but probably 80 per cent of the wheat area in both Kansas and Nebraska has sufficient moisture for present needs.

The official record of precipitation last week at important Kansas points is here shown: Baker, .82 of an inch; Concordia, .42; Dodge City, .36; Dresden, .49; Fort Scott,, .79; Macksville, .49; Manhattan, 1.18; McPherson 1.15; Osage, .58; Russell, .40; Sedan, 1.63; Toronto, 1.11; Wichita .44.

In all other parts of the winter wheat and corn states generous showers fell last week. In Texas and parts of Oklahoma the precipitation was excessive. There was no rain in the Dakotas. In Central and Southern Minnesota good rains fell. Spring wheat sowing has proceeded under favorable conditions.

Corn planting has begun in some parts of the leading corn states, with prospects of an increased area.

Mountain May Be a State Park.

From the Springfield, Mass., Republican.

GREAT BARRINGTON—There seems to be more than the ordinary interest in the possibility of Mount Everett, in the town of Mount Washington, becoming a state reservation, and there is no more fitting tract in southern Berkshire for such a purpose. A committee from Boston will arrive here early next week and will be driven to the peak for the purpose of investigating the tract. All of the distance from Great Barrington, 14 miles, the peak looms up ahead, and they will have an excellent opportunity of seeing it to the best advantage. It is situated in the southwest corner of the county and borders on the Connecticut and New York state lines. Mount Everett, or "Ball mountain," as it is more familiarly called, is 2,000 feet above the surrounding country or 2,624 feet above tidewater, and is the second highest peak in the state, which makes it all the more fitting that it should be the state's care. On the north and south sides the peak is flanked by a short and low range of mountains and lying at the foot is the small village of Mount Washington, once a thriving settlement, but now a mere hamlet depending almost entirely upon the summer guests for support. Being isolated from all outlets and railroads it is hard for those who still cling to the place to raise any produce for transportation, as by the time it is hauled to the nearest market or railroad station the profit has been used up, and the home consumption is not sufficient to use all the produce that can be raised on the mountain. For several years a little of the timber on the historic mountain has been cut away and if this is continued it would not be many years before practically the entire dome would be stripped of its beauty and only a barren hill would loom up in front of the traveler as he passes through the country.

Men and Women as Eaters.

From the New York Sun.

"Do men eat less than women, or do they buy more economically?" asked a convert to sociology. "These questions are suggested by a comparison of the grocery bills run up by men students and bachelor girls who have clubbed together for the purpose of cutting down expenses. In every case where tables for comparison are given the men's menu for the week costs less than that of the women. Both seem to have reduced the food allowance to the lowest possible equation, but in footing up the amount spent the women have run into certain extravagances avoided by the men. Maybe women really don't know how to shop, after all, but the more likely supposition is that no matter how strict the regimen the feminine nature requires certain luxuries that mere man can get along without."

IT'S A BEGGARS' NIGHTMARE

A FRENCH PLAN TO MAKE "FAKE" MENDICANTS WORK.

If M. Berry's Proposal Is Put Into Effect Hundreds of Picturesque Paris "Blind Men" and "Epileptics" and Others Will Lose an Easy Living.

As is pretty well known in America, France, and particularly Paris, is the happy hunting ground of the vagabond and the mendicant. The beggars of France have reduced the problem of getting a living out of society without working for it to a fine art. They have their own organizations, and rules and regulations for the government of their members. Their number is continually increasing. The need of some comprehensive measure to deal with such human parasites long has been apparent. At last there has come forward a man who, recognizing the evil, is prepared to grapple with it. This is Georges Berry, deputy for the Ninth Arrondissement, who has introduced into the French Chamber a bill for the suppression of vagabondage and mendicity. His remedy, in a nutshell, is work colonies.

GEORGES BERRY, A FRENCH DEPUTY, WHO HAS A PLAN TO MAKE "FAKE" BEGGARS WORK.

M. Berry has devoted many years to careful and impartial study of a situation which is admittedly one of the curses of modern France. He states that in ten years' conscientious seeking he never once succeeded in finding a "poor blind beggar" who was not a sham; that out of the 194 so-called "unemployed" to whom he offered well-paid jobs only eighteen accepted his offer, while, as the result of another experiment, only 5 or 6 per cent continued steadily to work and did not throw up their employment after they had earned a few dollars.

A "BLIND" MAN ATTACKED HIM.

"I could tell a hundred stories of the sham blind," continued M. Berry, "but one will suffice. I used to notice on the steps leading to Poictiers station a tall and powerful man, whose eyes were hidden by blue spectacles, and who importuned with unwearying persistence all who passed that way. One day he made use of an insulting expression because I would not give him alms, and in my indignation I told him that his blindness was mere sham. In a moment he rushed at me with his stick raised, forgetting that he could not see, and I had to beat a hasty retreat into the station.

"Not long afterward I came across the same fellow in another part of the town; he was in a perambulator and was being wheeled about by a lad who implored the public not to forget his blind and helpless father.

"Fortunately I had a friend at the prefecture and I reported the affair to him. The police were told to watch the man and it was not long before they discovered that this blind beggar was the chief of a gang of thieves who had committed an important burglary only a week or two before. The man was arrested with his accomplices, tried at the assizes and sentenced to five years' solitary confinement. It was proved at the trial that he had committed no fewer than thirty-three burglaries!"

"OLD SOLDIERS," TOO.

But not every sham beggar is so dangerous as the Poictiers man with the blue spectacles. Take for, instance, the two brothers who used to walk—and possibly still do—the Rue Monge and Boulevard St. Germain. One had acquired a trick of doubling his leg up under him as he hobbled along. The other dragged his leg after him. They had both been "wounded in battle" and their earnings were $4 to $5 a day. They were so thrifty that they even turned to account the slices of bread which charitable folk would give them. Other beggars throw the bread away in disdain. These, however, sold it to an "agent," or, in other words, a receiver of stolen goods, at Clingancourt, who in his turn had customers for it among bourgeois who kept dogs.

Still more curious is the case of an ex-solicitor's clerk who lost his situation after borrowing $100 from his employer's desk. This man, having turned professional beggar, parades the streets of Paris for nine months in the year as a one-legged man. As soon as July comes he starts for the seaside in a variety troupe, of which he is a star two-legged dancer on stilts.

AN "EPILEPTIC" RAN.

A well known type of Parisian beggar is the man who shams an epileptic fit or St. Vitus's dance. M. Berry tells his experience with a young man who appeared to be afflicted with the latter malady in its most distressing form. It was last October in the Champs-Elysees. The poor fellow was painfully making his way along, jumping now on one leg, now on the other, his body being so shaken by each movement that he made that the perspiration was pouring from his face. Finally he sank upon a seat, quite exhausted.

"In spite of my compassion," says the French deputy, "I could not help noticing that the infirm youth now and then made signs to a flower seller and to a man on crutches who kept at a certain distance away. My suspicions were aroused. When he had for the twentieth time sank on to a seat, I went up to him and began to talk to him kindly. Scenting an easy dupe and a fat alms, the young fellow, who stammered most lamentably, told me his woeful history. His father had been attacked by a mad dog and so severely bitten that he had died of his wound. 'I was with my father, sir, at the time, and my fright was such that I have ever since been afflicted as you see me now.'

"I listened to the young man's tale with deep interest, and when he had done I told him that I was a specialist in his malady and that I had determined to receive him into my ward at Bicetre and cure him. A cab was passing at that moment, and I rose and hailed it. What I had forseen came to pass. The cabman had not even had time to pull up before my young man, forgetting all about his infirmity, had taken to his heels and was lost to sight among the trees."

AUCTIONED A BEGGING PLACE.

M. Berry once was taken by an ex-policeman to witness a curious sight—the sale by auction of the steps of a Paris church. The sale took place in a little wine shop well known to the mendicant fraternity. Beggar men and women crowded round a long table at the head of which stood the "auctioneer," an old man with a flowing white beard. He was selling, on behalf of the Beggars' Syndicate, the sole right to occupy the steps of the church in question before and at the close of divine service, the late "proprietor" having died without leaving any recognized heir. Bidding was very animated, and it was evident that the place was a lucrative one. Finally it was knocked down to a little old man for $56, cash down, of course. Nearly all such beggars die capitalists.

There is an inquiry office for beggars in a back street of the Boulevard St. Germain, near the School of Medicine. It is run by a woman and, of course, is known only to the initiated. M. Berry says he was told the address by a garrulous old beggar. He went there disguised as a workman. "Do you want le grand jeu (the big pack) or le petit jeu?" asked the woman, and she added: "Le Grand jeu costs $3 and contains 950 addresses, all good. The people who live there never refuse to give alms. With the big 'pack' you can live easily for a year without ever applying twice to the same purse. With the petit jeu," she continued, "you have 200 addresses, and it only costs $1. But the houses are overdone for every beggar has the small list."

MANY LODGING HOUSES.

There are in Paris at least 500 lodging houses known to the police where beggars congregate at night to eat and sleep. Some of these unsavory places have become quite famous, such as the Chateau Rouge, dubbed "La Guillotine" from the hideous painting which some popular artist had daubed on the wall of the room where the beggars caroused at night. The Chateau Rouge was historical, as it was the remains of what was once the residence of the beautiful Gabrielle d'Estree, one of the numerous favorites of Henry IV at the end of the Sixteenth century. It was on the floor of Gabrielle's bedroom that those beggars who could afford to pay four cents were allowed the luxury of six hours sleep—from 8 p. m. to 2 a. m.—without being disturbed at every moment, like their less fortunate fellows below, by fresh comers stepping over their bodies.

The paintings on the walls of the drinking room on the ground floor were of the most blood-curdling type. As you entered your eyes fell on the guillotine on which perched a swarm of ravens and which was built upon hundreds of death's heads. On the wall opposite you saw two gendarmes arresting a Bill Sikes weltering in blood. On another wall an assassin was kneeling in front of his victim, a woman.

"PERE LUNETTE," ONE OF THE LAST OF THE OLD TIME PARIS RESORTS FOR BEGGARS.

"Pere Sunette' 'is a beggar's home where nightly hundreds of men and women congregate. With the exception of the Chateau, Rouge is the last of the old time resorts. The others are newer, and not so widely known.

The police are by no means averse to the existence of such haunts, for the proprietors are generally if not in the pay of at least anxious to keep on good terms with the prefecture of police, and it is in such places that the criminal will most surely be found when wanted.

BERRY'S WORK SCHEDULE.

M. Berry intends to leave the police court and police records to criminals and offenders to create work colonies for all those who seek public charity. He would keep the beggar out of the police court altogether. He would treat him more as a patient and thinks his case should be dealt with by a magistrate who would paternally mete out the number of months of work necessary to cure him.

M. Berry's scheme may be briefly summarized as follows: Vagabondage and mendicity are henceforth to be considered as offenses and the magistrate is to have the power to sentence the offender to a labor colony for a period varying from one week to five years. Colonies of repression are to be created by the state and vagabonds and beggars arrested on the public highway are to be sent thither to work. Municipal and departmental councils are to be empowered to vote funds for the organization of communal and departmental workshops, where unemployed citizens, domiciled or born in the commune or department, will find work.

SOME PEOPLE of THE STAGE.
L.S.

THE plans of Miss Anna Held, now starring in F. Ziegfeld, jr.'s success, "The Parisian Model," were rudely broken into very recently. A contract had been signed by Miss Held to appear in "The Parisian Model" during the entire summer at the Drury Lane theater in London. Last week came the news that this historic playhouse had been destroyed by fire.

All arrangements had been made by Mr. Ziegfeld for a complete new production of "The Parisian Model" for the London engagement. The costumes were to have been made in Paris and a new scenic outfit was to have been provided. Mr. Ziegfeld had also planned to take a chorus abroad that, for beauty and cleverness, would make the Londoners sit up and take notice.

The destruction of the Drury Lane upsets all of these plans. Miss Held and her company were to have sailed the first of June, and while she has already received several very attractive offers for the summer, she has not yet determined what her plans will be.

"But, after all," says Richard Carle, "the lines that get the biggest laughs come to me on the stage. I can always feel in a certain stage situation that there is a laugh coming for just the right line. I throw myself heart and soul into the scene and say just what I would say in real life if such a situation should arise. Sometimes I put in a dozen different lines until I get the one I want. The audience has to be the judge. When the people out there in the theater laugh at a line and laugh heartily enough, I know the line's good. They know; I only think I know."

"Is it harder to be a comedian than a tragedian?" Mr. Carle was asked.

"I don't know," he replied, "I never tried to be a tragedian? There's enough tragedy in trying to be a comedian."

"Frank Keenan, one of Mr. Belasco's best players," says the Cincinnati Enquirer, "reiterates that actors should go at their business as if it were a trade to be learned the same as anything else. The more an actor studies the better he is; few men and women are born with the acting gift. Mr. Keenan, who has been very successful because of his hard work, writes as follows in the Theater Magazine: 'From my beginnings I deduce the fact that actors must learn the trade of acting. They must learn to read intelligently, to walk and gesticulate gracefully and they must learn to think what a part means. They should ask themselves the three questions: Who? and Where? and Why? Before they go on the sttage to play a scene they must be able to answer to themselves, "Who is this man?" "Why is he here?" "How did he get here?" These questions intelligently answered will greatly help to make him a good actor.'"

Charles Frohman has obtained the American rights of "Jack Straw," a new play by W. Somerset Maugham, a clever young English writer who, by his "Lady Frederick," if by nothing else, has proved his worth as a dramatist. "Jack Straw" is described as a comedy in which the hero masquerades as a waiter. The dialogue has been highly praised for its crispness, the situations for their freshness, and the general handling of the theme for its cleverness.

Town Topics, New York, in a review of Bertha Kalich's impersonation of Marta in "Marta of the Lowlands," says: "Her body is extraordinarily expressive, every movement contributing its quota of feeling, while her face is a mirror of conflicting phases of emotion. And not less remarkable in its capacity of expression is her voice. In the colorful passion and vivid light and shade of melodrama Madame Kalich has no equal on our stage."

Charles Frohman has obtained "Love Watches," a comedy written by Mme. Fleurs and Cavillet, and now past its hundredth performance at the Comedie Fancaise, as the play in which Billie Burke will star next season. Miss Burke's part will be similar to the character Trixie, which she now acts as leading lady for John Drew in "My Wife." "Love Watches" will be the opening bill of the Lyceum theater next season.

The most striking novelty in the arrangements for Charles Frohman's new musical play, "Fluffy Ruffles," Hattie Williams's vehicle for next season, will be the employment of American actors in the first act, which is laid in America; English actors for the second act, which is laid in London, and for the third act—in Paris—several French musical comedy artists will be employed.

Miss "Billie" Burke attracted so much interest here during the engagement of John Drew that a bit of her history may be apropos. She was born in Washington in 1886. Her father was William E. Burke, a well known comedian with a record of gallant service in the armies of the North in the Civil war. Early in her life Miss Burke showed undoubted signs of unusual aptitude for the stage, and to her father's care, interest and training she attributes her youthful start. She was taken to England when a child and educated there, special attention being paid to her development of voice. At the age of 16 she went to the Continent and made a tour singing in concert in the theaters of Hungary, Austria, Norway, Sweden, Persia, France, Germany and Belgium. She made her debut at a salary of $100 weekly, which was shortly afterward doubled, an unusual compensation for a girl of 16, before that almost unknown. Miss Burke was never a chorus girl and never acted as understudy, rather a unique fact considering the number of present day actresses who began in one—or both—positions.

Miss Burke was first seen in London at the Pavilion, a fashionable music hall. She went in for an engagement of one month, but remained twelve weeks. She next appeared in the famous pantomime, "The Beauty and the Beast," in Glasgow. Here she came under the notice of George Edwardes, and he selected her for the part of Mamie Rockefeller in "The School Girl," in which her singing of "My Little Canoe" made a hit. She then appeared in "The Duchess of Dantzig," "The Blue Moon," "La Commere" and "The Belle of Mayfair."

"Billie" Burke's first appearance in comedy without music was in a play called "Mr. George," written by Louis N. Parker of "Rosemary" fame. In this play she appeared in the support of Charles Hawtrey. The comedy was not successful, and her next role was in "Mrs. Ponderbury's Past," and while appearing in this play Mr. Charles Frohman saw her and engaged her to come to the United States. Her success at the Empire theater, New York, was without doubt and the critics were puzzled as to which should be praised most, her personal beauty and charm, or her pronounced ability in acting.

WE'RE HAPPY, SAYS LOUISE.

The Ex-Crown Princess of Saxony Denies Rumors of Divorce From Toselli.

Wide circulation has been given to the report that the ex-crown princess of Saxony, whose escapades are world-famous, had quarreled with her present husband, Signor Enrico Toselli, an Italian musician, and had bestowed her affections on a young Italian author whose name has not been divulged. Mme. Toselli, to give her the name by which she prefers to be known since she has parted with all her high-sounding titles, declares the story to be false. She said recently in Florence, Italy, where she lives:

"My husband and I are living together on the most affectionate terms. I have at last found that for which I have so long yearned—domestic peace and happiness."

As spoken the words were much more impressive than they will sound in print. For about this woman, who, but for her vagaries—to use no harsher term—might now be queen of Saxony, there is a singular charm and fascination. And she gives one the idea that she is absolutely sincere. That pathetic air of haunting care and anxiety which was seldom absent from her face has vanished. Her house is a modest apartment in the Via Ferdinando Bartolommeo. Its furnishing is almost sober in unpretentiousness, and yet an air of refined taste pervades it from the salon, where she receives on Sundays, to the crimson draped hall of entrance. She selected the furnishings herself. At present she occupies herself with her housekeeping, and with modeling, for which she has a great talent.

"There is no truth in the statement that we are seeking divorce. We are perfectly satisfied with each other," she said. "There is one thing that I should like to emphasize, and that is, that, did I want a divorce from my husband that I might remarry, as the reports say, it would be absolutely impossible to get it. We are married by Italian law and there is no divorce in Italy. My husband is an Italian citizen. From every legal standpoint divorce is impossible."

The statement of the ex-princess that she and her husband get along happily together is confirmed by friends who visit them at their home. The couple joke and laugh and make sport of the housekeeping business like two grown-up children. "Either they are both consummate actors when company is present, or very much in love," was the way one visitor put it.

Enrico Toselli is, to all appearances, these folk say, a devoted husband, one whose disposition is overflowing with a sunny, happy boyishness, and proud of his success in making his former very unpunctual wife ready to the minute for meals, engagements, drives, theaters, etc. For the first time, they say, his wife is just like any other woman trying to please her husband.

All this is the Tosellis' and the friends' side, but Florence, that city of lively gossip, has no mind to give up one of her favorite subjects for discussion. Now the rift in the lute of the Toselli menage is that sword of Damocles of married bliss, named "mamma-in-law." Enrico is an only son, Signora Toselli, sr., is an Italian mother, and a daughter-in-law by custom is expected to lose her identity in her husband's family. In fact, by the custom of the country she usually lives with his people. Now, gossip says, Signora Toselli, sr., dreamed of the glories to accrue from a marriage with a princess of the house of Austria, whatever her past, and when her son, who has every instinct of a gentleman, flatly refused to make use of his wife to attain artistic or social triumphs, especially the latter, the castle in the air of the Signora Toselli, sr., fell with a crash whose echoes have greatly disturbed family harmony. When she realized that her son was only married to a woman much older than himself, one whose history was world property, neither rich nor self-effacing, she failed to conceal her chagrin and she has grumbled ever since. But Signor Toselli declares he recognized every penalty of his marriage before he went into it; that his wife suits him, their temperaments are congenial and their life is their own, and they only ask to be allowed to live it.

Signor Toselli, sr., plays the usual role of father-in-law and "keeps out of it." At first, the tongues say, he was in bewilderment as to how to treat the lady and an eager watcher on a street car saw him remove his hat whenever she addressed him, he being of the old school, with a respect for his old rulers of Tuscany, not to say, the Hapsburgs.

"Something Different" in Lace Curtains

An Extraordinary Value at $3.95—As Illustrated

The accompanying illustration represents the best value in a lace curtain which we have ever offered; in fact, we will go further and say that we believe this to be one of the best values in a lace curtain which has ever been offered by any house in this country. There are ten different patterns to choose from at this remarkably low price; all equally as effective as the one illustrated.

This Lot of Handsome Curtains Was Secured After a Careful Search of the Foreign Market

by one of our European rerestatives. Our instructions were to get something different from what others were offering at less than the regular market price. Our buyer was particularly successful in carrying out our instructions, as you will appreciate when you attend this sale Monday morning.

Similar Style Curtains to the One Illustrated have sold here right in this store for $6.00 a pair this season, so you will readily realize the remarkable value which we are giving when we offer these curtains at a pair, $3.95.

You Have Your Choice of Ten Different Patterns of these handsome Milan Pointe Curtains, in the fashionable beige color; some of them ornamented with padded or cushion work in white—an effective ornamentation that is usually only found in curtains that sell for $12 and $15 a pair. You can take our word for it that these curtains are extraordinary values at the sale price of a pair, $3.95.

Comparison will tell the story. If you have any doubt in your mind as to the difference in curtain values and styles here and at other stores, there is only one way to decide, that is by comparison. Compare what others offer with the curtains on sale in this store and then we know you will buy here.

Foreign Lace Curtains

A WILD WEST SHOW IN the MAKING.

BROKEN BONES, BRUISES, AND ROUGH-AND-TUMBLE ADVENTURE MARK THE ASSEMBLING OF UNTAMED ATTRACTIONS FROM THE PLAINS.

YELLS, pistol shots, the thunder of hoofs, frantic bellowings—these sounds rolled up from the prairie in a cloud of dust. In the sun's glare flashed the metal trappings of cowboy, Mexican and Cossack horsemen and the brilliant hues of Indian blankets and head-dresses. The light glinted from swords, lances and polished band instruments.

All this strange jumble of noise and color is part and parcel of the assembling of a real Wild West show—a gathering of reckless men and wild animals that must be put through the mill of preparation for a semblance of orderly and concerted performance later. This schooling of the untamed is no task for the diffident or timid. It means a hand to hand struggle with red-eyed steers, buffaloes almost as strange to man's presence as though they were free on the plains, and frantic horses that have never felt the touch of hemp or leather; the training of unruly white men, obstinate yellow men and perverse red men. It means a long period of pulling and pushing, sweating and cursing, dirt and disorder, with a fine chance for broken bones and painful bruises thrown in.

A CHEYENNE CHIEF.

TRAINED BUT NOT TAMED.

The peculiar feature of training the medley of men and beasts that make up the forces of a Wild West show is that they must not be tamed. Their picturesqueness, their "show" value lies in their very wildness. The problem for the organizer's solution is to control without subduing, to guide without leading, to instruct without conquering. He must teach these turbulent forces to carry out a fixed programme of entertainment with seeming headlong spontaneity. Tame things have no place in a Wild West show. On the contrary the prime qualification is wildness. Force and craft are the instruments of the trainer. He has no use for the methods of mild persuasion and gentleness.

A fitting stage for rehearsing such a turbulent troupe of actors is the open prairie, where there is a plenty of open ground to struggle upon, a plenty of air to breathe and no trees to dash out one's brains against after a trip through space. It was on such a stage—at their 10,000 acre ranch in Oklahoma—that the Miller brothers assembled their show that has just begun a summer's tour of the country. And the other residents of that locality are not likely soon to forget the events incident to the making of a tented "Wild West." The work consumed seven months of "hustling," and ended last week, when the finished product paraded itself before the assembled citizens of Ponca City, the nearest town to the ranch.

There is a seemingly reckless disregard of the value of money, time and energy in the making of such a show. Agents scour the country for talented and daring trick horsemen and horsewomen, Indians with war-path records, Mexican and Cowboy bandmen and artists of the lariat and six-shooter. There must be found notorious "outlaw" horses—fierce bronchos that have successfully defied human conquerors—and a selection made of "likely" steers and buffaloes. The gathering together of accoutrements, equipment for riders, Indians, Mexicans, Cossacks, is a task requiring experience and perseverance.

And aside and apart from all this is the task of providing the transportation facilities—wagons, vans, cars for men and for beasts, tents, seats, draught animals, advertising lithographs, tickets and all of the mass of equipment essential for sheltering and feeding the small army that travels with the show.

SIX HUNDRED SOULS WITH THE SHOW.

And speaking of this army, its numbers are somewhat impressive. At the beginning this particular Wild West show consisted of the three brothers Miller and Edward Arlington, an old-time circus man, who had associated himself with the ranchmen. These four set to work and there assembled in order, agents—purchasing and press—department managers, "gang bosses," canvasmen, drivers, hostlers, wagon men, cooks, ticket sellers and takers, and lastly, performers. When the congregation was complete it numbered something over 600 souls that would travel with the show. This is only the human portion of the army. Along with it, and more difficult to provide for by the transportation manager and the commissary overseer are the buffaloes, steers, horses and mules, numbering several hundred.

Many of the Indians with the show were brought from the far Northwest, Cheyennes or Northern Sioux. There are cowboys and cowgirls from Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico and Arizona. Cossacks from Russia. A company of Cingalese that arrived a few weeks ago from their homes in Ceylon. Mexicans from across the Southern border—and experienced circus managers from New York.

During the time of preparation for the season's tour everything and everybody connected with the enterprise was housed and cared for on the ranch. The Indians set up their tepees in the open prairie. The Mexicans, Cassacks, Cingalese and Americans were sheltered in cottages. There were tents, sheds, pens and pastures for stock.

An arena or "ring" was laid out on the open, flat prairie, and during the last weeks of organization daily rehearsals were held there. Cowboys and cowgirls rode, or failed to ride, bucking bronchos, or threw and tied steers. Bareback riders flashed around the ring, springing from back to back of their four horses abreast. The Cossacks, cool and comfortable in their Astrakhan fur bonnets, performed curious and hair raising feats on their wiry ponies, waving their swords defiantly at their rivals, the cowboys, Indians and Cingalese danced, the bands played, and there was a general ruction of noise, dust and excitement. For the most part it was hot and rough work. Not infrequently there was a bad fall or some one was kicked or trampled by a frantic animal. In one day two men suffered broken arms and a cowboy had a shoulder dislocated.

One of the proprietors, even, did not escape a shaking up. Zach Miller, whose duty it is to open each performance of the show by dashing gallantly across the arena on horseback and salute the audience with a flourishing bow, decided one day to rehearse his act. He galloped across the field, which happened to be wet, and made his bow in good form, but at the critical moment his horse began to buck. There was a brief struggle, a few eccentric leaps into space, and Mr. Miller struck the arena on his back, woefully muddying his new circus clothing.

"Slap-bang system" is what makes the organization of a show possible, says George Arlington, general manager of Miller brothers' Wild West, and who was for years with Barnum and Bailey in the heyday of their triumphs. "A head for every department who knows his business and compels success."

TO MARRY OR NOT TO MARRY?

This Town Is Much Disturbed Over Questions Matrimonial.

Society in Alton, Ill., is much agitated at present over the marriage question, and the number of organizations for and against marriage is increasing every day. There seems to be no middle ground on which an Altonite can stand. He must either be absolutely against matrimony, or he must be not only in favor of it for himself as well as everybody he knows and does not know, but he must exert all his energies to promote marriages in every quarter.

There are in Alton at the present time, it is asserted, not less than five anti-marriage clubs, the members of which pledge themselves to forever resist the attacks of Dan Cupid. Both sexes are represented in these clubs, and men and women are alike vigorous in their advocacy of a life of celibacy. On the other hand, there are several "Cupid Clubs," the object of which is to persuade the little god to point his darts in the direction of the members. The latest of these is the Forget-Me-Not club, an organization composed of young men and girls who join for the purpose of having an opportunity of showing each other how really attractive and desirable they are. This club meets every week and the girls cook the supper while the men attend to the fires. After supper they talk, play games or dance, and have a happy time together. Each member pays a small sum into the treasury every week towards what is called "the sinking fund" which is to be used as a dowry for the first couple whose wedding is a direct result of the weekly meetings of the club. Members of the club say it is too soon to begin to predict who will be the recipient of the sinking fund, but all are very enthusiastic over the success of their organization and believe they have solved the marriage question in a very interesting way.

"You see the great trouble is," said a feminine philosopher of 19 or thereabouts "that young people don't really know each other. That is the reason there are so many old maids and old bachelors nowadays, and why there are so many unhappy marriages. Most people only meet in society and so show only their 'company manners' to each other. If girls and young men are given an opportunity to see each other in the natural way, that is, under every-day, prosaic circumstances, many little faults that they would not have discovered otherwise will appear and many will be saved from making mistakes. Then they will see good qualities, too, qualities which never come to the surface in any but the most informal association, and lots of men who think girls are nothing but butterflies will learn that they are not that at all, but are good sensible women, who are capable of managing their own homes. That is the reason we organized the Forget-Me-Not club, and you will see that we will make a grand success of it."

The Blind Make Dusters.

From the Detroit Free Press.

Last week the feather duster department, which includes extensive apparatus for the manufacture of this article, was opened and the first dusters turned out. This work furnishes light and pleasant employment for women and children. There are only six feather duster factories in the country and if the local product gives satisfaction on the market it will mark a new epoch in industrial vocations for the blind.

The rug weaving department is doing good work, fluff rugs produced from old carpets by the blind being equal to any found on the market. The tapestry weaving has reached the point of perfection where the product will soon be offered for sale. Several months have been spent in the perfection of this difficult art, and it has been so thoroughly mastered by the sightless workers that special orders for unusual designs will be taken. The workers who turn out to be experts in tapestry weaving will earn large wages—perhaps the highest paid to blind persons for anything they are capable of producing.

Short Stories of Missouri.

IT is not generally remembered that the world-wide reputation of Audubon as a naturalist, incidentally, is due to his failure to establish himself permanently as a Missouri grocery merchant and dealer in the best brands of Kentucky whisky.

In 1810 he and Ferdinand Rozier of Ste. Genevieve loaded a keelboat at Louisville, Ky., with 310 barrels of whisky and groceries and started down the Ohio and Mississippi to Ste. Genevieve to open a grocery store. The trip was made during the winter, and the streams were so full of ice that the boat was drawn up against the bank and winter quarters were established just below Cape Girardeau. When Ste. Genevieve was reached, after the opening of navigation, the firm of "Audubon & Rozier" opened their store and did a prosperous business. But the business was done by Rozier, for Audubon preferred the woods to the counter, and devoted more of his time to sketching and stuffing birds than he did to marketing the 310 barrels of good Kentucky bourbon, or any other groceries. This led to a dissolution of the parnership. On April 11, 1811, Audubon, convinced of his unfitness for business, sold out to Rozier and took up the work for which he was better fitted than any one who had lived before or who has lived since, and from a fourth-rate grocer became the great ornithologist. The grocery business which Aubudon abandoned grew until finally it "extended throughout all of upper Louisiana."

The first murder north of the Missouri river recorded in history was committed in December, 1804, and the criminal was indicted by the first grand jury that assembled north of the Missouri river after the cession of the territory to the United States. The preliminary hearing was held before Daniel Boone, who placed the accused in a jail in St. Charles to await the action of the grand jury. When the jury assembled it was found that eleven of the twelve could not write their names. The one who could sign his name was chosen foreman. The indictment which they framed after great labor was a curious one and of especial interest as the first indictment drawn in Louisiana territory under the United States government. It reads as follows:

> That one James Davis, late of the district of St. Charles, in the territory of Louisiana, laborer, not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, on the thirteenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and four (1804), at a place called Femme Osage, in the said district of St. Charles, with force of arms, in and upon William Hays, in the peace of God and the United States, there and then feloniously, willfully and with malice aforethought, did make an assault, and that the same James Davis, with a certain rifle gun, four feet long, and of the value of $5, then and there loaded with gunpowder and one leaden bullet, with said rifle gun the said James Davis, then and there in his hands had and held, fired and killed William Hays.

A true bill was found against James Davis, and he was bound over to appear for trial. His bail bond was fixed at $3,000, which Daniel Boone signed. There must have been extenuating circumstances connected with the murder, for Davis was cleared when placed on trial.

Joseph W. McClurg, afterwards governor of Missouri, opened a small store near Seymour in Webster county in 1840. Later he established his famous wholesale house at Linn Creek, Camden county, and supplied all Southwest Missouri with goods before the Civil war. While in Webster county the future governor of Missouri cut a wagon road from his store to Jackson Port on the White river. The first boat load of salt ever brought by one merchant in the Ozark country was hauled from the river over this road to McClurg's store. Up to the beginning of the Civil war this wagon road down the southern slope of the mountains was known as "McClurg's old salt road."

McClurg was the first governor of Missouri to recommend a law forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

One of the most picturesque of the early lawyers of Missouri was "Billy" Campbell, who came from Virginia in 1829, and opened an office in St. Charles. He was a man of great ability, a classic scholar, an orator and a political writer of unusual power. But he was indolent, careless about collecting and spending money, and so lazy that physical exertion of any kind was positively painful to him. He had a most remarkable memory, as proven by the following incident: Campbell, who was a Whig, represented his district in the state senate several years. On one occasion he was lying on a bench in the senate chamber, apparently sleeping, when the Democratic members came in to hold a caucus. They attempted to arouse him, but he appeared so soundly asleep that they decided to let him alone. The next day a complete report of the proceedings of the caucus, including a verbatim copy of the resolutions adopted, was published in the St. Louis Republican. A row followed and the secretary was charged with having been bribed to report the proceedings of the caucus. After the excitement died down somewhat Campbell admitted that he had been awake all the time and that he had done the repertorial work entirely from memory.

Ralls county was organized at the session of the state legislature in 1820, and named in honor of Daniel Ralls, the member from Pike county. The joint session of the house and senate had been in a deadlock for several days over the election of a United States senator. There were five candidates, Thomas H. Benton being one of them. Ralls was his friend, but critically ill in his room in the second story of the tavern in St. Louis in which the legislature met. Benton lacked but a single vote to elect him, and it was arranged that at the joint session the next day Ralls was to be brought downstairs on his bed to vote. It was done. Ralls voted for Benton and elected him, and died a few days after. Then the county was organized and called Ralls.

In 1816 the town of Old Franklin was laid off on the Missouri river, opposite the present site of Boonville. Fifty acres of land were donated for the site, two acres were reserved for a public square, and the streets were made eighty-seven feet wide. It was the first American town founded in Missouri, and was the home of some of the most eminent Missourians, Hamilton R. Gamble, Abiel Leonard, Lilburn W. Boggs, Benjamin Reeves, Claiborne F. Jackson, John F. Ryland, Duff Green, Ben Holliday, David Todd and many others of equal eminence. Here was established, April 23, 1819, the first newspaper published west of St. Louis, "The Missouri Intelligencer, and Boon's Lick Advertiser." The Santa Fe trail commenced at Old Franklin, but was transferred to Independence and Westport in 1826, when Independence was founded. From 1823 to 1826 the population of the town was between 1,500 and 1,700. Soon after 1826 the river began to encroach upon the town and soon the entire site was swept into the river. All that now remains of the town is the old graveyard, which lay beyond its limits.

The old Masonic hall at Neosho, Newton county, has been fitly termed "The Confederate Capitol of Missouri." It was there that Governor C. F. Jackson convened a small fraction of the Twenty-first general assembly, ten members of the senate and thirty-nine of the house, in special session, October 21, 1861, and passed an act of secession and annexation, detaching Missouri from the United States and making it a state of the Confederacy. The only dissenting votes to this act were Senator Charles H. Hardin, representing the counties of Boone and Callaway, and Representative Isaac N. Shambaugh of DeKalb county. The proceedings of the senate, of which John T. Crisp was secretary, were captured in Alabama by the Forty-ninth Missouri volunteers and sent to the state capitol at Jefferson City. They were printed in 1865 by the state under the title "Journal of the Senate, extra session of the rebel legislature called together by a proclamation of C. F. Jackson, begun and held at Neosho, Newton county, Missouri, on the 21st of October, 1861." The journal of the house never has been found.

PLANTING TREES HIS HOBBY.

The Father of Arbor Day Practiced What He Preached.

The Arbor day motto of J. Sterling Morton, father of the day, was "Plant Trees." Ever since he gave that advice, in 1872, it has been the watchword of all who have realized the importance of giving things a chance to grow in the waste places of the country.

And J. Sterling Morton was a good and conscientious teacher, for he followed his own advice and probably was the greatest tree planter of his time. The present beauty of Arbor Lodge, the magnificent Morton homestead near Nebraska City, Neb., gives evidence of that fact. Thousands of trees, many of them planted by Morton's own hand, are growing on the land which surrounds the old home, and possibly the most attractive and best kept gardens in the West add further beauty to the place.

The lodge is just outside the city, which resting on the banks of the Missouri river, has more rugged scenery than any other Nebraska town. Adjoining the Morton homestead is the Nebraska City park and next to that are the golf grounds of the Nebraska City Country club. The three places, all covered with a fine sward and abundantly supplied with trees, combine to make a large stretch of country of the most attractive kind.

Near the entrance to Arbor Lodge, which comprises nearly 200 acres, stands the Morton monument, an imposing structure built and dedicated a few years ago. South of the house are the sunken gardens, filled with the choicest vines and flowers, and all around it are trees—trees of every kind, planted singly and in groves. The gardens are shut off from the rest of the estate by low stone walls, which are covered with vines. In the center of the gardens stands a sun dial of the old fashioned kind and here and there are little summer houses, shaded retreats and nooks of all kinds whose beauties are due to the abundance of vegetation.

J. Sterling Morton's injunction to "plant trees" has been well followed by the people of his state. In one year after the founding of Arbor day in 1872 a million trees were planted in Nebraska. Since 1872 it is estimated that 350 million trees have been planted. They have helped to change the climate of Nebraska. There is now little danger of hot winds, and the droughts are of less frequency and severity than they were in the days when the prairies were not marked by trees.

His Charge.

From the Youth's Companion.

The one special charge which Mrs. Locke gave her husband on the eve of her departure for a fortnight's visit to a friend was her fern—her beautiful, wide spreading fern. "Don't forget it while I'm away visiting, will you Henry?" she pleaded; and Mr. Locke answered that the fern should be forever on his mind till she returned.

Therefore, when on the evening of her arrival she noticed with a start that the fern was not in its accustomed place, she turned reproachful eyes on her husband.

"Now, my dear, let me tell you," said Mr. Locke, glibly, "if ever a man kept his word, I did. That—er—that fern was on my mind day and night. I scarcely ever forgot it. I watered it—oh, I must have watered it four or five times the first two days. I wanted to be sure it had enough.

"Then the water began to run out of the saucer, so I left it alone—entirely untouched, my dear, for the next three or four days, just as you would treat a person who had overeaten.

"Then when it began to look a trifle dry I watered it again, very faithfuly, but it began to look curious, very curious. So I just took it round to the florist, and he said he'd better look after it for a week or so.

"He told me that both Jennings and Wilkinson had brought their wives' ferns to him the day before—same kind as yours. He says ferns are something like children—they miss the person they are used to, my dear."

"I think very likely they do," said his wife, dryly.

THOUSANDS MARCH TO THE MECCA OF POLAND.

"IF there should appear in Russia a man who can arouse the religious enthusiasm of the populace in behalf of freedom, he would start a movement that would sweep everything before it."

Such was the observation made to me by an unusually shrewd observer after a recent visit to Czenstochowa, the Mecca of Poland. Nowhere else can one obtain such a comprehensive understanding of the tremendous hold which religion has on the Russian people. Ignorant, apathetic and steeped in superstition though they are. Czenstochowa attests to the world that there is a deep, abiding something in them which responds to religion with a fervor that nothing else can arouse. For their faith the masses will do and dare anything.

WHEN THE MONKS FOUGHT FOR IT.

Situated just outside a dirty little manufacturing town, where Jews make toys for the whole Russian empire, the monastery and the church of Czenstochowa are as famous in Eastern Europe as the city of Rome itself. In Poland's better days it was a fortress as well and sustained sieges in the face of Russians, Swedes and Germans. Once an abbot, with a handful of monks, defended it against a big Swedish army. But this belongs to its past glory. To-day Czenstochowa is known to every Catholic peasant in Poland, Russia, Servia, Roumania and Bulgaria as the great Mecca which all who would be saved should visit. It has been so for centuries and has therefore become as much a part of their lives as the soil they till and the rivers they fish in. Every peasant, man or woman, must visit it once in a lifetime. If not, their souls would be in danger.

PILGRIMS IN FRONT OF THE MECCA OF POLAND.

A little seamstress, who has spent fifty weeks of the year stitching in a stuffy work-room will devote the remaining two weeks and her year's savings to a pilgrimage to Czenstochowa. She will not go in a train if she can possibly help it, for the spiritual cure would be but half effected unless her feet were swollen with walking and her face blistered by exposure to the weather. Those who use the railway are looked down upon by the "tramps" with a pitying contempt. Now is one season of pilgrimages. The pilgrims want to be at the shrine Easter day.

ALL HOPE TO BE CURED.

So great is the spell of this Mecca that hundreds of thousands of persons suffering from various ailments make pilgrimages to Czenstochowa firm in the faith that they will be cured. When a child is ill the parents—not only peasants, but aristocratic ones as well—often make a vow that, if the child recovers, it shall make a pilgrimage on foot to Czenstochowa. And the vow is invariably kept if the sick person recovers.

Those who can afford it complete the fulfillment of the vow by depositing in the shrine some article of gold or silver that in some way symbolizes their malady. For instance, a person who has a broken leg will offer a model of a leg in miniature to the Czenstochowa church; if an arm has been the cause of the trouble, an arm is offered. A heart is offered by those who have recovered from various illnesses, as a sign of gratitude. These offerings are placed round the different altars in the church. Those who cannot afford such things, give small sums of money. These offerings mean, for the majority of the pilgrims, the savings of several years.

THE MORE DEVOUT WALK.

The pilgrimage itself generally costs but little as the vast majority of the pilgrims carry bread and barley on their backs and sleep in the fields and forests on the way; or if they are lucky, in some empty barn or granary. A "company" of pilgrims consists of any number between two hundred and ten thousand.

The usual way is for the pilgrims from several villages to meet in some large town and march together to their Mecca. They carry banners from their parish churches, pictures of saints and other prized relics. The priests march with them and choristers carry bells with which to announce the beginning of a chant. The effect of this multi-colored crowd, the women in dresses of orange, green and red, the men in their long white coats and colored belts, a priest here and there in sombre black is impressive enough; and when their thousands of voices take up the melody given by one of them the forests and fields resound with their music. People cease work to listen and pray, and often the skeptical observer who acknowledges no religion himself, bows his head in silent admiration of the faith that makes sore-footed underfed humanity tramp for miles and endure all manner of hardships to pray to a picture of a woman's face painted on a piece of wood. For to the faithful the greatest attraction of this Mecca is a picture of the Virgin, and those who prostrate themselves before it shade their eyes and dare scarcely look upon its glory.

ONCE STOLEN AND A WAR FOLLOWED.

Nothing is stranger than the scenes daily enacted before this picture, centuries old, swarthy with the swarthiness of Eastern art, and of origin that is wrapped in strange mystery and stranger tradition. Two scars mar the Virgin's right cheek and were given by the vandal hordes who stole it once and only gave it up after a bloody war. It has three robes, which are fastened over the form of the Virgin. One is composed of pearls, the second of diamonds and the third of rubies. The objects on the altar around it are of gold and silver, offerings of the devout, who vie with each other to have their gifts put in this favored place. The altar itself is of silver, so are the figures at the top, which are life size.

This relic is uncovered once a day; the dress being changed when some feast is at hand—the rubies being used as a sign of martyrdom. This unveiling takes place early in the morning. Only the lucky few can get near enough to see this ceremony, for the chapel is small. The others have to remain outside, often outside the church itself, and can tell by the groans and exclamations of those within that the miraculous picture is uncovered.

The sight of these people would be ridiculous were they not so terribly in earnest. They throw themselves upon the ground; they beat their heads on it; they kiss the stones under them, groaning, sighing, moaning and weeping, clasping their hands in an agony of fanaticism, entreating the picture to give them the things they most crave—health, or happiness, prosperity, children or forgiveness. Many burst into tears of joy when they see the object of their pilgrimage. The thirst and hunger and heat of it are forgotten. Lame men and women, carried to the chapel, forget their infirmities and bend their knees, declaring that they are cured. Others, with arms that were useless with paralysis an hour ago, stretch them out towards the Virgin and vow to dedicate their lives to her for the cure she has given them.

GOOD BUSINESS FOR PICKPOCKETS.

The church is infested with pickpockets. Sometimes a thief, caught by the angry pilgrims, is hustled outside and badly handled unless a priest interferes in time and gives him over to the police. But as a rule they operate with impunity, as the crowd is too close packed and excited for detection.

The extreme Socialists detest these pilgrimages, being jealous of clerical influence. They are not above attacking the devotees on the way to and from this Mecca. Bombs have even been thrown amongst them, causing deaths and serious injuries not only of themselves, but by reason of the panic they start. Last year this form of terrorism reached such a pitch that large "companies" are now provided with a special guard of men whose business it is to see that no strangers approach them.

The pilgrims who come to visit Czenstochowa, afraid of the pickpockets in the church, usually give their money into the charge of one of the priests and when a large "company" arrives, even if each member has only a couple of roubles, the gross sum often runs into a considerable amount.

Manufacturing Opium Pills for Children.

Samuel Merwin in Success Magazine.

The men who administer the government of India have a chronically difficult job on their hands. In order to keep it on their hands they have got to please the British public; and that is not so easy as it perhaps sounds. It would apparently please both the government and the public if the whole opium question could be thrown after the twenty thousand chests of Canton—into the sea. But the British public is hard headed and proud of it; and the spectacle of the magnificent, panoplied government of India gone bankrupt, or so embarrassed as to be calling upon the home government for aid, would not please it at all. Of the two evils, debauching China or gravely impairing the finances of India, there has been reason to believe that it would prefer debauching China. That, at least, is what successive governments of Britain and of India seem to have concluded. It has seemed wiser to endure a known quantity of abuse for sticking to opium than to risk the cold British scorn for the bankrupt; and accordingly the Indian government, with the approval of one home government after another, has stuck to opium. The only alternative course, that of developing a new, healthy source of revenue to supplant opium, the unhealthy, would involve real ideas and an immense amount of trouble; and these two things are only less abhorrent to the administrative mind than political annihilation itself.

Motor Cars and Motorists

THE runs and tours committee of the Automobile club will meet tomorrow night to complete arrangements for the endurance run decided upon at the last meeting of the club. A route will be determined upon, rules to govern the contest will be adopted, and a date set for the event. It is probable that the route will be through Independence, east on the Lexington road to Levasy, north to Oak Grove, to Lone Jack, to Lee's Summit, Hickman's Mills, Grandview and back to the city by way of Martin City and the Wornall road.

The route will be entirely within Jackson county and be approximately 100 miles in length. The committee has recommended a run to St. Joseph, but the club voted this proposition down as being too hard a test. It may be taken up later in the season.

Nothing definite has been done in the matter of a country clubhouse for the Automobile club. The project was put into the hands of a special committee, consisting of Dr. E. M. Hetherington, Amos Martin, H. C. Fowler, A. J. Davie and Ferd Heim, with instructions to select a location and procure an option on grounds suitable for the building of a clubhouse.

"We have several propositions under consideration," Dr. Hetherington said yesterday. "Some of them are quite attractive. The committee will take a day off next week to look at all of them."

Dr. Hetherington said all of the locations being considered are south or southeast of the city, from seven to fifteen miles out. As soon as the commitee decides on a site a special call for a meeting of the club will be sent out.

On approaching vehicles it is well to slow down and be prepared for a quick stop. Keep to your right on the road and pass other vehicles on the left.

Before starting out make sure you have a complete set of tools, extra spark plugs and spare parts in the tool box.

Be sure that spark is set late before cranking the engine, otherwise it will "kick," possibly causing personal injury.

Always make a thorough examination when the car develops an unusual noise.

Follow the manufacturer's oiling instructions carefully. The efficiency and durability of the car depend largely upon the oiling.

Drive at a moderate speed. Continuous driving at high rates of speed greatly strains the motor and lessens its life. Under no conditions drive a new car at high speed.

Don't let the clutch into engagement suddenly, causing the car to jerk forward. Releasing the clutch pedal gradually gives a smooth, gliding start, which is much more agreeable to the occupants of the car.

Great care must be taken not to bring a naked flame near the openings in the top of the battery during or immediately following a charge.

Never drive fast around a corner. It is dangerous and very hard on tires.

Apply brakes gradually on slippery roads to avoid skidding.

Slow down when turning corners.

Keep tires well inflated.

As oil and grease destroy rubber, see that your tires are kept free from same.

Remove the switch plug when leaving the car for any length of time, then the battery cannot be accidentally short-circuited.

E. P. Moriarty & Co. sold a four-cylinder Stevens-Duryea to C. C. Lake last week; also a six-clyinder car of the same make to M. C. Nolan, and a Woods electric brougham to Mrs. George D. Hope.

"In the many articles that have been published on the cost of running motor-cars, it is somewhat singular that one source of positive and authoritative information has been generally overlooked," says Motor Age. "Yet it is a fact that the wide prevalence of motor-car rent services in every city and town of importance in the country affords a cold-blooded and commercial line on the cost of motor-car travel, which, because of its perfectly disinterested and altogether practical nature, gives figures far more satisfying than those of the economy trial as usually conducted.

"The matter reduces itself to one of plain arithmetic. The standard motor-car hire seems to have widely fixed itself at $5 an hour—never higher and in some cases lower. This maximum figure will hardly impress anyone as erring on the side of reasonableness, yet, high as it may appear, a simple analysis discovers really extraordinary value returned for a small sum outlaid. To begin with, it is to be considered that the $5 will hire seven-passenger touring cars of first class quality and great speed, with the unqualified understanding that the running is to be when, where and how the patron dictates, all expenses, including that of the driver, to be met by the owner of the car. This means that for $5 a party of six—in addition to the driver—can obtain transportation for as far as the car can be run in an hour.

"This distance will easily average thirty miles, with average roads and a car of average capacity. The driver commonly is paid 25 per cent of the $5, and 10 per cent is willingly given as a commission to anyone who can procure business, leaving only 65 per cent of the $5, or $3.25, for the owner. Despite this the motor car rent business undoubtedly pays, in any sort of favorable conditions. So the result figures out a thirty-mile ride for six people at an outside cost of $3.25, which is fifty-four and one-sixteenth cents apiece, or about one and four-fifths cents a mile—well below most railway fares. In the case of the average owner user, who usually does his own driving, the division is by seven instead of by six, makng the final figure about one and one-half cents. All of which appears to prove that the modern car makes travel possible at the owner's own will and pleasure, by his own choice of routes,, at a cost well below that of railway travel. As for the transportation of smaller parties, it is safe to say the less capacious machines effect proportionate savings in operating costs, thus still leaving the laurels with

The splendid performance of the Studebaker in public contests as well as in the hands of many enthusiastic owners is so well known as to require no argument from us.

The Vehicle

While it is imperative that an automobile be mechanically satisfactory it is equally as important that as a conveyance for passengers it be comfortable. Studebaker horse-drawn vehicles have for many years been noted for their easy riding qualities, and this experience has enabled us to build automobiles that make riding a real pleasure.

Thomas Wins "Times" Cup

Thomas Flyer Has Just Won the Largest Race Ever Run in America

At the beginning of the New York to Paris Race, the New York Times offered a cup for the first car to arrive at San Francisco.

This cup was won by the Thomas Flyer, America's champion, which reached the coast 11¼ days ahead of its nearest competitor. The entire trip, 3,800 miles, was run in only forty-two days, in face of the fact that the country was crossed at the very worst possible season, when snow, rain, hail, mud and ice blocked every road. The car in this race is a regular stock Thomas Flyer, such as are in use by Thomas owners everywhere. It has distinctly demonstrated its unquestionable superiority for American travel, not alone in any one section of the United States, but throughout the entire country.

The Thomas Flyer represents America—made for America—and constructed with the view of overcoming American conditions. It stands alone as America's great champion.

If you're going to buy a motor car to use anywhere in America it will pay you to look first toward the name "Thomas."

NEARLY three years before the Kansas City river flood Galveston encountered a gulf storm. Because Kansas City was for the most part on high hills its flood did not imperil the city. Because Galveston was on a sand spit its storm nearly wiped the town out of existence.

This geographical condition gave Galveston good municipal government and left Kansas City with a bad municipal scheme. If Kansas City had been all on low ground an inefficient system of running the city would have been abandoned by necessity.

Commission government for cities began with the Galveston storm of September 8, 1900. They had in Galveston what they have in nearly all American cities, a system of "checks and balances," to make sure that the government could not do anything. For about thirty days after the storm the mayor and council quarreled. They gave such an exhibition as Kansas City has when it wants a Union station or a Traffic Way or a Public Utilities ordinance or a street graded. Then the people of Galveston saw what an absurd thing a system of "how not to do it" was, and they went to the legislature for relief. The old municipal government was abolished and the commission of mayor, president and four other commissioners was provided for. At first the governor of Texas named three of these commissioners. This was declared unconstitutional and the people of Galveston chose them all—choosing, incidentally, the same men Governor Hogg had appointed.

These five men constitute the governing board of Galveston. They conduct the city affairs. Each commissioner is at the head of one department of the city government. The departments are Waterworks and Sewerage, Finance and Revenue, Police and Fire, Streets and Public Property. The commissioner of each specific department has most to do with that department, but all the commissioners vote on any matter of policy connected with it. Each commissioner is a commissioner for all of the city and for all the work of the city.

The only form in this government is to get the thing done. To get a measure through in one night or in fifteen minutes it is not necessary to "suspend the rules," for there are no rules to prevent doing things. The municipal directors are in session all the time or can be called in session whenever there is need for them to do something. As there is only one group of men to take action—the commissioner called mayor or president votes with the others—there is practically no obstruction. The municipal corporation is free to do things quickly as any other corporation.

In the old style of municipal government an ordinance for public work is preceded by a resolution by the board of public works. Then the ordinance is introduced in one council house, goes to committee, is reported out when the committee pleases, is passed by the one house, goes to the other house and there passes through the same formula, is put up to the mayor and by him is either approved or vetoed. Perhaps it will take a three or four times repetition of this process before the result is attained—say a street paved, after first establishing the grade and then grading it.

This is the practice in Kansas City on the Missouri side. In Kansas City, Kas., the procedure is less cumbersome because there is only one house; but it is composed of ward representatives and bound by circumlocution office forms.

The commission in Galveston simply goes ahead and does whatever is needed to be done to that street. And if the people do not want the improvement they do not have to have it under one plan any more than under the other. Their rights are protected in both cases by the law and the courts. The vast difference is that when they do want a thing they can get it through the commission plan.

The Galveston commission method has fixed responsibility as well as authority. There is no shifting the blame. The commissioners are not elected severally by wards, but are elected by the whole city. The interests of the wards are just as well looked after, and the interests of the whole city are much better looked after. The commissioner of streets, for example, does not neglect the streets of one ward any more than the superintendent of streets for Kansas City, Mo., or Kansas City, Kas., neglects one ward and favors another.

The commissioners are the only elective officers. As they are responsible for the conduct of the city they appoint all subordinate officers. The people can concentrate on selecting the right men. They don't have to choose from among a whole crowd of candidates for a multitude of offices. The appointive officers are responsible to the commissioners. The commissioners are responsible to the people for the way these appointees perform their duties. Not only the theory is right; practical experience supports it.

By simply using business methods Galveston has reduced its tax vote in the seven years since the storm at the same time that it has paid $632,000 of extra expenses and paid off about $462,000 of the regular bonded debt. To-day its bonds are at par, while immediately after the storm the city was bankrupt and its own public spirited citizens were the only ones who would buy its improvement bonds.

The police and fire efficiency has been increased in proportion to its fiscal ability. Laws are better enforced than ever and the "corner grocery," which is really a groggery in this, as in most Texas cities, is under much better control than formerly.

What is true of Galveston is true of Houston, the second of the commission plan cities. It proves the elasticity of the commission form that it works equally well with differences of details and of local conditions. Houston calls its commission "mayor and aldermen." Galveston calls it "board of commissioners." Houston pays its mayor $4,000 a year and its aldermen $2,000 a year each, and requires them all to give all their time to the city. Galveston pays its mayor-president $2,400 a year and its commissioners $1,200 a year each and permits them to engage in other business. It is urged for the Galveston method that it secures the services of public spirited business men who could not afford to give all their time to the city. The merit is claimed for the Houston plan that it makes men experts in civic affairs and induces not only business men but all classes of men to offer their services to the city and to take an interest in civic matters. It appears to be a question for each locality to determine by its own requirements. At any rate, Houston and Galveston have both prospered and each is satisfied with its own experience.

The referendum on all franchise questions prevails in both Houston and Galveston. Upon the petition of 500 voting citizens any franchise grant, or conveyance of a public property right, must be submitted to the people for their ratification or rejection.

The commission plan as actually at work in Galveston and Houston is the most democratic of all governments. It is the only form of American municipal government where the people do govern their city as they want it governed. A man who does not believe that the American citizens can be trusted will not vote for the commission plan. He will vote for the old checks and balances system—to save the people from themselves. But the man who really believes in popular government and believes that popular government can safely be made efficient will vote for the commission plan when the chance is presented to him.

Music and Musicians

Max Bendix and Rudolph Ganz in Recital.

THE Kansas City Musical club is sponsor for the joint recital to be given by Max Bendix and Rudolph Ganz in the Westminster Congregational church, corner of Thirty-sixth and Walnut streets, next Tuesday evening. The event is one of the most important in the present musical season. Mr. Bendix has been conspicuous as a solo violinist and orchestral player many years. Mr. Ganz, whom Kansas City knows by two recent appearances, is fast rising to a place among the really great pianists of this day. Mr. Ganz found introduction here by his joint recital with Emil Paur in the Auditorium theater. Nobody who was present that afternoon has forgotten the exceedingly graceful and pleasing style of the Swiss pianist, his very sympathetic interpretation and his fluent technic. Some months later Mr. Ganz returned for a recital in the Casino and deepened the impression made during his first visit. Since the concert given in the Casino Mr. Ganz has won new honors both in this country and abroad.

RUDOLPH GANZ, THE SWISS PIANIST.

Max Bendix first came into public notice as concert master of the orchestra conducted by Franz van der Stucken in New York city. He was a mere boy then. Subsequently he became concert master for German opera in the Metropolitan and while serving there attracted the attention of Theodore Thomas, who made the youth of 20 years concert master of his orchestra. Ten years Mr. Bendix was with Mr. Thomas, the last five years as assistant conductor. Then he started forth for himself and in recent years has been most active in solo and quartet work. His last visit here, if memory be trustworthy, was in 1899, when he gave a recital in the Auditorium theater.

MAX BENDIX, VIOLINIST.

Sonata in A major (Kreutzer)......Beethoven
Mr. Ganz and Mr. Bendix.
Ballade in G minor......Grieg
Mr. Ganz.
"Le Trille du Diable (The Devil's Drill")
......Tartini
Mr. Bendix.
(a) Chant Polonaise......Chopin-Liszt
(b) Scherzo in B flat minor......Chopin
Mr. Ganz.
(a) Berceuse......Arenski
(b) Spanish Dance......Sarasate
Mr. Bendix.
Two movements from Sonata in D minor
......Saint Saens
Mr. Ganz and Mr. Bendix.

Jasper County's First May Festival.

Jasper, one of the richest counties in the state of Missouri, celebrated the world over for its lead and zinc mines and its mules, is looking toward higher and less material things and is busily engaged in preparations for its first big music festival to be given in Joplin the sixth and seventh days of May. Although Joplin is the place chosen for the festival, Carthage is equally interested in the venture, for which the Chicago Symphony orchestra and a group of fine soloists have been engaged, with Carl Busch as conductor general. Choruses are now in rehearsal in both Joplin and Carthage and the promise is for two days of music such as Southwest Missouri has never had.

The association organized expressly for the promotion of the festival has these officers: Guy H. Elmore, president; Mrs. W. J. Sewell, vice president; O. N. Waltz, treasurer; W. I. Calhoun, secretary. Executive committee—Guy H. Elmore, O. N. Waltz, Mrs. W. A. Wheatley, Mrs. W. J. Sewell, W. F. McElroy, O. E. Lichliter and W. L. Calhoun.

The soloists coming with the Chicago Symphony orchestra are Mme. Adelaide Norwood and Mrs. Genevieve Clark Wilson, sopranos; Mrs. Rose Lutiger-Gannon, contralto; John B. Miller, tenor; Arthur Middleton, bass; Jan Van Oordt, violinist; Franz Wagner, 'cellist; Miss Rosine Morris, pianist, and Miss Rhetia Hesselbert, violinist. The places of residence of these soloists include Munich, Brussels, Berlin, Baltimore, New York and Chicago. The orchestra has sixty-five members, with Adolph Rosenbecker as conductor and Mr. Van Oordt as concert master. The organization is just completing a successful concert tour of the Pacific coast and Northwest states.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the festival, from the viewpoint of Kansas City, will be the first performance in the West of Carl Busch's cantata, "The Four Winds," which won the $500 prize offered by Strawbridge & Clothier of Philadelphia. The work was sung recently in Philadelphia and brought generous burden of praise to its composer. The programme for the three days' festival follows:

Mr. Feil's Organ Recital Thursday.

A concert of particularly strong appeal to those persons fond of good organ music is that to be given by Hans C. Feil in the Independence Boulevard Christian church next Thursday evening. Mr. Feil has undoubted talent and is fortunate in having at his disposal one of the best organs in the city. Among other things he will play Guilmant's first sonata, the andante pastorale from Widor's fourth symphony, a madrigal by Lemare and an intermezzo by Callaerts. The remainder of the programme will consist of solos by Miss McConnell, soprano, and several duos for piano and organ, Miss May McDonald to be the pianist.

The Return of William H. Sherwood.

There was a time, not so many years ago, when each music season in Kansas City knew a recital by William H. Sherwood. Friday afternoon, May 1, Mr. Sherwood will return to renew old acquaintance. Miss Josephine Rea, a pupil of Mr. Sherwood, is responsible for the approaching visit. The concert will be given in the Willis Wood theater. The programme will be made known later.

Mr. Sherwood has been hailed as the greatest of pianists native to this country. Whether this be true or not makes little difference, since the man has proved his artistic worth and established himself firmly in public regard. He is one of the few living pupils of Liszt. Kullak also was another of the masters from whom he had instruction.

An Easter Afternoon Song Recital.

Mrs. John. S. Jeffers, a pupil of Emilio Agramonte, will sing a complimentary recital in the Mellier Place Presbyterian church, Genesee street, between Thirty-ninth and Fortieth streets, at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon. Miss Gladys Baldwin, violinist, and Miss Lila Mae Pickle, pianist, will contribute several numbers toward the programme. Mrs. Jeffers, in recognition of the day, perhaps, will open her concert with "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth," from "The Messiah," and will close with the lullaby from "Jocelyn." Between these works she will sing a bolero by Verdi, the cavatina from "The Queen of Sheba," and a group of spring songs—Greig's "The First Primrose," Schubert's "Hedge Roses," Mozart's "The Violet" and Mendelssohn's spring song.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. Cora Lyman will give the last of a series of musical lectures in the home of Mrs. H. Gordon Harris, 1016 Ann avenue, Kansas City, Kas. Mrs. Lyman's subject will be the late Edward A. MacDowell.

Miss Ruth Hoyt of Golden, Col., and Miss Edna Schell of Wichita, Kas., pupils of Lawrence W. Robbins, will be presented for graduation in a joint piano recital in the chapel of Lexington college, Lexington, Mo., to-morrow evening.

The Kansas City Conservatory of Music and Art will have a recital next Friday evening. The programme has not been made out fully, as yet. Some of the students who will take part are Miss Florida Stier, Miss Pearl McDougall and Fernand Jacobs. Miss Alice Bradley, soprano, a member of the faculty, will assist the students. Tickets for this recital may be had at the office of the conservatory, corner of Eleventh and Oak streets. The public is invited to attend.

Bessie Thomson, Kathleen Winters, Clara Wehr, Lulu Hazard, Marian De Baun, Nellie Anderson and Jeannette Farley, members of the Presto Music club, will play a recital in the home of Mrs. M. T. Campbell next Friday evening. Mrs. McKillip, violinist; Mrs. John C. Howard, contralto; Miss Pearl Swartzel, reader, and Miss Blanche Milton, elocutionist, will share in the programme.

Miss Pearl Collins announces a song recital for the evening of May 1, in the Casino. M. L. Klinck of Hutchinson, cornetist, will assist. Miss Collins has been engaged as soprano soloist for the music festival to be given in Hutchinson, Kas., May 13, 14 and 15.

Mrs. H. G. Bertenshaw of Coffeyville, Kas., who has been studying piano with Edward Kreiser, will play a recital in his studio next Saturday night.

Miss Lucy Hill, a piano pupil of Rudolf King, will leave in September for Berlin, where she will pursue her studies with Leopold Godowsky.

A HOME FOR ITS EMPLOYEES

HOW A RAILROAD PROVIDES REST AND RECREATION FREE OF CHARGE.

The Santa Fe Maintains Twenty Reading Rooms and Promotes Entertainment for the Moral Uplifting of Its Workmen in Their Leisure Hours.

One of the most successful efforts at industrial education has been that accomplished by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. It has been six or eight years since the company began to establish reading rooms for employees at points along the system where many men are employed. There are twenty of these reading rooms now established between Chillicothe, Ill., and Needles, Cal.

SANTA FE RAILWAY READING ROOM

An incident told by S. E. Busser, superintendent of reading rooms for the system, tells of the development of the plan for industrial education.

One evening in the early spring a number of employees had gathered at one of the reading rooms in Arizona to discuss the new engines, the coal famine and the new time card. This reading room had been opened by the management as a resort for men. It had a fine library of 500 volumes, all the papers and periodicals of the day, bathrooms and a billiard table. This reading room is typical of the others on the system. It represented an effort on the part of the railroad company to aid the men in self-development as well as to provide entertainment for them. Each reading room is in charge of a librarian, usually some employee who can no longer stand the out-door work of railroading and who receives a salary from the company.

The reading department of the system is in charge of Mr. Busser as superintendent. He gives his entire time to the work of providing good books, wholesome entertainments, scientific lectures and concerts. By question drawers, free discussions and familiar intercourse with leaders whom the superintendent brings over the line, the men are enabled to hold and express progressive opinions on all of the public questions of the day.

The first place a man visits when off his run is the reading room. There he may enjoy a hot or cold bath, rest in a quiet room, then relaxation at a game of billiards or cards, a perusal of the late magazines and daily papers. The reading room makes saloons and like resorts less attractive.

"What is this entertainment at the reading room?" asked one of the men on the portico. It was a lecture by an eminent physician on almost purely a technical subject.

INTERESTED IN SCIENTIFIC SUBJECTS.

"These lectures are a mighty good thing," said another of the men. "It gives us an opportunity to meet the thinkers of the day and we can learn in an hour what it will take several days to read up on. I don't know what this doctor is going to talk about, but if he can tell us how to get any more out of life I want to hear him."

Charles Farwell Edson, head of a quartet of entertainers from Los Angeles, that completed a tour of the reading rooms last week, said:

"The appreciation given our efforts to entertain is gratifying evidence of the progress these men are making. You would be surprised if I told you that some clever bit from Kipling makes more of a hit than 'Old Black Joe.' They applaud the classical music more than the simple things that used to be the vogue."

Mr. Edson's associates included Miss Carolyn von Benzon, a concert and church soloist, who is going to New York to take an engagement with Henry W. Savage to sing in grand opera; Miss Miriam Eskridge, who has made a wide reputation as a reader; Miss Maude Low, a pianist.

This is a type of the entertainment given the men in the Santa Fe reading rooms, as shown in the following programme:

(a) A Man's Song......Harris
(b) What Care I How Fair She Be......Sudds
(c) On the Road to Mandalay......Trevannion
Mr. Edson.
Monologue, Keeping a Seat at the Benefit..Fisk
Miss Eskridge.
(a) Stolen Wings......Willeby
(b) The Throstle......White
Carolyn Von Benzon.
The Butterfly......Lavallee
Maude Low.
(a) Forging the Anchor......Rodney
(b) Mistress Mine......Barry
(c) Punchinello......Molloy
Mr. Edson.
Reading......Selected
Miriam Eskridge.
Jewel Song, Faust......Gounod
Carolyn Von Benzon.
Songs and Stories......Selected
Mr. Edson.
Reading......Selected
Miriam Eskridge.
Duet, Good Luck and Bad......Squire
Carolyn Von Benzon and Mr. Edson.

These entertainments are given during the winter months—all of them high grade entertainments. An effort is made to give one entertainment each week at each room. During the season just past a total of 350 entertainers were employed to give a total of a little over 150 entertainments.

TWENTY ROOMS COST $250,000.

There is no money making consideration in these entertainments. Tickets are distributed to the employees for themselves and their families. If the room where the entertainment is given has sufficient capacity, additional tickets are distributed among employees for their friends.

The Santa Fe railroad has $250,000 invested in the reading rooms. From the inception the road's employees never have been asked to make any contribution toward these clubhouses, the entire charge being assumed by the railroad company. No charge is made for the use of the rooms, except a very nominal one for sleeping accommodations, and for bathing, billiards and bowling. The total number of books in the libraries is somewhat over 18,000, of which 40 per cent is fiction, 25 per cent history, 20 per cent biography and 15 per cent technical works.

MORAL SENSE OF ANIMALS.

Elephant, Camel and Monkeys Develop Penchant for Purloining Property.

George Conklin in the New York Mail.

Have animals any moral sense? Well, I won't go so far as to say they have, but will say that they know when they are doing wrong, and when they are detected they are as shamed-faced as a small boy caught in the jam closet.

The worst offenders are the monkeys, of course. And inversely they have the lease compunctions about it. A monkey would rather steal a thing than have it given him. It seems to be true with him as with his descendants, mankind, that stolen sweets are sweetest.

Next to monkeys, bulls—elephants, that is—are most prone to appropriate property of others. Bertha, one of our younger bulls, is positively diabolical in her ingenuity. At night we used to tie her to a pipe along the wall, but every morning we would find her free. At the same time the men began missing things from the pockets of their working coats, which they left hanging on the walls.

We did not associate the two facts at first and were puzzled to account for both. One night I sat up and watched. When the last light was extinguished except the one lamp which is necessary, for the bulls are afraid of the dark, I saw Bertha swing around and fumble with the knot of the rope with which she was tied. After five minutes she got free.

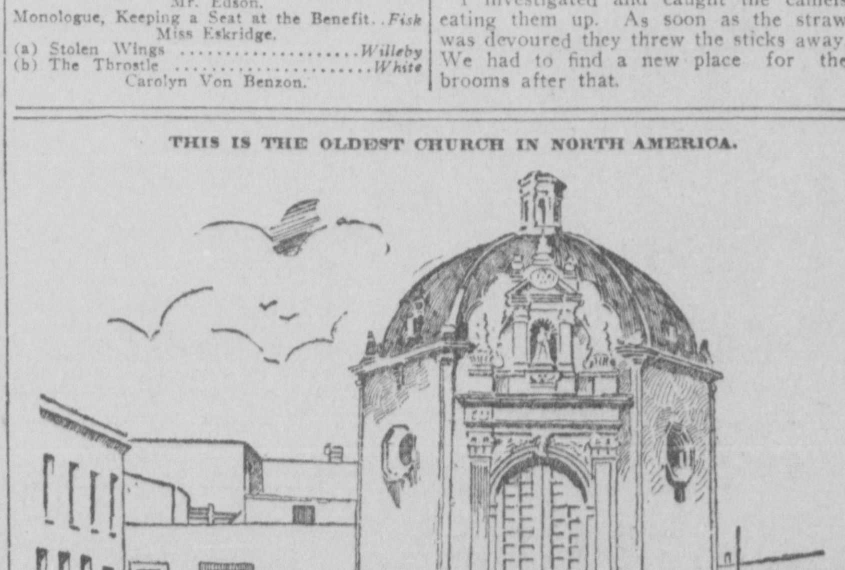
As I lay on the floor feigning sleep she came over and went through all my pockets, taking a package of tobacco and a dozen lumps of sugar that I always carry. Suddenly I jumped up and Bertha was so frightened that she never has got over it. She won't eat sugar any more, either.

The candy butcher in the old freak room on the main floor began missing his stock and never could catch the thief. Singer, the tallest of the giraffes, has a pen next to him, and when we kept watch one night we caught him just as he finished devouring $20 worth of crackerjack, 300 pocorn balls and ten gallons of lemonade. I thought it would kill him, but he never seemed the worst for it.

For a long time I was puzzled as to what the men in charge of the camels did with their brooms. Each day they asked for three or four, bringing back the handles of the old ones, which they said they found out in the passageway.

I investigated and caught the camels eating them up. As soon as the straw was devoured they threw the sticks away. We had to find a new place for the brooms after that.

THIS IS THE OLDEST CHURCH IN NORTH AMERICA.



The chapel of the Conception, in the City of Mexico, is the oldest house of worship on the North American continent By this it is meant that it was used longer for that purpose than any other building. It was erected in 1541 and has served almost continuously since that date as a place where daily devotions were held. This ancient building is still in a splendid state of preservation. It is situated in the Concepcion plaza or square. It is small but attractive architecturally, and never fails to interest antiquarians who visit the city. In the early days of its history a large convent was situated adjacent to it, but with the growth of the city, streets were cut through the convent buildings and nothing now remains to indicate that they were once a part of the church property. It is stated that for a century or more after its erection this chapel was the most fashionable church in the city. Its devout worshippers numbered many of the people of wealth and high social standing.

AMERICANS' GOOD WORK IN CUBA

From the New York Herald.

On his return from Cuba, after an investigation of the sanitary conditions in Havana and the military camps, Dr. Thomas Darlington, commissioner of health, has unstinted praise for the efficiency of the system installed by the American governor general and the military for the protection of health in the Cuban capital and in the camps of the United States soldiery.

While under the general direction and control of Governor General Magoon, the sanitary system, that is attracting so much attention because of the reforms accomplished under it, is directed immediately by Major J. R. Kean, chief surgeon.

"I went to Cuba to see what had been done in the way of sanitation," said Dr. Darlington, "and what I found was surprising to me, in view of the understanding we had had in this country about the vileness of conditions before the American occupancy. I was prepared for improvement, but what I found was almost perfection. In Camp Columbia, Marianao, Havana, over which Colonel Pitcher is the commanding officer, I found conditions that could not be excelled. Immaculateness, cleanliness, pervaded everything. There was no odor, and the absence of flies, one of the best indications of good sanitary conditions, was noticeable.

"In the tent camp of Guanahay, twenty miles further down the island, the same excellent conditions prevailed. There was not one case of illness in camp. Here Major Patrick was in command. The refuse is disposed of by means of a McCall incinerator, which I consider a marked advance over former methods. In the camps there are portable apparatus for distilling water and every other appliance that might improve the general sanitary conditions.

"In Havana, under Major Kean and Major Birmingham as advisers, with Dr. Finley, president of the Havana board of health, the sanitary conditions constitute an excellent illustration of what systematic work along scientific lines will accomplish. The streets are uniformly clean. I was there during the pre-Lenten carnival and was struck by the promptness with which the streets were cleaned after each day of the carnival. An enormous amount of litter in the form of confetti, paper and waste food was thrown into the streets every night during the festivities, and each morning found it all cleared away.

"There is no yellow fever whatever in Havana. That this is due to the scientific and persistent fight which has been made on the mosquito by the American authorities in the first instance, and by the Cubans under American advice later, there is no doubt. There had been a slight outcropping of the fever at Cienfuegos, but it had been stamped out prompty Neither did I find any malaria worth mentioning.

"The milk supply of Havana is all pasteurized before it is brought into the city, the reason for this being that there is no ice. One of the most peculiar facts I encountered was the complete absence of tuberculosis in Cuban cows. In his report to Henry Garnet, acting commissioner of health of the Republic of Cuba, H. F. Laine, veterinarian, asserted that in twenty years' experience he never found a tubercular native cow. What little of tuberculosis he had found in cattle was among imported stock.

"I attribute this to the fact that cattle on the island live altogether in the open air and are not confined closely in stables, as in colder climates. But, strangely enough, I found that the same arguments did not apply to human beings in Havana. In spite of the out of door life most of the people live and in spite of the absence of tuberculosis in cows from which the milk supply is obtained, the consumption rate in Havana is as great as in New York. I cannot account for this unless it is due to overcrowding in some quarters of the city.

"It is to be hoped sincerely that after the guiding hand of this country is removed from Cuban affairs the natives will maintain the high sanitary standard that has been established."

J. E. Olvis of Leavenworth drove his Stevens-Duryea car down to Kansas City last Thursday. He said the roads are rough, due to the recent rains.

According to statistics quoted by Consul General Richard Guenther of Frankfort, there were on January 1, 1907, about 25,000 passenger motor cars and 1,112 freight motor cars in Prussia. During the first half of 1907 the number of persons injured by passenger motor cars was 1,303, and in 1,070 cases of accident by these vehicles injury and loss to property occurred. It is to be noted that not quite 1 per cent of the accidents was caused by the freight motor cars.

The Prussian minister of public works and communications recently declared in the lower house that the government had under consideration the introduction of a uniform system of examination of chauffeurs. He also favored an increased liability of the motorists, and that the police authorities be empowered to withdraw the license from incompetent persons who run power vehicles.

Fletcher Cowherd, jr., expects to leave to-morrow night for West Chester county, New York, to attend the big Briarcliff races next Friday. These races are for stock cars only. The Briarcliff course is one of the finest in the world.

European cars would find no sale in this country were it not for the same spirit that makes it possible for a French exporter to buy wines in America, label them in France and resell to America at fancy prices, Henry Ford, designer of the Ford motor cars, says.

The Occupant in the Rear.

From Judge.

"Is there a young lady by the name of Evans living in this house?" inquired the strange woman of the timid-appearing man at the front door.

"Yes," returned he, with a sudden respectful and serious demeanor. "She occupies the rear of this house, so you'd best step round to the rear door and knock gently, ma'am."

"Ah, then, didn't you notice a sign on the door in the shape of a neat placard?" asked the man in tones of awe and admiration.

"Yes. The placard said 'Out.'"

"Then she's out. That's her sign, ma'am."

"Do you know when she will return?"

"No; we never know that, ma'am. In fact she comes and goes whenever she takes the notion, and wants none to interfere with her doings or habits in any way, shape or manner, ma'am."

"She's rather a mysterious and independent sort of a person, I take it?"

"Well, rather. You see, ma'am, she's our cook!"

All Indorse Alveolar Method

We continue to receive letters of testimony from satisfied patients regarding the excellence of the Alveolar teeth. As we have frequently said before, there is no better evidence in support of the Alveolar Method than that which comes from satisfied patients. In this advertisement we are going to submit letters of appreciation from patients residing in six different states, so that you can see how much in accord they are as regards work done for them in our offices.

In many cases these people traveled hundreds of miles to have the work done, and the fact that they are willing to testify as they have, after years of service, proves once more that the Alveolar Method is the greatest achievement of modern times in the science of dentistry. Read these letters

"Heartily Indorse Method."

Rockwell City, Ia., Feb. 18.

"G. Gordon Martin, Inc.—

Gentlemen: It affords me pleasure to testify to your method of replacing teeth. Having only 11 teeth left in both upper and lower jaws, which you replaced with a full set without plates, and for which I would not part unless I could get more, I can heartily indorse your method as being satisfactory in every respect, and if I had any more work to do I certainly would go nowhere else to have my work done, after having tried your method. Yours truly,
S. E. CARTER,
Agt. C., M. & St. P. Ry.,
Rockwell City, Ia."

"Give Perfect Satisfaction"

Normal College Conservatory of Music, Ypsilanti, Mich., Frederick H. Pease, Director.

"G. Gordon Martin, Inc.—

Gentlemen: The dental work you did for me last November consisted in putting in upper and lower teeth on one side WITHOUT PLATES. I am delighted with these teeth, and would not take four times as much as I paid for them. They give perfect satisfaction and comfort so far, and I feel that the day of plates is over. I am recommending your work to all my friends in need. Yours,
(Signed) FREDERICK H. PEASE."
April 6, 1908.

"Sincerest Gratitude For Work."

Deerfield, Wis., Feb. 15.

"G. Gordon Martin, Inc.—

Gentlemen: I wish to express to you my sincerest gratitude for the work that was done for me in your office. I came to you with an aggravated case of Pyorrhea, and only three or four teeth left in my mouth. Other dentists had told me that there was nothing that would save me from wearing plates. You cured my Pyorrhea absolutely and replaced the missing teeth for me in such a manner that I now feel better than I did when I had all my natural teeth. The work certainly is wonderful and I am ready at all times to show any of your skeptical patients what you did for me. With best wishes I remain, yours truly, A. A. BRICTSON."

"Teeth Admired by Friends."

Des Plaines, Ill., Feb. 18.

"G. Gordon Martin, Inc.—

Gentlemen: Before I came to your office I had only five teeth left in my lower jaw, two that were sound and the other three had to be treated.

You have now replaced all my lower teeth without a plate, and without suffering any pain whatever, and are as solid as if they had grown there.

They have been much admired by my friends, and I shall certainly recommend your Alveolar Method to any who are in need of artificial teeth.

It is such a pleasure not to have your lower teeth fall out of your mouth.

I also thank you for the polite attention given me. Very respectfully yours,
MRS. FRANK GARLAND,
Des Plaines, Ill."

"Cured My Pyorrhea."

GEO. P. WASHBURN & SON,
Architects and Superintendents,
Six years Architects for the State of Kansas.
Office 413 S. Main St.
Ottawa, Kas., Jan. 21.

"G. Gordon Martin, Inc.—

Gentlemen: I promised that if the set of teeth you furnished and treatment of my mouth proved satisfactory, you would hear from me favorably, but if not I would regret having ever consulted you. However, it gives me pleasure to say that you cured the dreaded disease, Pyorrhea, which I was suffering with, and after about three months' use of the teeth they have proven more satisfactory than I had ever hoped for. I can chew any food and keep my mouth clean. Respectfully yours,
(Signed) GEO. P. WASHBURN."

"Very Proud of Teeth."

Grand Forks, N. D., March 31.

"G. Gordon Martin, Inc.—

Gentlemen: In 1906 you did some work for me that I feel very proud of. The work was four teeth on each side of the upper half of my mouth without any plates or bridges, and I must say that it gives me perfect satisfaction in every particular. The work is just as good as the natural teeth.

Many ask about it and say it is the finest dental work they ever saw.

I have some more work to be done on the lower half of my mouth and I have decided to wait until I come back to your office, which will be about two years.

I would rather wait two years and have the work done right, as you did the other, than have my mouth tampered with by inexperienced dentists.

Hoping that this letter may be of some benefit to some sufferer, I remain, very truly,
(Signed) M. J. SMITH."

If you are suffering from the effects of poor dentistry, or have lost nearly all of your teeth through pyorrhea or other causes, and want a full set of teeth which will be in every way as serviceable and good looking as nature's teeth, then come to one of our offices for a free examination of your mouth. If you can't come, send for our book, "Alveolar Dentistry," which explains the method in detail. You will find it the most instructive book on the teeth ever written.

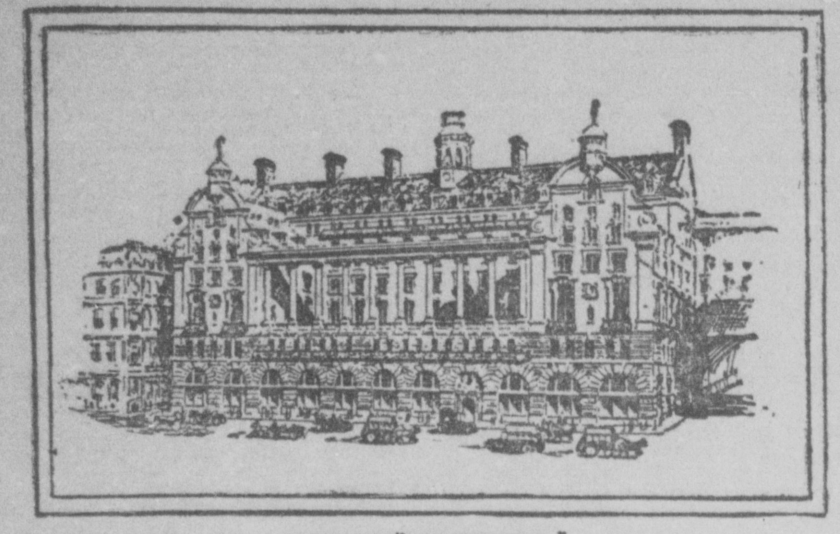
LONDON'S FINE NEW HOTEL

THE "PICCADILLY," LATEST 20TH CENTURY PALACE, TO OPEN IN MAY.

Magnificent Structure Stands on the Site of Old St. James's Hall—Classic Grace of the Exterior and the Majestic Facades—Decorated Rooms.

From the New York Herald's Paris Edition.

LONDON—Early in May London will have another magnificent hotel on perhaps the most central and important portion of two of the world's great thoroughfares—Piccadilly and Regent street. This new hotel, to be known as "The Piccadilly," covers an area of nearly three-quarters of an acre with entrances in both Piccadilly and Regent street. St. James's hall used to stand on the greater part of the site. Regent street is to be practically reconstructed, and when completed, according to the elevations designed by Mr. Norman Shaw, R. A., will be one of the finest as well as one of the most famous streets of either the Old World or the New. As it is the projectors of the new "Twentieth century palace" have taken the first step in giving practical shape to this great architectural restoration. Already the view of Regent street from Piccadilly Circus has been greatly changed from what it was even a few years ago. The ventilator studded roof of St. James's hall has disappeared and in its place there is the bold and picturesque outline of the dome and towers of "The Piccadilly."



FACADE OF "THE PICCADILLY."

The foundations of the hotel go forty feet beneath the city street level. This phenomenal depth gives "The Piccadilly" three extra floors, nonexistent as far as the knowledge of the public is concerned, but of great practical utility. It insures it, moreover, from all vibration arising from street traffic. Here, deftly hidden from view, are the Turkish and swimming baths, cellars and other offices. The baths can be reached by lifts from every part of the building.

In the basement is the grill room, with spacious lounges attached, including one for the special use of smokers. The grill room is eighty feet long by fifty-two feet wide. This is reached by staircases, from the Quadrant, Piccadilly and Piccadilly place. Two billiard rooms are also on this floor. The mezzanine floor between the basement and the ground floor is occupied by the lower portion of the shops next the Quadrant, Piccadilly, Air street and Piccadilly place.

The ground floor is reached by two fine entrances from the Quadrant and Piccadilly respectively. Here are the circular foyer next the Quadrant entrance, the large entrance hall adjoining Piccadilly and the grand lounge, which connects them. Four staircases lead to the upper part of the building. On the same level is the restaurant, eighty feet in length by fifty-two feet in width. The entresol is principally occupied by the apartments over the shops. On the first floor is the residental part of the hotel, and two fine dining rooms occupy a good position in its center. The larger of the two is forty-seven feet long and thirty-two feet wide, and each has a good reception room adjoining it. The second floor is devoted entirely to bedrooms and sitting rooms, with valets' rooms and bathrooms "en suite."

On the second floor is the roomy "terrace" possessing unrivaled capacities either as a winter garden or "al fresco" lounge. It is sure to become one of the distinctive features of the hotel. By the provision of the "terrace" the gloomy internal areas are largely dispensed with. Being open to the sky it enables light and sunshine to penetrate directly into the rooms overlooking Piccadilly. The upper floors from the third to the eighth are almost entirely given up to "en suite" sets of rooms. There is a private artesian well on the premises. The structural portion of the building has been carried out entirely on fire resisting principles.

On entering the hotel, the prevailing tone of the foyer and hall is a delicate French gray. The earlier Georgian carpets harmonize with the Louis XIV work of the adjoining lounge and restaurant, the one remarkable for its fountains, the other for its thousand lights. The decoration of the grill room suggests the galleries of the Palace of Versailles, and the designers of the billiard room have adopted Norman models.] The ladies' drawing room, over the Regent street porch, is decorated in varied tints of French gray and gold. Early Eighteenth century is the style which has been adopted for the large dining rooms and reception room on the first floor.

The residential side of hotel life is rapidly becoming more and more important. The suites of rooms in the new hotel have been decorated and furnished in almost every known variety of style. The visitor may choose old English, Adam, Chippendale, Sheraton or Empire, or the more modern school of English design. The rooms are adorned with well chosen pictures, while every room has a telephone and an electric clock. In the sitting rooms and bedrooms alike, the visitor will have a choice of using either the fireplaces or radiators as a source of heat.

Horse Fed by Clock.

From the Boston Post.

A merchant of Oldham, England, has devised a neat scheme to avoid getting up in the morning to feed his horse. He has had a feed box made with a clock attachment so that every morning when the horse gets hungry and begins to think about breakfast, and the merchant rolls over and begins to think how comfortable the bed is, the clock goes off with a whirr, the mechanism pulls the bottom out of a box suspended above the stall and down in the feed box comes a nicely apportioned feed for the animal.

The horse has got so used to the arrangement that whenever he hears the clock begin to whirr up in the loft he rises and gets ready for breakfast. The use of the automatic horse feeders is spreading to other lazy merchants of Oldham and is getting to be quite the thing.

THESE INDIANS WILL WORK.

The Navajoes Are Industrious When Denied Firewater.

The present-day Indian, if not considered a menace to society, is looked upon as a charge on the white man. We frequently hear that the only good Indian is a dead one—yet there are exceptions.

The tribe of Navajoes, whose reservation in New Mexico and Arizona borders on Southeastern Utah and Southwestern Colorado, numbers nearly 4,000 souls. They are pastoral people, herding sheep, goats and horses over their great arid ranges, and in a small way cultivating corn and other grains. The women are notable blanket weavers and the men are silversmiths of no mean ability.

Like all Indians, the besetting sin of the Navajoes is "monte," a Mexican card game. Give an Indian the price of his hire and he will quit work until it is gambled away. They are a polygamous people, have no religion and, like all aborigines, are superstitious, believing in all kinds of signs and workings of supernatural powers.

Although the Navajo reservation adjoins the Mesa Verde national park, where so many Cliff Dweller ruins are found, it is with difficulty that a Navajo can be induced to act as guide to the ruins. When one is found willing to show the way he cannot be persuaded to remain in the immediate vicinity when night comes on.

A curious tradition accounting perhaps for their abhorrence of the Cliff Dweller region, is that ages ago, when the Cliff Dwellers and their enemies were engaged in warfare, the former were driven into a mighty river and, drowning, the souls of the Cliff Dwellers were transmitted into the bodies of fishes. And from that time to this a Navajo cannot be induced to eat fish.

Another legend, no less curious, relates to the Ship rock. About thirty-five miles due west from Farmington, N. M., and within the borders of their reservation, situated in the midst of the desert, stands a famous formation called Ship rock, which looms to the height of 2,000 feet above the surrounding plain. It rises from the center of an immense and gradually sloping mound, which gives it a towering appearance, and its outlines can be seen for many miles.

A NAVAJO INDIAN SILVERSMITH AT WORK AT HIS OPEN-AIR FORGE.

The rock derives its name from its appearance when seen from a certain direction, whence it resembles a full rigged ship, stranded and petrified. The Indian legend is that in the dim past they had their habitation in a distant land beyond the great ocean, and that the rock was situated in their ancient country. Once upon a time the tribe, being closely pressed by its enemies and in danger of total annihilation, the survivors climbed into the cracks and crevices of the great rock and implored it for protection. The supplications were heard and shortly the rock began to move. It crossed innumerable wastes, gradually reached the ocean, which it crossed, traversed more deserts, and finally arrived at its present resting place.

From Judge.

"What's your time?" asked the old farmer of the brisk salesman.

"Twenty minutes after five. What can I do for you?"

"I want them pants," said the old farmer, leading the way to the window and pointing at a ticket marked, "Given away at 5:10."

It Would Crowd Him.

From Judge.

"Simpkins refuses to have his flat papered," reported the agent of the building.

"What's the matter now?" inquired the owner.

"He claims they haven't room enough as it is."

NATURE STOPS BEETLE RAVAGES.

From the New York Herald.

DEADWOOD, S. D.—After ruining a billion and a half feet of the choicest lumber in the Black hills and ravaging thousands of acres of the finest pine trees in the West, the bark beetle, which has robbed Uncle Sam's forestry division of 10 million dollars in ten years, has been put to rout by nature, working in her own way to accomplish what the scientists connected with the bureau could not do. Already the beetles are declining in numbers and the forest rangers now believe that within a few years the pest will have disappeared from the Black hills forests.

This beetle began an attack on the trees in the mountains of South Dakota ten years ago. Four years later the department at Washington took cognizance of the damage being done and set its foresters to work to overcome the pests. But the beetles continued to multiply just as if the scientists were working with them instead of against them. Section after section was devastated. The foresters were unable to stay the plague. But it is now discovered that the beetles are being destroyed in vast numbers by a second plague germinated by the beetles themselves.

The beetle is hatched from eggs laid by the parent beetle in the inner layer of the bark of the pine tree. The parent grooves the wood by boring a tunnel several inches long. When in the larva state the young beetle bores short galleries at right angles to the main gallery. They remain there a year, eating and growing, and their depredations kill the tree. Soon the beetles leave the dead tree and attack adjoining trees and the process of destruction continues.

When the government foresters discovered the damage being caused by the beetles they attempted to exterminate them. Sawmill men were brought in and large tracts were cut over, but without any appreciable effect on the beetle invasion. Woodpeckers by the thousands flocked into the forests. They ate millions of beetles, but the beetles seemed not to diminish in numbers. Large numbers of trees were peeled with special machinery. But that was not sufficient. The beetles had gained such headway that bark peelers, log cutters and woodpeckers seemed to have no effect.

But last year the foresters noticed that many trees attacked by the beetles were shedding their bark, effectually killing every beetle which happened to be in the tree at the time. They investigated and soon found that every tree from which the bark had fallen was covered with a grayish slime which worked between the wood and the bark, loosing the latter from the wood and causing the death of every young beetle which happened to be in its little gallery. In most cases the bark simply fell from the tree, leaving the wood bare and bringing the beetles down to earth.

The slime attacked only the trees that had died recently. In trees of that class the young beetles were always present in immense numbers. The foresters discovered that this slime spread rapidly to surrounding dying trees and always with the same effect on the beetles.

Transplanting the slime was attempted and found to give satisfactory results. A small quantity of the slime introduced between the bark and the wood of the dying tree was found to spread rapidly and soon the bark would fall—and the beetles in that tree would go with it.

The foresters ceased cutting and stripping and turned their attention to transplanting the slime to different sections of the areas which the beetles had attacked. Within a few months a serious decline in the number of new trees attacked by the beetles was noticed.

The forestry division now has the pest checked and believes that in another year the beetles will have disappeared from the Black Hills.

THE SOURCE OF MYSTERIOUS WISDOM—MADAM GEYSER! MEDIUM, CLAIRVOYANT, PSYCHIC COUNSELOR!

Besides the knowledge and sagacity of this wonderful woman other mediums are as untutored children.

Consulted and recommended by some of Kansas City's leading citizens—sees the past as in a mirror and the future through a glass. The accuracy with which she reads your past will dumfound you—her knowledge of what the future holds is supernatural and will guard you from misfortune, bringing health, wealth and happiness—NOTHING is unknown to her!

Do not fail to consult Madam Geyser before starting on a journey, entering business transactions, making investments or plighting your troth. Her advice in business matters, law suits and investments is unfailing!

Other mediums may imitate her, but none can help you as she can. With her aid the longings and desires of your heart can be accomplished. Separated husbands and wives and estranged lovers brought together, difficulties and distances notwithstanding—insures you the love of the one you love.

TAFT GAINS OF THE WEEK

THERE ARE NOW 162 UNCONTESTED DELEGATES FOR THE SECRETARY.

In Addition to These the Ohio Man Has Thirty-Four Contested Delegates —Fairbanks Is Next With Twenty-Six.

Instructed for Taft	162
Instructed for Taft, but contested	34
Instructed for Cannon	20
Instructed for Fairbanks	26
For other candidates	22
Total number delegates elected	264

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Conventions held this week brought the number of delegates elected to the Republican national convention to more than one-fourth the total number entitled to seats. With one-fourth of the delegates chosen, Secretary Taft has instructed for him and not contested approximately one-third enough votes to nominate him.

If the thirty-four delegates instructed for Taft who are being contested are seated, already the Secretary of War has secured, with only one-fourth the convention chosen, more than 40 per cent the number of delegates required to nominate him.

TWELVE CONTESTED DELEGATES.

In the week the Secretary gained twelve contested delegates. In Tennessee there were contesting delegates elected by the state convention. Both factions declared their intention of supporting Taft, but since the convention has acted the "allies" say that the Brownlow-Oliver delegates, if seated, will not vote for the Secretary of War.

In Rhode Island there were no instructions, and it is asserted that Senator Aldrich will dominate the delegation.

Speaker Cannon, by virtue of Illinois conventions, added fourteen delegates to his list, those from Illinois at large and from the Second, Third, Eleventh, Eighth and Nineteenth districts all instructed for him except those from the Second and Third districts. Secretary Taft added the New Mexico delegates, those from the Fourth and Second Tennessee, the Second and Fifth Virginia, and Sixth Kansas to his collection. These are not questioned, as both contestants in the Second and Fourth Tennessee districts are among Taft partisans. The friends of the War Secretary also claim the Third Tennessee and the Eighth Mississippi, both of which are contested. The Eighth Michigan, Congressman Fordney's district, which held an irregular convention prior to the issue of the call of the national Republican committee and instructed its delegates for Cannon, had to do the work over again last week, and chose uninstructed delegates.

A RECORD BREAKER IN TWO WAYS.

Already it is apparent that the Republican national convention of 1908 will be unusual in two respects. It will have the largest number of instructed delegates ever sent to a Republican convention and the largest number of contests. In each of the favorite son states there will be instructions, giving a total of 256 instructed delegates. Each of the Southern states will send instructed delegates and a majority of them two instructed delegations. To date the only state convention which has failed to instruct is Rhode Island, and the indications are that none of the New England states will send instructed delegates. Unless indications are at fault more than three-fourths of the delegates to the convention will be tied up with instructions.

The conventions scheduled for next week are:

The state convention of Indiana, which will swell Vice President Fairbanks's strength to thirty delegates; the First, Fourth, Twelfth and Fourteenth Illinois, which will give Speaker Cannon eight more, or a total of twenty-eight; the Tenth Virginia, Sixth Maryland and Porto Rico.

THESE HAVE CHOSEN TAFT.

Following are the state and district conventions which have held conventions to date with their presidential preferences:

For Taft, Not Contested—Oklahoma, state and districts, One, Two and Three; Missouri, state and districts One, Two, Three, Four, Five, Six, Seven, Eight, Nine, Ten and Fifteen; Philippine island, two delegates; Ohio, state and districts One, Two, Four, Five, Seven, Eight, Nine, Eleven, Twelve, Fifteen, Sixteen, Eighteen, Nineteen, Twenty, Twenty-one, Twenty-two; Tennessee, district One and Two; Michigan, Tenth district; Kansas, state and eight (all) congressional districts; North Carolina, Tenth district; Nebraska, state and six (all) congressional districts; Iowa, state and eleven (all) congressional districts; Maryland, Third and Fourth districts; Virginia, districts One, Two, Three, Five, Seven, Eight and Nine; New Mexico, two delegates.

Instructed for Taft, but Contested—Oklahoma, districts Four and Five; Florida, state and districts One and Two; Alabama, district Seven; Kentucky, district One; Mississippi, district Eight.

For Fairbanks, Instructed—Indiana, thirteen (all) districts.

For Cannon, Instructed—Illinois, state and districts Two, Three, Eleven, Eighteen, Nineteen, Twenty, Twenty-one, Twenty-three; South Carolina, district One (alleged to be irregular).

Not Committed Through Instructions or Public Expression—Alabama, districts Three and Six; Michigan, district Eight; Rhode Island, state and districts One and Two.

Total elected, 264.
Necessary to choice, 491.

MORE "BLIND BOGEY" GOLF.

Elm Ridge Players Battled With the Wind Again Yesterday.

It was "golf in a gale" again on the Elm Ridge links yesterday afternoon. The players are engaged in a second blind bogey handicap match. The high wind failed to discourage some of the thirty-seven entries. But each was given his choice of playing yesterday or waiting until to-day, and many decided to postpone their trial. The blind bogey this time is above 100 and only first and second places will be allowed for high scores. Third place will go to the low score man.

BLACK HANDS WRECK A HOME.

An Angola, N. Y., Man Refused to Deliver $5,000 as Ordered.

ANGOLA, N. Y., March 28.—Making good their threat that if $5,000 was not forthcoming they would blow up his home, members of the Black Hand placed a heavy charge of dynamite under the house of Sebastian Lograsso, about a mile west of Brant Center, and ignited it Wednesday night. The explosion did considerable damage to the house and the force of the concussion threw several members of the family from their beds.

To Plat a Kansas City, Kas., Tract.

A tract of land, containing six and one-half acres, formerly a part of the Kerr estate at Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, Kansas City, Kas., was sold recently for $2,500 an acre. The land has been platted as an addition to be known as "Faircrest." The purchasers, Howard & Taylor, a Kansas City, Kas., real estate firm, have divided it into lots and will put them on the market.

To Address the Single Tax Club.

John Z. White, lecturer for the Missouri Referendum league, will speak before the Single Tax club at the Midland hotel at 3 o'clock this afternoon. R. T. Snedicker, president of the club, will preside.

ABOUT POLICE COURT BONDS.

The Accusations of a Democratic Orator Proved False.

To The Star: I have attended several Democratic meetings lately where I heard certain declarations made concerning the record of Harry G. Kyle, police judge. Will you please answer these questions?

First—is it true, as a Democrtic orator said, that a negro named Smith had been accepted on bonds amounting to $60,000 during Judge Kyle's term of office?

Third—How much cash has been collected as compared with the preceding administration?

Fourth—What is the total amount in dollars and cents of the cases appealed?

EIGHTH WARD DEMOCRAT.

An examination of the police court records, always open to the public, shows that in the two years Judge Kyle has held office all bonds signed by men named Smith—both black and white Smiths—amount to exactly $465.

The total amount of fines assessed in the two years was $380,128.

Objects to County Home Payments.

The county court yesterday asked Charles W. German, county counselor, for an opinion as to whether it had the right to make payments of the work of the county home out of the general revenue fund. The court has made two such payments, but Judge George J. Dodd objected. He held that the counselor had already advised against such payments out of the general revenue.

INDEPENDENCE WATER IMPURE.

The Council Orders the Company to Better Conditions.

The water supply of Independence is declared unsafe and in need of purification, in the opinion of M. A. Barber of the chair of bacteriology and pathology of the University of Kansas, at Rosedale. Prof. Barber was recently employed by the Independence Examiner to make an examination of the water furnished by the Independence Water company to its customers in that city. The result of his analysis were given out yesterday. He says:

"You certainly are not getting good service from your water company, and you certainly have a right to expect water of better quality.

"I should say without hesitation that the city supply of Independence is unsafe and in need of correction aside from its obvious need of being freed from mud."

The Independence city council has instructed C. C. Madison, its legal adviser, to take steps to forfeit the franchise of the company unless the service is improved.

A Switch Engine Struck a Dining Car.

A switch engine ran into a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy dining car on a sidetrack at Cameron Junction, Mo., last night and wrecked it. John Herington, one of the waiters, was cut on the head and face. Two other negro waiters were slightly injured. The injured men were brought to Kansas City yesterday afternoon.

The Funeral of Harry Grenberg.

Funeral services for Harry Grenberg, the messenger boy who died yesterday from a revolver shot wound inflicted Thursday night by Joseph H. Quinlan, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the home, 1827 Oak street. Burial will be in Elmwood cemetery.

What Tom Johnson Said

When The Star was trying to defeat the extension of the Metropolitan's franchise early in 1906—an attempt, which, by the way, was eminently successful—it sent a reporter to Cleveland to interview Tom Johnson as to the value of the extension sought by the Street Car company. Mayor Johnson made this statement to The Star:

> "The company here would give 10 million dollars for ten years' extension of half its franchises that will expire within that time. Your council is made up of either knaves or fools if it extends that franchise with five-cent fares for less than 10 million dollars cash to the city.
>
> "Don't sell your birthright and your children's birthright for a mess of pottage; don't proclaim to the world that Kansas City is poverty-stricken and cannot build its own tunnel; don't save a few dirty dollars now and give millions in its place. The company is asking your city for a gift of 10 million dollars."

The Metropolitan now needs that franchise extension worse than it did in 1906. To get it is one of the reasons for its activity in this campaign.

THE ARMY.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The following army orders were issued to-day:

Second Lieutenants Fred Cruse, Third field artillery; James Marley, Walter Marley and Walter Merrill, First field artillery; Waldo Potter and Harry Pfeil, Fifth field artillery, will report to the board at Fort Riley for examination for promotion.

Second Lieutenant Archibald Hutchinson, Third infantry, will report to the board at Fort Leavenworth for examination for promotion.

First Lieutenant Alfred Hickox, Thirteenth infantry, is detailed for recruiting service at Lexington, Ky., to take effect May 1, relieving First Lieutenant Frederick Hershler, Fourth cavalry, who will join his troop.

Leave of absence for two months is granted First Lieutenant Frederick Hershler, Fourth cavalry.

AN OHIO SUICIDE AND MURDER.

SANDUSKY, O., March 28.—E. J. Glendenning, 45 years old, a traveling salesman for a Cleveland cloak concern, and Mrs. Katherine Hughes, 40 years old, were found dead to-day in the woman's rooms in an apartment house. A bullet hole behind Glendenning's right ear showed where the missile penetrated his skull. Mrs. Hughes, shot through one eye, was dead in a chair in front of a writing desk. Between the bodies lay a revolver with two chambers empty.

The tragedy was discovered by a sister of Mrs. Hughes, living in a flat below, when she entered the place to seek her sister after not having heard from her during the day. According to the police, the evidence indicated that Mrs. Hughes killed Glendenning and then committed suicide. Mrs. Hughes was a dressmaker and a widow.

CLEVELAND, O., March 28.—E. J. Glendenning, found dead in the apartments of Mrs. Katherine Hughes in Sandusky, traveled for the Freid Cloak company. He was married ten years ago and his widow and two children survive him. At his residence the wife was informed only that her husband had been accidentally shot. The dead man's alleged relations with other women were unknown by his relatives and intimate friends.

ARMOURDALE HIS HOME 38 YEARS

The Death of Joseph Cotlantey of 642 Lucile Avenue.

Joseph Cotlantey, 75 years old, died yesterday at his home, 642 Lucile avenue, Armourdale. He was one of the pioneer residents of Armourdale, having lived there thirty-eight years. He was a gardener and had lived alone since the death of his wife, twenty years ago. Funeral services will be held at the home of his niece, Mrs. Jacob Frisch of 640 Miami avenue, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Burial will be in Oak Grove cemetery.

A Beatrice, Neb., Man Dies Suddenly.

BEATRICE, NEB., March 28.—A. F. Thoman, proprietor of the Chicago Hide house here, died suddenly at his home in this city to-night of heart trouble. He had been a resident of Beatrice for seventeen years. He was 48 years old and leaves a widow and three children.

EXPLOSION IN A WYOMING MINE.

Twenty-One Persons May Have Been Killed in the Hanna Accident.

HANNA, WYO., March 28.—An explosion occurred in No. 1 mine of the Union Pacific Coal company here to-day. In the mine at the time were Mine Superintendent Briggs and twenty miners. It is not known whether any of them have escaped death. The mine is the same one in which a dust explosion killed nearly 200 miners in 1903.

AN ARCHBISHOP ON DIVORCE

Marriage Is a Sacrament, Ireland Tells His Church.

ST. PAUL, March 28.—Archbishop John Ireland of St. Paul has written a letter to the clergy and laity of this archdiocese on the subject of marriage and divorce. The letter will be read in all the churches of the archdiocese to-morrow morning. Its occasion is the recent encyclical on marriage issued by Pope Pius X.

The letter says in part:

> Christian marriage is a sacrament—an act permeated to its inmost core with divine activity, wrapped up into the region of divine life, under the control of new laws befitting its supernatural character. To the Christian the marriage contract can never be a mere natural engagement between man and woman, ruled by laws adopted by their own freedom; nor is it a mere social or civil contract, made binding only through civil enactments, lasting only so long as those enactments order it to last.
>
> In the teaching of Christ the marriage contract is indissoluble. Human laws cannot dissolve it. The church, in its spiritual supremacy, cannot tdissolve it.
>
> The cessation of the contract, the remarriage to another of husband or of wife, renders fatherless or motherless the children of the first marriage, dissipates in their souls the sanctity of the home. Divorce breaks up the home, which God had intended as the sanctuary of love and safety for husband and for wife, for son and for daughter. It undermines civil society, which in its vital construction is an organized aggregation of families, finding in the stability of the family its own stability; in the purity and integrity of the family its own purity and integrity.

SAINTS TO MEET THIS WEEK.

Preparations Being Made for Visitors in Independence This Week.

A large tent is being erected on the church yard of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints' church in Independence for the use of visitors and delegates to the general conference, which will convene in that city this week. Two years ago a permanent dining hall was built in the rear of the church for the purpose of serving meals to large gatherings.

The Pink of Perfection

Lincoln said, "God must have loved homely men, because he made so many of them."

He must also have loved beautiful flowers for the same reason. Doubtless he might have made a more perfect flower than the pink, but doubtless he never did.

Somehow the "Studebaker" buggies suggests the pink. They are attractive, stylish, and we have a price for every taste, whim or need. They are close to perfection—good stock, good workmanship and good finish—like the pink. Better drop in and take a look at our new rigs and Harness.

Stevens-Duryea Used Cars

A SECOND HAND 4-CYLINDER STEVENS-Duryea, thoroughly overhauled in our shop, is a much better purchase than any new car selling under $2,000. It is high grade, hence will outwear cheap cars two to one; it is light weight, insures low tire expense and mechanical repairs; it is patented unit construction and 3-point support, makes a car capable of negotiating the roughest roads and yet retaining a perfect alignment of bearings.

Every purchaser of a used Stevens-Duryea last year is more than satisfied. Ask for names.

We have these cars, turned in by customers who have bought larger cars from us, from $1,350 to $1,800, usually equipped with top and five lamps. Write or call.

PROPOSALS.

Sealed proposals will be received until 3:30 p. m., Tuesday, May 5, 1908, for the furnishing of all labor and material and the erection of a mechanical laboratory and power house at the State university, Lawrence, Kansas.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of the secretary of the university and at the office of John F. Stanton, state architect, in the capitol building at Topeka.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for three (3) per cent of the amount bid. Said check to be made payable to Edw. E. Brown, secretary, and the same shall be forfeited to the state in case the successful bidder fails for five days to enter into contract and furnish the required bonds as prescribed by law, after award of contract has been made.

The attention of bidders is called to chapter 114, Session Laws of 1891, with which they must comply. This is commonly known as the eight-hour law.

The right is reserved by the regents to reject any or all bids if it is deemed to be to the state's interest to do so.

Proposals will be presented under sealed covers, and shall be marked "Proposals," and addressed to Edward E. Brown, secretary, Lawrence, Kansas.

THE REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS.
EDWARD E. BROWN, Secretary.

Country Side

(Opposite Country Club.)

Twin South side additions. Only 25 MINUTES FROM 12TH AND WALNUT. NO TRANSFER. Straight south.

ROCKHILL PARK, so popularly and favorably known last year, has just been extended 3 blocks further north and even equals the beauties of the older part.

COUNTRY SIDE, adjoining Rockhill Park on the west, is the north part of the old Polo field and just east of the Country Club across Broadway Blvd.

Both tracts of land, naturally high, rolling and delightfully wooded and covered with blue grass, have been wonderfully transformed by picturesque winding drives, well paved and bordered by little stone walls and occasional parks and stone shelters. All something pleasing, different from the others.

All restricted $3,000 to $10,000 homes, well designed; no flats; surrounded by wealthy, acreage tracts, restricted, $25,000 to $50,000 residences.

On BROOKSIDE BLVD. and approached by new MILL CREEK PARKWAY from PENN VALLEY PARK.

Only $16.00 to $20.00 per ft. Easy terms and will treble in value.

Take Country Club car to our little white colonial office at end of line. Salesmen there every day and all day Sunday.

Pitrat's Swope Park Addition

I have just platted and will place on the market to-day 10 acres on the boulevard 5 blocks north of the park. 50 foot lots covered with bearing fruit trees will be sold during the next month at remarkably low prices, ranging from $6.00 to $12.00 a front foot.

This is the last acre tract on the boulevard and prices are steadily advancing in all areas of this popular thoroughfare.

Secure a lot before prices get beyond your reach. A delightful locality for a home and a safe place to invest your money. Terms adjusted to suit your income.

Get off the Swope cars at 59th street. I will be there all afternoon.
